Big Business Drives For Recovery, Resists Program of New Deal

Leaders Adopt Report, Submit It Today to Roosevelt.

Voluntary NRA Extension Urged

Made Work, 30-Hour Week Fought; Even Budget Asked.

By Felix Bruner.
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 19.—In language concilatory in tone, but nevertheless firm in its implications, business leaders tonight adopted a pronouncement of their recovery stand, varying in almost every detail with that of the Administration in Washington.

The statement, while setting forth ideas and theories that have been expected before, was significant in that it was the first pronouncement ever made by business as a whole, and in that it carried with it an added provision for an effective movement to make industry's stand felt.

After three days and nights of constant discussion, the conference adopted a platform, including the following essentials:

A declaration that new NRA legislation should be temporary, that continuation of codes should be voluntary on the part of industries, that maximum hours, minimum wages and child labor provisions of codes should be continued, that employers have the right to deal with employes collectively or individually. An appeal was made to employers not operating under codes to submit voluntarily to labor provisions.

A declaration that legislation should be enacted permitting voluntary codes covering fair competition, determined by conditions in individual industries, that administrative agencies may terminate codes, that members of an industry should be allowed to make binding agreements among themselves, subject to approval of the administrative agency.

Hit 30-Hour Week.

Opposition to "made work" relief, favoring by implication the dole or direct relief.

Delay of unemployment and old age pension legislation pending a thorough study.

Opposition to Federal attempts to control local labor relationships, and opposition to the 30-hour week.

Return to the gold standard.

Modification of the securities act.

Limitation of undue restrictions of agricultural production.

Encouragement of the flow of private capital into business.

Opposition to Government competition with business.

Extension of American foreign trade and establishment of world monetary standards.

The conference, composed of 90 of the Nation's leading industrialists and business men, provided for a continuing organization, composed of such leaders as Owen D. Young, John J. Raskob, heads of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, of the National Association of Manufacturers and others to "further the principles adopted at the conference."

The platform adopted by the conference will be presented to President Roosevelt tomorrow by C. B. Ames, chairman of the board of the Texas Co., and George Mead, president of the Mead Corporation of New York.

NRA Stirs Battle.

The NRA resolutions threatened for a time to disrupt the session, which opened here Monday at the call of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and of the National Manufacturers Association. Original plans were to conclude the meeting last night. This was changed later until this morning, and, because of differences of opinions, it was found necessary to continue the meeting until after 6 o'clock tonight.

The NRA and labor provisions were sent back by the general meetings to sub-committees for revision and then argued on the floor of the convention. All sessions were held behind carefully guarded doors, but it is understood that the arguments centered principally on the voluntary provisions of codes.

The recommended provisions would make the codes much less drastic than at present and would make the NRA largely a voluntary, temporary organization affecting only businesses definitely engaged in interstate commerce.

Continuing Committee.

The continuing committee set up by the conference would, according to provisions of the resolution, further the principles adopted at the conference, offer a means of crystalizing business opinions for cooperation and develop ways and

President Calls Banker 'Grand Person'; Heart Attack Fatal.

Atlanta, Dec. 19 (AP).—Eugene R. Black, head of the Federal Reserve Bank System during some of the most turbulent days of finance, and personal friend of President Roosevelt, died today at his home here.

Mr. Black, 61, had been indisposed three days. A physician was called last night after he complained of his illness. He was stricken with a heart attack at 4:30 a. m.

President Roosevelt drafted Mr. Black early in 1933 as Governor of the Federal Reserve Board from his post as governor of the Sixth Federal Reserve Bank here. He resigned the national position only recently to return to his old job.

As soon as his death became known, tributes came from President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and others high in official life at Washington and in leading banking circles of Wall street.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the First Baptist Church. Dr. Ellis A. Fuller, the pastor, will conduct the services. Burial will be in West View Cemetery.

After leaving the governorship of the Federal Reserve Board, Black maintained his close contact with the Administration and the President himself as a special liaison officer between the White House and the bankers.

Banking circles considered him one of the most conservative leaders in finance.

stock of monetary gold, valued at more than $3,000,000. Although he was against this step by the President, there was no break in the Atlanta banker and Mr. Roosevelt.

He originated legislation for direct loans to industry by reserve banks and the Reconstruction Corporation. He also was credited with aiding the writing of the law which now governs the stock exchanges and security issues.

Early in his administration as head of the reserve system, Gov. Black began a policy by which regular banks aided in building up

Mills Demands Return to Gold In 7-Ply Plan

Asks Level-Headed Policies to Stop 'Mad Dash' of 'Revolution.'

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury in the Hoover Administration, tonight demanded prompt return to the gold standard in the United States to check what he declared was the "Roosevelt revolution" and its mad dash toward the disasters of inflation.

"It is time the country woke up to the fact that the road we are traveling leads directly to progressive and uncontrolled inflation," Mills declared in an address before the Century Club of Scranton. "I do not say the Administration can not turn back; but unless there is a very definite change in public sentiment, it has loosed forces that will drive us irresistibly forward along the road we are now traveling—and at the end there's a precipice."

Fears "Blindfold."

He appealed for a return to the level-headed policies, as he sees them, of pre-Roosevelt days, declaring:

"Under the old order, we were warned in time. Under the new, with the whole automatic safety-device mechanism gone, we may be led over the precipice blindfolded.

"The crushing weight of the disaster will be borne by the entire Nation, but those least able will bear the heaviest burden. The first impact will be borne by the endowments of great public welfare institutions, the saving deposits of the poor and the life insurance policies of the foresighted and thrifty.

"It is perhaps too much to hope for, but no effort should be spared to persuade the Administration and Congress to adopt a fiscal and monetary program that will restore some of the checks which experience and public prudence call for, and will furnish a mighty impetus to recovery by removing the fear and uncertainty that now paralyze business and enterprise."

Mills attacked the tremendous powers given the Chief Executive and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in the opening years of the "New Deal," which he said gave the Secretary more power over the Nation's money than any man in the history of the country.

Budget Uneven Five Years.

He pointed out the budget had been out of balance for five years, and that the end of this huge spending over income was nowhere in sight.

The danger of Government subsidies to farmers and business from a political point of view were stressed by the former Treasury head.

Mills' program which he offered in conclusion included:

Industry Asks $173,754,000 From Reserve

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Further light on the need for credit by business and industry was shed yesterday by a meeting of the chairmen of the Industrial Advisory Committees of the Federal Reserve Banks in which they reported the receipt of 4,868 applications for loans totaling $173,754,000.

These applications were for direct loans from Federal Reserve banks under the Glass loans-for-industry act adopted by Congress last June. The period covered by the collective report of the chairmen was from June 19 to December 12.

Of the $173,[illegible]4,000 asked of the reserve banks, the Industrial Advisory Committees approved 1,055 applications for a total of $51,387,000. The Federal Reserve banks approved 893 of these applications for a total of $44,124,000. Of that sum the banks have advanced $10,976,000. The industrial committees still have before them applications calling for $39,260,000. At least one-third of that amount may be approved.

The significance of these figures flows from the fact that the reserve banks may make direct loans to industry only under exceptional circumstances when the applicant has been unable to obtain requisite financial assistance on a reasonable basis from commercial banks.

Large Figure a Surprise.

Moreover this is the first time it had been indicated that applications for direct loans from the reserve banks had reached so large a figure as $173,000,000. In addition, it was learned last night, the RFC has received applications for $130,000,000 in direct industrial loans and has approved loans totaling about $30,000,000, although that agency has disbursed only about $5,000,000.

Thus, since the Glass loans-for-industry act was passed there has been a formal demand for more than $300,000,000 for working capital which the borrowers found they could not obtain through the regular banking channels. Although many of these applications came from unsound credit risks, it is held by Dr. Jacob Viner, special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, that many business and industrial groups have been deterred even from asking for credit due to the rigid restrictions thrown by Congress around such loans.

The meeting of the chairmen of the Federal Reserve Industrial Committees came on the heels of a report by Dr. Viner to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau on credit conditions in the Chicago reserve district. In that report Dr. Viner and his associates found that there existed "a genuine unsatisfied demand for credit on the part of solvent borrowers," although the vol-

Troops Repel Mob In Battle at Trial

Tennessee Courthouse Burned After Guardsmen Kill Two of Crowd Attempting to Seize Accused; 500 More Troops Summoned.

Shelbyville, Tenn., Dec. 19 (AP).—Flames razed the Bedford County courthouse tonight after two members of a mob had died in a hail of machine gun bullets while trying to storm the building.

The object of the crowd's wrath was a colored man charged with assaulting a 14-year-old white girl. He was spirited out of the building, disguised as a National Guardsman, and taken to Nashville.

Gov. McAllister at Nashville tonight ordered 500 additional Guardsme nto Shelbyville. Adjt. Gen. J. H. Ballew immediately began issuing mobilization orders to various units by telephone. Some of the troops came from Chattanooga, and others from Nashville, Jackson and other points.

The courthouse, a brick structure about 75 years old, was gutted by the flames, which started in a gasoline-soaked office on the first floor of the left wing and swept through the entire building.

Firemen, already handicapped by limited equipment as only two hose lines were available, had their work further retarded by bands of men who used almost every conceivable device to prevent them bringing such equipment as they had into play.

One volunteer fireman said he and two companions were trying to connect a hose to extinguish a blaze which had broken out at the Dixie Hotel across the street from the court house.

Suddenly, he said, he heard a voice behind him saying, "Drop it or we'll drop you." They let the hose go and left the vicinity of the water plug immediately, he said.

Other groups cut off the water at the plugs as rapidly as it was turned on while some men rolled up the hoses again as fast as the firemen could unroll them.

Meanwhile the blaze, which at one time seemed likely to be brought under control, spread rapidly into all sections of the old, high-ceilinged building.

Dynamite, which had been thrown into the courthouse earlier in the day when the mob attacked the guardsmen, exploded but without causing any injury. The hundreds who watched the vast bonfire into which the old building had

U. S.-Britain Firm Against Japan Parity

Equality Wouldn't Give Security, Says Sir John Simon.

London, Dec. 19 (AP).—New evidence was given tonight that Great Britain and the United States stand steadfastly together against granting Japan naval parity as tri-power conversations here adjourned after two months of fruitless negotiations. In an address broadcast in England and rebroadcast in the United States, Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, said:

"Our view, the British view, is—and I think it is also the American view—that equality in security is not necessarily reached by an arrangement allowing the three powers equality in naval armaments."

American quarters earlier indicated their belief that it would be futile to call an open conference of the world's sea powers next year unless Japan surrenders her demand for equality.

Japan Ends Ratio.

Meanwhile, Japan today virtually put an end to the 1922 Washington Treaty, which assigned her the short end of the famed 5-5-3 ratio, the privy council in Tokyo unanimously recommending to Emperor Hirohito that the agreement be denounced.

The British foreign secretary, in his address, reviewed the two months of conversations here, expressed the "firm hope" that the conversations might be resumed "in two or three months' time," and declared the problem of naval limitations "important for the cause of security and world peace."

Pointing out that the London Treaty, which supplemented the Washington pact, will expire automatically at the end of 1936, while Japan's denunciation will render the Washington agreement inoperative at the same time, Sir John said "Japan is quite entitled" to denounce the treaty.

"Nobody has any right to complain of it," he said, "nor would it be right to take this action of Japan, serious as it is, too tragic, especially as there still remain two

Traffic War Here Unites All Forces

Hazen at 'Emergency' Parley Launches 11-Point Plan.

Police and traffic officials of Washington were organized by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday in a drive for rigid enforcement of traffic laws, in the hope of ending the record-breaking toll of deaths, which has reached 126 in the District so far this year.

Mr. Hazen, alarmed at the mounting list of fatalities, called an emergency conference early yesterday morning, and welded the Capital's forces into a single weapon for relentless war on carelessness, negligence and disregard of laws on the highways.

An 11-point program, designed to force motorists to observe the laws and the rights of pedestrians and others, was placed into effect by Mr. Hazen. The effects of these orders will be felt at once by reckless and careless drivers.

The New Orders.

The new orders follow:

A vigilance squad of motorcycle patrolmen to police selected traffic arteries at unannounced times and places to place charges against any motorists found violating traffic rules.

Police are directed to impound all automobiles in aggravated cases of parking violations where such acts are deemed to create traffic hazards. In such cases the cars will be towed to the nearest precinct stations.

Stiffer sentences for persons found guilty of driving while drunk will be urged by the corporation counsel.

Persons accused of more serious traffic violations will be arrested and taken to precinct stations instead of merely being given "tickets."

Names of persons whose driving permits have been suspended or revoked will be published.

Prosecutions, Regardless.

The corporation counsel will be directed to prosecute cases of traffic violations regardless of private settlements which may be made

Mercury Here Sinks to Freezing; Fair and Colder Predicted Today; Middle West Is Covered by Heavy Snow.

A steady, chilling downpour doused Washington yesterday as the mercury sank to a low of 32 degrees at 6 a. m.

Slickers, umbrellas and overshoes were the order of the day for Christmas shoppers, who sloshed through soaking streets and into crowded department stores. Yesterday's maximum was 50 degrees at 2 p. m.

Today will be fair and colder, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Meanwhile, a heavy snow covered the Middle West, giving promise of a widespread "white" Christmas. Chicago was covered by several inches of wet snow, and the snow belt girdled Illinois, Indiana and Missouri.

The Associated Press reported all airplane service out of Chicago suspended, but railroad traffic was normal. At Centralia, Ill., however, train service was disrupted and telephone service impaired. One death was attributed to the storm in Chicago, when an automobile skidded and smashed head on into a street car.

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP).—Snow, sleet and rain mingled in Maryland today, making highway traffic difficult and bringing death to one.

Edward Shoemaker, 42, of Baltimore, died on the ice-coated Philadelphia road near Joppa. His automobile skidded and turned sidewise. An approaching truck skidded into it, instantly killing Shoemaker.

Hagerstown had a 2-inch snow. Cumberland also had snow, min-

Roosevelt Threatens Public Power in N.Y. In War Upon Utilities

'Cheap, Unjust,' Says Financier of Probe Evidence.

(Associated Press.)

Senate munitions probers disclosed yesterday that the war-time income tax returns of several men prominent in the Nation's industries mobilization had been destroyed by the Internal Revenue Bureau, including those of Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board.

In addition it received evidence that many of those who held the responsibility of buying governmental supplies during that conflict were directly interested in companies producing such materials.

The disclosures caused a stir in more than one Government quarter. At the Treasury, however, a spokesman said the destruction of old income tax returns was authorized by law.

Some of the larger returns usually are retained, it was said officially, but no explanation was forthcoming on why Baruch's 1917 return was still on file after the next two years' returns had been destroyed.

Committee investigators reported that while Baruch's returns for 1917 before he assumed his chairmanship were on file at the bureau, those for 1918 and 1919 had been destroyed. Baruch, a persistent campaigner for "taking the profit out of war," is head of the Presidential committee recently appointed to study this problem.

Other missing returns were those of Robert S. Lovett, Daniel Willard, Benedict Crowell and Robert S. Brookings, all members of the War Industries Board, together with those of Gen. William Crozier, chief of ordnance at the outbreak of the war, and Lieut. Col. William Williams, of the Ordnance Department. Crowell also was Assistant Secretary of War.

Testimony was introduced that Lieut. Col. Williams had been a stockholder in the du Pont company and had signed contracts with the Delaware concern totaling almost $50,000,000. He also was interested in United States Steel, General Electric, Otis Elevator and Westinghouse, and a bondholder in United States Lead and Bethlehem Steel, it was said.

Gen. Crozier approved the original contract with the du Pont com-

Wealthy Wife Leaves Home Mysteriously

Mrs. Joseph H. Schaffner Is Feared Drowned or Kidnaped on Coast.

Carmel, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Eliot Boke Schaffner, 36, Chicago socialite, was strangely missing tonight—her trail leading a police-trained dog to the ocean shore and there ending.

Authorities said they were considering the possibility the wife of a director of the Chicago firm of Hart Schaffner & Marx was kidnaped, but the main quest was along the beach areas in the rough country about the Carmel artist colony.

Because, he said, "all indications" pointed to drowning, Sheriff Carl H. Abbott ordered out airplanes in an effort to locate the body should it be floating in the Monterey Bay area.

Kidnap Threat Hinted.

The report that a window screen had been found torn from Mrs. Schaffner's home gave rise to the possibility of a kidnaping. At the same time Sheriff Abbott was investigating a rumor that the missing matron's 2-year-old daughter, Eliot, and her maid were being guarded to prevent any chance of an abduction.

Mrs. Schaffner's cook, Bert Dorsy, colored, said the door through which the woman apparently left her home some time between midnight and dawn Tuesday had been opened from the inside.

Dorsy also told officers that his employer had not been "in her right mind" for the last two weeks and he believed she had wandered off.

Husband Goes to Scene.

The woman's husband, Joseph H. Schaffner, was hastening to Carmel by train from Wyoming, where bad weather forced down the plane in which he was speeding from Chicago to aid officers in the search.

Officers could not tell the age of the trail that the dog, a Doberman Pinscher, one of a pair brought here by plane from Berkeley, had followed to the beach. Many foot tracks were on the beach, but none could be distinguished as Mrs. Schaffner's.

The disappearance was discovered yesterday morning when a maid took her breakfast to her room. A check of Mrs. Schaffner's wardrobe disclosed that a pair of slippers and a fur coat were missing. It was believed she donned the overcoat over her night gown.

Mrs. Emma Oppy, a neighbor of Mrs. Schaffner, told the sheriff that she observed a woman, wearing an overcoat, walking feebly among the pine trees early yesterday.

Mrs. Schaffner returned Monday to her home, which is located on the southern tip of Carmel's artist colony, after a ten-day rest in a Monterey hospital.

Long Reaches Out to Seize Baton Rouge

Huey's Bill Would Create Louisiana 'D. C.' From Which He'd Rule.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 19 (AP).—Turning from his capture of the City of New Orleans to a new objective of political conquest, Senator Huey P. Long today announced plans to subjugate the Parish of East Baton Rouge, a citadel of his opposition, and make it his seat of "imperial" government through legislative act.

Louisiana's capital, which has repeatedly turned back Long's election assaults, was stunned by the Senator's announcement that he was going to make a miniature District of Columbia out of it and run its affairs by State statute.

The manifesto, which amounted to a war declaration by Louisiana's political potentate on the hostile governing authorities of East Baton Rouge Parish, a 500-square-mile area including the City of Baton Rouge, was delivered as a Senate committee perfunctorily approved 31 of the Senator's special session bills in 53 minutes.

There was some excitement in the State Senate during the afternoon when Joe Messina, Senator Long's personal attendant, threatened A. A. Fredericks, president of the Louisiana Normal College, who announced his resignation as a State Senator several months ago, with arrest if Fredericks did "not take his seat."

Messina, senate sergeant at arms, said he wired Fredericks to appear immediately or subject himself to being arrested and compelled to attend. The college president last August announced in writing that he had submitted his resignation to Gov. O. K. Allen.

A telegram to Fredericks went out as Senator Long's bills were advancing toward final passages with five seats vacant unless Fredericks showed up.

Fredericks quickly answered that he was coming at once.

Long appeared unwilling to take even the apparently remote chance of any of his bills failing to get through because of too few members present. Numerous Senate seats were unoccupied because of death, illness, election to other office, or announced resignation.

"A man who has a contract with the people can't resign," Long shouted.

Long revealed his "District of Columbia in Louisiana" plan by amending a bill to codify laws governing police juries, deliberative bodies which govern the State's 64 parishes.

His amendment gave him absolute control of the East Baton Rouge police jury through appointment by the Governor of 13 police jurors to equal the number elected by the people.

Since a few of the present 13 elected police jurors are friendly to Long, the appointed members

PWA May Furnish Fund of $15,000,000

Mayor Believes Path Is Opened for Project; Outlines Plans.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The Roosevelt Administration and the New York Fusion government of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia combined forces yesterday in a threat to build a publicly owned power system in New York City—the very heart of the private utility industry.

This latest blow was received with crushing effect in the Nation's financial capital. Utility stocks reeled to lower levels, while observers read into the President's action implications of far-reaching consequences.

The stage was set early in the day when Mr. Roosevelt answering questions at his semiweekly conference, said that the PWA stands ready to advance funds to New York—or any other city, for that matter—where a municipal plant is shown to be feasible.

LaGuardia Voices Confidence.

Mayor LaGuardia, his dark eyes flashing, emerged from the President's office a short while later. He proclaimed that plans were actively under way, that the President had demonstrated his cooperation, and that:

"Anybody, at any time, anywhere, can do a better job than the Insulls and the rest of those financiers."

Still later in the day, New York's buoyant little mayor left a conference with Secretary of Interior Ickes, the PWA administrator, with an announcement that he had received "reasonable assurances" that a loan to New York would be approved.

From Mr. Ickes, sitting in his shirt sleeves, came word that $15,000,000 had been mentioned as the cost of the undertaking.

"That's only the angostura in the cocktail," declared LaGuardia.

Two Courses Considered.

Asked how much the public power system then would involve, the mayor replied it all depends on which one of two courses the city follows.

"If they (the private utilities) behave," he went on, "like law-abiding citizens, we will follow one plan. Otherwise——."

Questioned as to the "otherwise," Mr. LaGuardia explained that he meant the city might go into the power business by selling electricity direct to domestic consumers. This was the first intimation that the purpose of the proposed system would be other than to supply municipal and Federal needs.

Ickes Calls for Plans.

Mr. Ickes stated he told the New York mayor to work out his plans and submit them to the PWA "in regular order." He said it depended on the legal and financial set-up, but, when pressed, conceded that the plans under consideration are "among the preferred projects."

The PWA administrator explained, further, that the Federal and municipal plans are really separate, that the National Government may build its own plant or plants, while cooperating with the city administration. Rear Admiral Reuben E. Bakenhus, who took part in the White House conference, was delegated to prepare the Federal plans.

From other sources it was learned that the Government contemplates a plant located on Manhattan Island to service postoffices and other Federal buildings in the congested area. This would not disturb the present plant at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, which furnishes power there. The cost of the new plant would be between $3,000,000 and $3,500,000.

These evidences of a renewed drive for cheaper electricity had their genesis in a militant attitude at the White House. Observers were given the very definite impression that the President will demand a thoroughgoing housecleaning "or else——." Moreover, Congress soon will be in session, strengthening his hand.

Mr. Roosevelt answered a wide variety of questions, tending to confirm this construction, at his press conference.

He declared the New York matter is perfectly simple, involving only whether the city and Federal Government could generate their own requirements at less cost than buying power from private companies. Hence, when Maurice P. Davidson, New York utility commissioner, rejected the bids of nine companies on the grounds rates were "exorbitant," the President called officials to Washington to decide what to do.

Utility Charges Questioned.

In the recent visit of Floyd Carlisle, president of Niagara Hudson Power Co., the President learned that the Government was having its troubles with the New York power companies, too. A bill submitted in

Valued at $150,000.

Will Landers, Circuit Court clerk, set the value of the building at $150,000 and said a third of it, $50,000, was covered by insurance.

Several small fires were reported in houses around the square, but they were quickly put out without causing any important damage.

In addition to the two dead, the mob counted among its casualties at least seven other men wounded by National Guard bullets. Two were not expected to recover.

The mob thrice had been repulsed by tear gas and bullets in its savage but futile effort to reach E. K. Harris, as his trial got under way.

Authorities said the mob numbered between 300 and 500. The guardsmen were 111 strong.

Case Called Mistrial.

Harris' case was ended at 3 p. m., when Judge Coleman, after an hour's recess, declared a mistrial. He dismissed the jury, which had been chosen only a short time before. Harris, taken from court disguised as a National Guardsman wearing a gas mask, was rushed to Nashville by automobile.

Shortly afterward the National Guardsmen and officers marched from the courthouse. The angry mob hurled insults and stones as the troops filed by. At the edge of town the militiamen set up an encampment of shelter tents to await possible further action.

With Harris gone and the troops withdrawn from the courthouse, the mob turned its attention first to four abandoned troop trucks. These were turned over and ignited about dusk. Flames shot high and the cars were destroyed.

Shots Fired in Air.

Groups of men wandered through the streets shooting random shots into the air, hurling threats and imprecations and discussing concerted action against the town's colored quarters.

All killed and injured were local white men.

The dead:

An unidentified white man.

Dying:

Pat Lewis, reported by his friends to be a relative of the girl involved in the case, shot through the head.

Wounded:

Mead Jones, shot in the hand and feet and bayoneted in the feet; condition serious.

Everett Patterson, shot in the leg.

Herschel Neely. Minor gunshot wounds.

W. M. Clayman, bayonet wound in the side.

James Bledsoe, shot in the feet.

Suffer from Gas.

Other less seriously wounded men were not identified and a few members of the mob and bystanders suffered severely from tear gas.

At the Bedford County Hospital Dr. James L. Morton, superintendent, and his staff were busy amid groans of wounded men.

"Lawes is dying right now," he said, "Gilbert Freeman, too, and we may lose Mead Jones. Raleigh Edwards is dead, and another dead man was left on our porch a few minutes and then taken away before we could get to him. I don't know who he could have been."

FERA Employes Join NRA Lodge in Protest

The FERA Lodge, No. 139, of the American Federation of Government Employes, has lined up with the NRA Lodge in protesting the "autocratic and despotic" manner in which the protesters say Federation President E. Claude Babcock has ordered the suspension of the latter.

In a resolution adopted Monday night and read to the NRA Lodge at the Hamilton Hotel Tuesday night, the FERA Lodge also indorsed the suspended group's minority report on the recent federation convention.

Five officers of the Southeast Civic League are serving for a fifth term, including Benjamin T. Montgomery, president; William A. Queenan, vice president; Mrs. Blanche C. Knorl, executive secretary; James Coleman, financial secretary, and William Marshall, treasurer.

At an election Monday night at the Giddings School, Fourth and G streets southeast, Charles Maxon also was chosen chaplain.

Between You and Me

Farley's Three-Way Status; Magill's Utility Attack; Japanese And Naval Parity.

By Raymond Clapper

TALK about the three-way status of Postmaster General Farley is up again.

After the White House blast last winter, most members of the Democratic national committee who also had received Federal appointments gave up one job or the other. Mr. Farley, however, still performs in three rings simultaneously as Postmaster General, chairman of the Democratic national committee and New York State Democratic chairman.

Senator George Norris recently spoke his mind on the subject of one man holding three jobs in a period of great unemployment, and some regular Republican Senators have plans for a systematic prodding campaign when Congress meets. They have no taste yet for tearing into anyone as popular as Mr. Roosevelt, but so long as Genial Jim juggles three jobs at one time they have an object into which they can sink their teeth fearlessly.

That, incidentally, is the one reason why Mr. Roosevelt is reluctant to disturb the status quo. Furthermore it doesn't worry Postmaster General Farley. He is delighted to be the football for the quarter back. Another matter is engaging his attention—the possibility of being the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York in 1936. The necessity of getting himself set for that leads some close to the Administration to expect a break soon concerning his status, but apparently they don't know just how Mr. Farley will solve his personal spread-the-work problem.

The latest attack on the Administration's public utility policy comes from Dr. Hugh S. Magill, of Chicago, the father of a recent New Deal official, Roswell Magill, special tax adviser to Secretary Morgenthau until he resigned to resume teaching a few weeks ago.

Dr. Magill, as president of the American Federation of Utility Investors, is denouncing the Administration roughly for its TVA experiment and its attitude of the power issue generally.

The action of the Japanese privy council in moving to scrap the Washington Naval Limitations Treaty may provide a depressing prelude for the Christmas season but some here take consolation in the fact that the treaty continues in force for two years more.

During that time, they hope, an agreement can be reached between the naval powers which will prevent a wide-open race after 1936.

The prospect is not regarded as any too bright. Japan's insistence on parity with the United States and Great Britain has awakened France's pride, and she also is beginning to grow restive under the short end of the 5-5-3 ratio. That, in turn, throws the British out of kilter because, due to the fact that one of her principal lines of communication is through the Mediterranean, she always has insisted on a strength roughly equal to that of France and Italy combined. And as France goes up in the world, Mussolini's pride also rises. So it goes, in ever-widening circles.

Some here think the solution lies in international developments, which will throw less strain on individual navies as ridge-poles of national strength. Some such development may come out of the new neutrality policy this Government is working out. There is hope in some official quarters that a way will be found by which America's strength as a neutral can be used positively in cooperating with other nations in isolating an aggressor nation.

Chests of all loyal AAA officials are swelling out now at the end of the second crop year. One reason is that real progress has been made in the chief objectives, which were to cut down overproduction and increase farm income.

Drought helped reduce production, but AAA takes part of the credit. Some 40,500,000 acres were taken out of production, leaving the lowest producing acreage in 50 years. Field crops were 15 per cent below last year and 20 per cent below the 10-year average. The wheat crop was the smallest since 1890. Corn was 40 per cent below last year and 45 per cent below the five-year average. Cotton was 33 per cent under the five-year average.

An equally striking showing was made in boosting farm income. The value of farm crops went up $668,000,000 above last year. Figuring the actual cash taken in, including benefit payments from AAA, farmers have $1,000,000,000 more to spend than they did last year, all of it real money good at the store.

Then there's another reason the AAA men are feeling a bit chesty but they don't get as much credit for it. That is the 9-to-1 majority cast for continuing the Bankhead compulsory cotton control act.

That drastic curtailment measure was embraced last winter by Secretary Wallace with about as much enthusiasm as if it were a stray porcupine. He warned wheat farmers who were clamoring for the same kind of control to go easy and see how it worked out in the cotton belt before taking a similar leap. Much of the criticism of AAA in the last few months has centered around this act. The Administration was so disturbed over the possibility of its being repudiated in the recent referendum that on the eve of the vote, President Roosevelt announced that if the act were indorsed, every farmer growing less than two bales would be exempted. Looking back on the result it is apparent now that the cotton belt would have supported the Bankhead act even without that inducement to the small growers.

* * * *

Wallace still is noncommittal. But Chester Davis, administrator of AAA, when asked yesterday whether in view of the Bankhead referendum he was now in favor of the act, replied:

"Sometimes a child is not planned for and perhaps not wanted, but you grow to love it just the same."

In the spring of 1933, the late Eugene Black, then governor of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank, was called to Washington. He didn't know what was up but supposed some complaint was about to be made. He expected to stay only for a day and brought just one shirt with him.

As it turned out, he was made governor of the Federal Reserve Board and when he resigned some weeks ago to return to Atlanta, he remarked that he no longer had even the shirt.

One reason President Roosevelt has about dropped his idea of making a fireside radio talk next Sunday is that he had intended to discuss the electric power issue, for one thing. But it broke prematurely as a result of his conferences with utility executives in the last few days and Mayor LaGuardia's difficulty with New York companies over the sale of current to the city.

It might be considered unsporting to go to the country with his case in the middle of the battle.

There are some other reasons also. One is that he has put off the talk so long that to make it now might seem an affront to Congress, which is about to meet. Another is that everybody is fixing up electric trains and addressing Christmas cards to friends who were forgotten on the first mailing. Even the President of the United States can't compete with Santa Claus.

Deer and Man in Battle.

Olean, N. Y. (U.P.)—Jack Leahy had to fight for his life with a five-point buck deer in the woods near this city when the animal, instead of fleeing, attacked the man. Leahy was severely bruised, and it was feared he suffered several broken ribs. He finally drove the deer off by pounding on its head with a club.

Truce in Steel Fades in Rift On Union Rules

(Associated Press.)

Chances for a truce between the steel industry and its union labor appeared slim yesterday, despite President Roosevelt's new expression of hope for an accord. Union leaders were determined to press for the "majority rule," to which they considered they were entitled by law.

Leading employer interests in the industry, however, were described as "determined to preserve" what they contend is the right of any individual employe or any group of employes to bargain with employers, regardless of the organization chosen by the majority of the employes to represent them.

Mr. Roosevelt, at his press conference, again expressed hope that the industry and the union could see their way clear to accept the armistice proposed by the steel labor board.

Follows Taylor Proposal.

Although the terms of that truce were not disclosed, it was reported to follow closely a peace proposal advanced by Myron Taylor, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation.

Taylor was said by one authority, who declined to be quoted, to have suggested that his company recognize union shop committees; that the union give up its demands for employe elections and "majority rule," and that disputes be settled by steel board arbitration.

If that proposal was accepted, the steel mill employe could affiliate with either the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, an American Federation of Labor unit, or the "inside" unions set up in nearly every plant in the industry. Each union then could bargain for wages and hours for its own members.

Objections of Unions.

Union officials say that would give the employers on opportunity to play one union against another. The union men point to the decision of the National Labor Relations Board holding that the union representing the majority of employes in any voting unit should represent all the employes in that unit in bargaining on wages and hours. That decision is now being contested in the Federal courts.

If President Roosevelt backed recognition of both types of unions at his conference Tuesday with worker representatives and the industry, it would be the second time he took that position. He approved the settlement of the threatened auto strike last spring, calling for proportional representation of different unions in dealing with the manufacturers.

A court battle on the steel situation almost inevitably will result if the union continues to reject the industry's truce offers.

'A Good Soldier,' Says Roosevelt

News of the death in Atlanta of Eugene R. Black, former Federal Reserve Board governor, inspired numerous expressions of regret yesterday in official Washington.

President Roosevelt was conducting a press conference when he learned of the fatal illness. He eulogized Mr. Black as "a grand person" and said he displayed the qualities of "a good soldier" while closely allied with the New Deal.

Morgenthau Tribute.

Secretary Morgenthau was one of the first to offer his condolences.

"In directing with wisdom and judgment the Federal Reserve system during a period of severe stress and uncertainty," the Secretary commented, "he performed services to the Nation which will be long remembered and appreciated.

"I am greatly grieved to learn of the death of my very good friend, Eugene Black. I have long held him in high esteem and counted it a privilege and an honor to work in close association with him during his term as governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

"His affability and unfailing good will endeared him to all who were associated with him."

Another tribute came from Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post and Mr. Black's predecessor as Federal Reserve Board governor. Mr. Meyer said:

"The passing of Gov. Black is greatly to be deplored. During a contact over a period of many years and through close association during two and a half years in the Federal Reserve system, I learned to admire Gov. Black personally and to esteem him highly.

"He had a friendly interest in people and great loyalty to his friends. He was devoted to his work and discharged his duties with a strong feeling of responsibility to the public interest. He had a quick comprehension and unusual facility for expressing himself clearly in discussion, and could always be counted upon to give whole-hearted cooperation in carrying out a program decided upon by any organization of which he was a part.

"He carried a great load of work during the year and more that he held the governorship of the Federal Reserve Board. During that time, and since, he was profoundly moved by a realization that the success of the recovery program depended to a considerable extent upon bringing about better understanding between the banking organization of the country and the Government."

James A. Farley, Postmaster General and Democratic national committee chairman, said:

"I was shocked to learn of the sudden death of Hon. Eugene Black, governor of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank and former governor of the Federal Reserve Bank Board.

"In his passing the country has lost an able and patriotic public servant and I have lost a good personal friend.

"High Order of Service."

"Mr. Black's service as head of the Federal Reserve system was of such a high order that it attracted favorable attention not only throughout the United States, but throughout the world."

Mr. Black headed the Reserve Board from May, 1933, to August 15, last.

Kemmerer Assails 'Inflation's' Growth

New York, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—The United States is already knee-deep in inflation and getting in deeper every day, Dr. E. W. Kemmerer, princeton economist, said in a speech prepared for delivery tonight.

Kemmerer said Government monetary uncertainity has forced banks to absorb Government loans. Nearly 60 per cent of the bank holdings now are in Government securities. This situation, he said, constitutes inflation.

The danger of the national debt "is not so much its present size—it is the rate at which it is growing," he said.

Truck Driver Released On Bond in Fatality

George P. Gauvreau, of Washington, held in the Fairfax Jail on a charge of manslaughter as a result of an accident near Fairfax, has been released on a $3,000 bond.

Gauvreau was driver of a truck owned by the Washington Tobacco Co., which was in a collision with an automobile operated by Charles McKay, of Washington. McKay was killed and Miss Florence McChesney, a nurse, of Washington, was seriously injured. Date for the hearing in the case awaits Miss McChesney's recovery.

Public Power In N. Y. Backed By Roosevelt

July is still being held up, he said, to permit an investigation of alleged excessive charges.

The survey was only local, he explained, and did not involve other areas, including Washington. There was some talk about giving up the Federal plant which supplies the Navy station here, he said, but it was kept. Private rates in Washington, he commented, are about the same as the cost of supplying electricity.

Asked if he considered the attitude of Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Edison Electric Institute, as representative of the whole industry, Mr. Roosevelt said that he did not. The New York utilities involved are members of the Edison Institute. The latter has threatened an attack on the constitutionality of the TVA.

Stock Issue Clarified.

Mr. Roosevelt feels that the water in utility securities is confined almost entirely to the stocks and bonds of holding companies, and that operating companies, for the most part, have a clean bill of health. He considers, therefore, that it is an error to lump all utility securities together, beclouding the issue.

This was done by Mr. McCarter in his memorial to the President, in which the New Jersey power magnate pointed out that insurance companies and savings banks own several billions in utility securities. Most of their holdings are as sound as a Government bond, the President feels, since their utility investments are limited mostly to operating companies.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt believes that the railroads are virtually free from what he regards as the holding company evil. The trouble with the carriers, he feels, has its basis in their failure to set up sinking funds to retire indebtedness. The railroads now are groaning under the weight of millions spent in original investment.

LaGuardia Cites Costs.

On his visit to the White House, Mr. LaGuardia noted that Washington is paying an average of 2.2 cents per kilowatt hour for electricity. This he attributed to "the threat of a municipal plant."

"I am paying 5.84 for street lighting in New York, and the local domestic rate is 6.1," he said. "I have found that among the other debris to be waded through the city was subsidizing the utility companies between $1,750,000 and $2,000,000 a year.

"Take their same methods of accountancy, financing, operation and demand for return on investments, and water in New York would cost 5 cents a gallon."

Plans Made for Plant.

Attending the White House conference, besides LaGuardia, were Basil Manly, vice chairman of the Federal Power Commission, Mr. Davidson, and Admiral Bakenhus. After it was over Mr. LaGuardia made a short statement, which he said bore the President's approval. It ended with this sentence:

"The subject will be thoroughly studied and plans formulated for the construction of a plant to serve public purposes and also the first network for a State distribution system."

Presumably, he was referring to the proposed power development of the St. Lawrence River, which would furnish New York with much of its power. The President, incidentally, remarked that this is the last large-scale "yardstick" the Administration now has in mind. It would serve in the fourth "corner" of the Nation, "yardsticks" now being under way in the Tennessee Valley, in the South; at Boulder Dam, in the Southwest, and in the Columbia River basin, in the Northwest.

Skeptical of Rate Cut.

Asked if he thought the New York companies would come down on their rates, now that the "threat" of a private plant is established, Mr. LaGuardia replied:

"I have heard of these promises for a long time. I am not so young and hopeful as I used to be. When a mayor can come to the White House," continued the mayor who was opposed by the Administration only a year ago, "and get help like this, I tell you there's hope for the American people."

New York City's power bill is $14,000,000 a year, he said, adding truculently:

"I believe the action of the utility companies in New York in applying for higher rates today will do them no good."

This militancy drew a quick echo from the office of Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska Progressive, on Capitol Hill.

"I don't think this is a bluff, either," declared the father of TVA. "I think the President really means what he says."

Jurors Speed Franklin Probe Of Liquor Ring

25 Witnesses Heard and Panel Aims to Complete Evidence This Week.

Harrisonburg, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Speeding up their investigation of the Franklin County liquor conspiracy in order to get all the evidence this week, the Federal grand jury today heard 25 witnesses.

United States Attorney Sterling Hutcheson, of the Eastern District, who is presenting the evidence for Joseph C. Chitwood, Western District attorney, indicated tonight every effort will be made to hear all the witnesses this week and then recess until after New Year's, when the grand jury will reconvene to draft its report.

More witnesses were heard today than during any of the 18 preceding days. Each man remained only a short time in the jury room, indicating his testimony was largely corroborative.

Today's witnesses bring the total to nearly 200. Federal agents indicated no more will be subpenaed unless there are new developments during the next two days.

Those who testified today included John and William Richards, of Rocky Mount, brothers of Deputy Sheriff T. J. Richards who was mysteriously shot last October while taking a prisoner to jail. His prisoner also was slain. So far as known here, no arrests have been made in the Richards slaying. His widow, sister and son testified earlier in the week. Federal agents will not say whether they think the shooting of Richards was connected with the alleged conspiracy to violate the national revenue laws by illicit traffic in liquor.

Others who testified today were Sergt. Harry Lee, State highway patrolman stationed at Rocky Mount; J. R. Eggleston, R. J. Foster, Andrew Edmundson, R. C. and Irving Bennett, C. R. Harrison, R. T. Gilliams, C. M. Tyre, Boyd Bowman, Will Moody, C. B. Burner, D. B. Young, Harry Worley and Ballard Edwards, all of Franklin County.

Three Injured in Crash On Slippery Highway

Woodstock, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—Irving Plauger and Wounder Plauger, of Shenandoah County, and a Mr. Vance, of Alexandria, were painfully injured at Fishers Hill, 6 miles north of here, early this morning, when their car crashed into a truck of the Novick Transportation Co., of Winchester, driven by Joe MacDonald.

The car, owned and driven by Irving Plauger, was demolished, as both the truck and automobile were unable to check their speed because of the slippery highway.

years in which to try to arrive at a new agreement."

Although the official communique announcing the end of the conversations said that the United Kingdom, which initiated the parleys, would seek their resumption "as soon as the opportune moment arrives," an American spokesman said resumption would be useless unless Japan consented to continue the principles of the Washington treaty.

The entire future of naval limitation evolved at the 1923 Washington conference—which halted the three powers' swift post-war ship building and stabilized their navies at the then ratios—is up to Japan, this source asserted.

The American delegates, Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, who plan to sail for home late in December, strongly hinted that they do not want to return to London except for an open conference, and not even then unless the Japanese change their stand on the equality issue.

Inquiry Sifts Legion's Stand On Gold Basis

House Committee Turns to Charges 'Influence' Was Purchased.

(Associated Press.)

Evidence as to whether money might have been used to influence the 1933 American Legion Convention to indorse the gold standard was sought yesterday by the House committee studying un-American activities.

The committee, in executive session, turned from its probe of Communism to confer for more than two hours with Albert G. Christmas about money reportedly given by him to Gerald C. MacGuire. Christmas was identified by the committee as an attorney for Robert Sterling Clark, sewing machine manufacturer, now in Europe.

MacGuire, employe in a New York brokerage firm, also was interesting to the committee because of charges by Gen. Smedley D. Butler that MacQuire suggested the Marine become Fascist chief of the United States.

Linked to Legion Meeting.

MacGuire was described by the committee as having been interested in a "committee for a sound dollar" and to have been in Chicago when the legion indorsed the gold standard.

While the committee hearing proceeded at the Capitol, the American Federation of Labor downtown moved to scotch reports that the federation was interested in a call for a "national congress for unemployment and social insurance."

William Green, Federation president, said in a broadcast letter that this impression was a "grievous error" and that those who called the meeting were Communists "using the unemployment insurance issue for the purpose of gaining converts to their objectionable philosophy."

Christmas entered the House committee room during the morning to be asked about these assertions which the committee says MacGuire made:

That MacGuire received $3,500 from wealthy Robert Sterling Clark, sewing machnie magnate and Christmas' client, for work in connection with the committee for a sound dollar.

That Clark gave MacGuire $25,000 for the purchase of municipal bonds, although MacGuire did not talk with anyone about bonds and bought none.

That MacGuire returned most of the money to Christmas, although he had no receipts to show for it.

That Christmas gave $10,000 in cash to MacGuire at a luncheon in New York, and that although MacGuire deposited the money in a savings bank it was no longer there and he did not know what happened to it.

Memorial Planned By Maryland Bar

Service Set to Honor Ray, Digges and Shepherd.

Plans for memorial services for the late J. Enos Ray, chairman of the Maryland State Democratic central committee; the late Judge W. Mitchell Digges, chief judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit and president of the Maryland Bar Association, and the late Judge J. H. Shepherd, of Louisiana, who was active in county civic affairs here after his retirement, were commenced by the Prince Georges County Bar Association in a meeting in the Upper Marlboro courthouse Tuesday.

The group appointed a committee on circuit court rules, headed by George P. McCeny, of Laurel, and another on police court rules, headed by J. Wilson Ryon. A committee consisting of Caesar L. Aiello, chairman, and Walter L. Green and Albert Hassall will prepare for the next meeting, January 15, at the Beaver Dam Country Club.

Air Liner Destroyed; Five Escape in Blaze

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 19 (AP).—Five persons escaped injury early today when a Curtiss Condor sleeper plane of American Airlines was destroyed by fire as it taxied to the Buffalo airport administration building after landing, while en route from Newark to Chicago.

Only one motor of the ship, valued at $50,000, was saved. Some mail of the 320-pound cargo was burned. T. M. Brooks, station manager for American Airlines, said he believed one of the motors backfired, causing the blaze.

Older Federal Buildings Stay, President Says

Lack of Funds and Space Is Reason for Retention, He Explains.

President Roosevelt declared yesterday that the Federal Government undoubtedly will go ahead with its building program to provide more office space in the District, but that none of the construction for the next several years will be for replacement of outmoded structures.

Hence, the $2,000,000 appropriated for remodling the State, War and Navy Building will go unspent for some time at least. The old Postoffice Building will remain standing for the immediate future, although plans call for its ultimate destruction.

Two things influenced the President in deciding on this policy, he said. In the first place, the Government needs the money too badly for purposes other than replacing old buildings. Secondly, the Government is sorely pressed for office space.

Mr. Roosevelt said he did not yet know if the War Department would be the first to get a new building. But when this edifice is constructed, he said, it will be along the Mall and not on Pennsylvania avenue, as has been suggested in some quarters.

The President said he never had proposed that the Library of Congress be remodeled to conform to the Capitol and other Government buildings in the vicinity. He recalled a chance remark some time ago, however, when he told a companion he believed the library was not in keeping with its surroundings.

Asked further if he didn't believe some old buildings should be kept, as representative of the architecture of the day, he nodded his head in partial agreement. The State, War and Navy Building, he said, still holds a fascination for him, dating back to his days as Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

SENATOR JAMES J. DAVIS.

J. H. de Sibour's Easy Manner Puts Him in 'Dressiness' Race

Col. H. L. Roosevelt and Brig. Gen. Horton Also Win Nominations.

The man who makes an art of sartorial indifference entered the lists for the title of Washington's best dressed man yesterday.

Rather, he was entered, for J. H. de Sibour, Capital architect, knew nothing of such goings on, his name having been put up by an admiring contemporary who admitted to being one of those less fortunate males to whom tailored distinction is a very painful matter of heavily starched linen and precisely knotted cravat.

Mr. de Sibour, it should be understood, affects carelessness in his dress. That's what the man said. Studied carelessness, the fashion arbiters call it.

"As a boy he probably wouldn't wear a tie and disliked washing," the man said with a quick look in the mirror to see what, if anything, was happening to his own perfectly adjusted tie.

"Or, perhaps," he went on, "in his early youth Mr. de Sibour merely developed a dislike for the word 'dapper,' engendered possibly by association with people who dress like Jimmy Walker. In either case, his present mode of dressing may be said to reflect an early disposition to be rebellious about clothes. The result is a credit to the man's genius and a tribute to compromise."

The man said please not to use his name. Mr. de Sibour mightn't understand.

As sartorial judgments reached The Post from every quarter of the city and Alexandria, it was beginning to look as though people were forgetting all about Mr. Tugwell and maybe the Greater National Capital Committee should take the whole thing over.

In the first place, only one vote came in for the fashion famous Undersecretary of Agriculture and that from a fellow whose address is Route No. 1, Bethesda, and who killed a lot of hogs last year and probably shouldn't be counted.

In the second place, this entire affair began to take on the proportions of a civic project, and, as one of the native sons has written:

"The Greater National Capital Committee exalts, Nationwide, the beauty of the city's buildings and parks, why not the classy cut of its citizens' clothes?"

H. L. Roosevelt Nominated.

Why not, indeed? But in the meantime the hunt for the Capital's best-turned-out gentleman turns to the Navy Department to put Assistant Secretary Col. Henry L. Roosevelt in the running, then runs down to the Army in the next block and picks up Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, retired.

Gen. Horton, it develops, is a bachelor and very much in demand for leading cotillions. The lady who nominated him said she thought the way he wears those medals he won in France is "cute."

But it remained for Mrs. James J. Davis to take a slap, a rhetorical slap, of course, at people who go around saying a man's never a hero in his own home. She said she thought her husband, who is the senior Senator from Pennsylvania, is the best-dressed man in town!

"He never overdoes it," she explained. "He's always carefully dressed, but he doesn't look as though he'd spent all day doing it."

But what about Huey Long, Mrs. Davis? I thought he * * *"

"Hum. If you like that kind of dressing. I've seen Senator Long in a pink shirt, red necktie, lavender socks and a brown suit set off by a blue handkerchief."

STEWART—On Monday, December 17, 1934, at her residence, 1712 Q street northwest, LILLIE SEWALL, beloved wife of the late Col. William F. Stewart, in the seventy-eighth year of her age. She is survived by a son, Maj. Frederick F. Stewart, and a daughter, Florence P. Stewart, of this city, and two grandchildren, who are the children of the late Col. William F. Stewart, jr.

Services (private) at her late residence on Thursday, December 20, at 2 p. m., followed by interment in Arlington National Cemetery. Please omit flowers.

SULLIVAN—On Tuesday, December 18, 1934, at George Washington University Hospital, PATRICK JOSEPH, beloved husband of Margaret W. Sullivan.

Funeral from his late residence, 1412 Twenty-ninth street northwest, on Friday, December 21, at 9 a. m.; thence to Holy Trinity Church, Thirty-sixth and N streets northwest, where mass will be offered at 9:30 o'clock for the repose of his soul. Relatives and friends invited. Interment Mount Olivet Cemetery. Services by the W. W. Chambers Co.

VAN NESS—Suddenly, on Tuesday December 18, 1934, at his residence, 1323 Maryland avenue northeast, HERBERT M., beloved husband of Mary A. Van Ness (nee Sexton).

Funeral from his late residence on Friday, December 21, at 9 a. m., thence to the Holy Name Church, where mass will be said at 9:30 a. m. Relatives and friends invited to attend. Interment at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Cornell Man to Head University Farm Unit

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—The post at West Virginia University experiment farm, Kearneysville, near here, which was vacated when Horticulturist Leif Verner left to head Idaho University's horticultural department, will be filled by L. P. Baetjer, of the horticultural staff of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Mr. Baetjer, who has been on the Cornell staff the last five years, is well known among the New York State growers. He is expected to start his work at the Kearneysville farm about February 1.

New Sea Service Costs Line $10,000

Baltimore Mail Company Has Postal Pay Cut.

The Baltimore Mail Line's establishment of a direct Baltimore-Norfolk-London fast freight service will cost it a cut of $10,000 a year in the revenue it gets from the Postoffice Department for carrying mail, the Associated Press reports.

The line, under authority it obtained yesterday from the Shipping Beard, plans to make London instead of Havre a port of call on alternate eastbound sailings of its vessels.

The Postoffice Department, in agreeing to the change in schedule, said its payments to the line for mail transportation on the alternate trips would be reduced because of elimination of the Havre stop.

U. S. Obtains Land For New Building

Amid the details of realty transactions, what seems to be the first step in the Northwest Triangle program of Federal buildings gleamed forth yesterday.

The United States purchased 20,000 square feet of land at Eighteenth and D streets northwest for about $300,000. Topping the land at present is the brick building of the Frazee-Potomac Laundry Co., which will be razed when the United States starts construction of the new Department of Interior Building in 1935. Plans already are being prepared.

Congress Waits Personal Word From President

Roosevelt to Keep Plans Secret Until He Gives First Message.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt determined yesterday to withhold all hint of this winter's plans until Congress convenes, and, simultaneously, there were signs he would seek a psychological advantage by delivering his first message in person.

At the Capitol it was disclosed that preparations are being made to receive the President either on the first or second day of Congress. The Seventy-Fourth Congress convenes two weeks from tomorrow.

As was the case when Congress opened its last session, Mr. Roosevelt's forthcoming message probably will deal with principles and policies, with specific recommendations to come later. He found last session that a series of separate proposals for legislation kept the opposition off balance and allowed changes in strategy to meet developments.

The program on social relief, public works and budgetary legislation yesterday was virtually complete, but the President was guarding its details closely.

At the White House he indicated he would not reveal the scheme in a projected radio fireside chat, but would save that for the new Congress.

Pending receipt of the President's legislative views, Senate and House leaders are concentrating on ascertaining the views of new members on the bonus, unemployment insurance and old-age pensions.

Republicans generally plan to throw their strength to the Democratic bloc advocating cash payment of the bonus.

The President's political advisors consider the bonus the major problem in the coming session, since so many Democrats are pledged to support it.

Senator Pittman Buys Options on Gold Mines

Bakersfield, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP). Agreements filed at the county recorder's office today disclosed that Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, has taken options to purchase gold mining claims adjoining the famous Silver Queen Mine at Mojave at a total price of $149,000.

The Senator has been active for several weeks investigating gold and silver ore on mining property in the Mojave region.

AMELIA CONTI.

Amelia Conti Gets Post With Opera

Named First Harpist of the Metropolitan.

Amelia Conti, distinguished harpist, who is well known in Washington as founder and president of the International Art Forum, has been engaged as first harpist of the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, succeeding the late Carlo Sodero, it was learned yesterday.

Mme. Conti's career, a long and colorful one, includes many years of playing under such eminent conductors as Toscanini, Weingartner, Serafin, Perosi, Mascagni, Saint-Saens, Ricahrd Strauss, Montemezzi, Panizza, Marinuzzi, Campanini, Stock, Polacco and Hadley. She first came to this country in 1906 with the original San Carlo Opera Company, which was directed by her father, Arnaldo Conti.

Later Signor Conti founded and directed the original Boston Opera Company. After several years with this organization, Mme. Conti accepted the position of first harpist with the Chicago Civic Opera, directed by Campanini, where she remained for 15 seasons. Following her resignation, she played for one season with the St. Louis Symphony, and then came to Washington, where she organized the International Art Forum, which is designed to aid worthy artists and students in making careers.

NRA Launches Court Actions On Discharges

Firms Cited for 'Firing' Workers Who Told of Code Evasions.

An intensive drive against employers who discharged workers for protesting to NRA over code violations was begun yesterday by Blue Eagle governors.

Sol. A. Rosenblatt, recovery compliance director, announced institution of criminal proceedings against two Illinois firms and revealed several other similar complaints would be investigated. He warned that retaliation by employers would not be countenanced.

Criminal action, he added, has been taken against Hamilton-Ross, Inc., a Chicago member of the portable lamp and shade industry and its officers, Irvin Levison and Alica Hamilton-Ross. A civil suit also has been filed against Hamilton-Ross, Inc.

$500 a Day Fine.

Only criminal action has been taken in another case, which originated in Springfield, Ill., and included as defendants the Moline Iron Works and L. E. Nutt.

Each defendant found guilty, Rosenblatt reported, will be subject to a fine of $500 for each day's violation and six months' imprisonment.

The official pointed out NRA never reveals the names of employes who complain against failure of employers to abide by code wage and hour requirements. He declared all such protests would be thoroughly sifted to prevent retaliation by employers from becoming widespread.

Banned By President.

Discrimination against employes who submit information concerning code violations to NRA was banned in an executive order by President Roosevelt. The Illinois prosecutions are the first to result from the practice.

Rosenblatt reported wage restitutions by employers who failed to meet code requirements totaled $1,468,000 between June 16, last, and December 8, exclusive of restitutions obtained by codeauthorities.

He announced a new NRA policy will result in prompt prosecution of all firms whose Blue Eagle are removed for past offenses. Fifty-six insignias have been removed this month.

Marylander Convicted Of $276 Bank Holdup

Towson, Md., Dec. 19 (AP).—Carlisle Osborne, 23, of Bel Air, was convicted in Circuit Court today of holding up the cashier and teller of the White Hall Bank and stealing $276.

Judge Frank I. Duncan withheld sentence. Osborne pleaded not guilty, and attempted to establish an alibi.

Von Stroheim Falls On Very Evil Day And Goes 'Broke'

Los Angeles, Dec. 19 (AP).—Once one of the screen's leading directors and actors, Eric von Stroheim informed the city prosecutor today he was practically "broke."

His story was in answer to the complaint of his first wife that he had not provided for their 18-year-old son.

"Once I made $5,000 a week," Stroheim said. "That was in the days after I made 'the Merry Widow.'"

He referred to the silent picture of the early '20s.

"But now, all that is changed. I have $11.31 in the bank and checks out against that. I have only one overcoat and one suit of clothes, and the clothes are shiny. See?"

Slash Will Reward Prompt Taxpayers

Front Royal to Allow 25 Per Cent Discount.

Front Royal, Va., Dec. 19 (AP). For the fourth successive year the town council plans to offer a substantial remission to taxpayers who are prompt in paying their town taxes on real and personal property.

On 1931 and 1932 taxes a discount of 40 per cent was allowed and last year the remittance was 25 per cent. If 1934 taxes are paid by July 1, a 25 per cent discount will be allowed, council has decided. Water and electric rates also have been reduced.

Town Manager L. B. Dutrow says this policy is possible because the town owns its electric plant and has been successful in obtaining prompt payment of taxes and water and electricity bills in recent years.

Kingfish Acts To Take Over State's Capital

would give him majority control. Parish officials received the decree in silence.

"The State owns just about everything that's worth anything here," Long told his finance committee which obediently approved his bill without question, "and it's got to have some interest in the way things are run.

Decries Local Government.

"Up at Washington, the Government runs the District of Columbia, but here in Baton Rouge the State is at the mercy of the will o' the wisp whim of the local authorities."

The bill, along with 30 others expanding Long's political control and slashing at his enemies, went to the Senate for advancement to final passage during the afternoon and passage tomorrow.

The "Kingfish" further slapped at East Baton Rouge Parish as well as Orleans Parish by amending a bill to require his approval of every deputy named by a sheriff of either parish. As amended, the bill provides that the State bureau of identification must approve any five deputies the sheriffs of all the other parishes of the State may name.

WALNUT ROOM, THIRD FLOOR

IN PRESENTING the Wedding Gown of a Royal Bride, by Captain Molyneux, we feel that we are participating a bit in the making of fashion history in wedding gowns.

THE gown itself, a severe moyen age gown of exquisite silver lame brocade, in the famous English Tudor Rose pattern, has a most magnificent train—not only very long, but very wide, quite important enough for Westminster Abbey—the veil (not a duplicate)—an enveloping mist caught in a jewelled coronet. Its beautiful simplicity, definitely, will influence all wedding fashions to come.

College, Ferry Aid Continued By Maryland

But New Governor Will Ask Legislature to Review Them.

Subsidies to Maryland ferry companies and colleges will be included in the new budget to be submitted to the State Legislature by Governor-elect Harry W. Nice, Republican leaders predicted yesterday.

These subsidies will amount to about $292,000 for each fiscal year. Because they had been included in Democratic budgets in the past, and because of the Republican promises of economy, there had been some doubt as to their inclusion in the budget now being prepared. The payments have been the target of attacks by Republican legislators and some Democrats in past sessions.

It is understood that Governor-elect Nice will refer in his inaugural address to the inclusion of these items, and give his reason for keeping them in the appropriation bill. Because of a constitutional provision in Maryland, the Legislature can not increase the amounts allotted to various purposes by the Governor. Neither can the Legislature add to the budget any items not originally put in it by the Governor.

One Subsidy Attacked.

According to leading Republicans, Governor-elect Nice will cite these facts and point out that the subsidies could not be considered by the Legislature unless the items were in the bill. He will then ask that the certain appropriations be studied carefully by the House and Senate with a view to reducing them or eliminating them entirely. In this way, Republicans point out, Mr. Nice will not be guilty of arbitrarily removing an expenditure which may be essential to the welfare of the State.

The subsidy to the Annapolis-Claiborne ferry has been subjected to the most bitter attacks in the past. This ferry company now receives $16,790 a year, having been reduced by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and the last Legislature from $24,000. The Tolchester ferry receives a subsidy of $18,250, but this payment has never been a focus of criticism.

There are five independent colleges and universities which receive subsidies from the State. In return for these payments they provide 372 scholarships to worthy Maryland students.

University Payment.

The payment to Johns Hopkins University is $67,500, for which they give 129 scholarships. Morgan College, a colored school which Mr. Nice would like to see made into a university, receives $23,400, but has no free scholarships.

St. John's College, in Annapolis, has a subsidy of $63,000 a year, and gives 26 tuition scholarship and 29 providing both board and tuition. Washington College's annual income from the State is $58,500, against 116 scholarships.

Western Maryland College also has been a target for criticism at recent sessions of the General Assembly. This school receives $45,000 and gives 72 scholarships. There are also a number of other schools and academies, which receive smaller sums from the State.

As Distinguished Group Attended Funeral

Post Staff Photo.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt (right) and Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church yesterday when they attended the funeral of Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, who died Tuesday night of foxhunting injuries.

Tribute Is Paid Mrs. Rumsey By Notables at Funeral Rites

Mrs. Roosevelt and Government and Social Leaders Attend Services for NRA Consumers' Board Chairman at St. Thomas' Church.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, high Washington officials and social leaders from Washington, New York and Virginia paid tribute to Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, chairman of the NRA consumers' advisory board and Junior League founder, at her funeral yesterday afternoon at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins; Secretary of War, and Mrs. George H. Dern, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell, Vincent Aastor, Raymond Moley, Postmaster General James A. Farley and Senator Arthur Capper were among those who attended the last rites for the widowed philanthropist and sportswoman.

Mrs. Rumsey died late Tuesday night of pneumonia, which developed after her serious injury a month ago, when she was pinned beneath her horse while riding to hounds near Middleburg, Va. After the services here the body was taken to Arden, N. Y., for burial there today.

Church Filled With Flowers.

St. Thomas' Church was filled with flowers, remembrances of members of officialdom and society, as the Episcopal service was conducted by the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, D. D., rector. The somberly dressed attendants sat silently during the hymns of the choir and the prayers of Dr. Smith.

Mrs. Rumsey's three children, Charles Cary Rumsey, Bronson Harriman Rumsey and Mary Averell Rumsey, followed the casket of their mother as it was carried out of the church. Behind were her two brothers, W. Averell Harriman and Roland Harriman, both of New York, and her two sisters, Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart, of Unionville, Pa., and Mrs. Robert L. Gerry, of New York.

After Mrs. Rumsey's family came members of the household staff of her estate near Middleburg, Va., her Georgetown home and her home at Sands Point, Long Island. Then followed Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Perkins and the other notables.

Was Ardent Sportswoman.

Mrs. Rumsey's husband, Charles Cary Rumsey, American sculptor, died in 1912. He was a famous polo player. Mrs. Rumsey was an ardent sportswoman She managed a 500-acre Virginai farm and a racing stable in addition to the demands of her numerous other activities.

The daughter of Edward Henry Harriman, New York railroad magnate, she had long been nationally known for her Junior League organization and other philanthropic undertakings. She was also noted as the former owner of a Southern newspaper chain, as a patron of the arts and for her other business and social connections.

Mrs. Rumsey's appointment to the NRA board last year was one of the New Deal's early selections of women for high places in the recovery program. Her job, with Prof. William F. Ogburn, economist, was to determine how consumers were faring under NRA. They soon differed. Ogburn resigned and Mrs. Rumsey headed the consumer's unit until her death.

Somerville Will Fight Is Ended

Culpepers Longest Trial Ends in Victory for Family.

Culpeper, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.)—After a record court session of 15 days, the longest ever held in Culpeper County, the jury rendered a verdict, after three hours' deliberation, declaring the will of 1929 to be the true will of Miss Fannie T. Somerville, setting aside the later will of 1930, and codicil of two years later.

By the terms of the 1929 will, if accepted, the estate, valued at $100,000, will be divided among her relatives and the Presbyterian Church in an almost equal ratio, allowing for a few bequests to friends.

In the last will of 1930, causing the court contest, the Presbyterian Church received the bulk of her estate. Her home was left to her companion, Mrs. Mary Love Holladay, and small bequests to near members of the family. This will was revoked on account of feeble health of the testator at the time it was executed.

An appeal was noted by counsel for the church and by counsel for Mrs. Mary Love Holladay.

The case attracted State-wide interest by the prominence of the family involved, and by the unusual array of lawyers engaged.

$3,000 Fire Is Blamed On a Defective Flue

Purcellville, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Fire early last night destroyed the frame residence of Mrs. W. A. Smith, between Purcellville and Round Hill. The loss, amounting to $3,000, was not covered by insurance.

The fire started in the attic. A defective flue was blamed. Firemen helped to save most of the contents of the structure.

Girl Plans 3,500-Mile Flight To Deliver Christmas Gift

Maryland Stenographer to Take Setter to Texas.

Cambridge, Md., Dec. 19 (AP).—Weather permitting, Miss Katrina Canning, the Eastern Shore's flying stenographer, will leave Cambridge Airport at sunrise tomorrow for Abilene, Tex., in a sky race with Santa Claus.

Carrying as her only passenger a champion Irish setter pup, Miss Canning will make the 3,500-mile jaunt to deliver the pup as a Christmas present to C. W. Wilson, veteran Abilene hunter.

The dog is a gift to Wilson from Col. Albanus Phillips, Cambridge sportsman and lifelong friend of the Texan.

Several days ago Phillips learned his friend was mourning the death of a favorite red Irish setter. He purchased Red Cloudburst, as Miss Canning's aerial passenger is named, and determined to send him South to fill the hole in the Wilson Christmas stocking.

He learned he would have difficulty in getting either mail or air express transportation for the dog, and so chartered a special plane for the delivery.

Miss Canning, formerly a stenographer, but with a record of five years' flying experience, will stop at Richmond, Charlotte, Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Dallas and Houston for half-hour rest periods.

Dillinger Used Bribe in Break, Official Holds

Wooden Gun a 'Gag,' Says Lutz; Indictments Are Rumored.

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP).—Reports that John Dillinger used a bribe as well as a wooden gun in his sensational break from the Crown Point, Ind., jail evoked a flood of conflicting opinions from officials today.

"I think it's a proved fact that Dillinger bought his way out of jail," Attorney General Philip Lutz, jr., of Indiana declared at Cleveland after being apprised of information to the effect that the outlaw paved his way to freedom with $11,000. "That wooden gun was just part of the stage play."

Denies "Knowing Amount."

J. Edward Barce, Deputy Attorney General of Indiana, who spent six months investigating the farcical escape and posed as a gunman recently in running down a Dillinger ally in the Chicago underworld, stated he had "never heard that amount mentioned." He denied knowledge of published reports predicting the indictment of a number of persons in connection with the episode.

The Chicago Daily News said information that Dillinger promised to pay the $11,000 came from Arthur O'Leary, former investigator for Louis Piquett, the outlaw's attorney, and was corroborated by an unidentified man who saw the money change hands in a Crown Point saloon. Lutz lent some credence to that angle in this statement:

"Perhaps the facts will come up at the trial of a Chicago attorney who is charged with aiding members of the Dillinger gang."

Both O'Leary and Piquett are charged with harboring Dillinger, and the attorney is scheduled to be tried soon in Federal court.

Indictments Foreseen.

The Daily News also said Indiana officials were preparing to "return wholesale indictments—and the indictments will include a few Indiana notables—covering the entire Dillinger gang's history."

Dillinger kept his part of the escape bargain, the paper said, but little more than half the sum reached the intended hands because one of the middlemen, now a Federal prisoner, kept the remainder himself.

The Daily News article also stated that new details in connection with the escape of ten Dillinger henchmen from the Michigan City (Ind.) prison in September, 1933, came from Pearl Hellman Frasano, blonde, reputed to be in Federal custody. The paper added she furnished what may be a clew to the $427,000 holdup of an armored truck in Brooklyn last August.

President at His Best, Physician Declares

The doctor says President Roosevelt is in better physical shape than at any time since entering the White House and is ready for the congressional session ahead, the Associated Press reports.

Capital Unites All Its Forces In Traffic War

between drivers concerned in the more serious accident cases.

Police officials and traffic authorities have been instructed in a general order to achieve "strict enforcement."

Corporation Counsel Prettyman has been given authority to draft a regulation which would hold car owners responsible in parking violations even where they claim the alleged violations were committed by relatives or friends.

Commissioner Hazen will request judges in Police Court to reestablish night traffic court to speed the trial of alleged traffic law breakers.

The proposal of Traffic Director Van Duzer to establish compulsory semiannual mechanical inspection of cars has been approved by Commissioner Hazen.

Plans Indorsed.

The plans announced by Commissioner Hazen were indorsed officially by all the authorities who took part in the conference. These included Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of police; Corporation Counsel Prettyman, Traffic Director Van Duzer and his assistant, M. O. Eldridge, and Inspector B. A. Lamb, of the Traffic Bureau.

The conference also was attended by Representative Howard Smith, of Virginia, a member of the House District Committee, who came to the District Building on another matter. The latter part of the conference was attended also by Engineering Commissioner Dan I. Sultan.

"We mean business," asserted Commissioner Hazen.

"For months the District conducted an educational campaign to teach motorists their responsibilities under the regulations. In the face of all this the traffic toll steadily has mounted. The time now has come for strict enforcement, and we are going to have it."

Maj. Brown voiced a similar view.

Late yesterday squadrons of motorcycle policemen began their special duty, buzzing along Bladensburg road northeast and New York avenue northeast.

There were in all four policemen assigned to this duty, two in each locality.

Several traffic accidents occurred on rain-soaked District streets yesterday.

Five-year-old Elizabeth Jefferson, of the 400 block of Twentieth street northwest, was struck and knocked down by an automobile while she attempted to cross the street at Nineteenth and E streets northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said her injuries were not serious.

John Ukeull, 20, of the first block of Fourteenth street northeast, an employe of The Post, suffered severe back injuries when his motorcycle skidded and overturned near the Capitol Building, on North Capitol street. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Injuries received in two accidents, two weeks apart, the latter of which occurred yesterday when his automobile crashed into a building at Fifteenth and C streets northeast, yesterday sent Detective Sergt. Thomas J. Nally to George Washington University Hospital for X-rays and treatment. Physicians fear he may have a fractured skull.

Two Add Votes To End 'Rider'

Post Polls Gains 'Ayes' in Fight to Aid 900.

Two more votes for repeal of the McKellar "patronage rider" were cast yesterday in The Post's pool of members of Congress.

Senator Henry W. Keyes (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Representative Paul Jon Kvale (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, added their "ayes" to the growing demand for remedial legislative action in behalf of the 900 Treasury employes now working without pay.

The Treasury is expected to ask for reinstatement of the employes and payment of salaries back to December 1 as soon as Congress convenes.

Estate Owner Objects To Scenic Easement

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19 (AP). Highway department officials said today that Frederic W. Scott, Richmond financier, had agreed to the originally proposed routing of the Skyline Drive through his "Royal Orchards" estate, but still objected to giving the Government the 800-foot scenic easement it asks in addition to the 200-foot right of way.

Mr. Scott's objection is understood to be to the restrictions that would be placed on his right to build houses, cut trees or build new roadways within 400 feet on either side of the parkway. He already has spent a large amount in beautifying his estate and Federal officials believe he will spend more than they could afford to in further improvements, but they want the easement right to protect them in case the property should pass out of Mr. Scott's hands, highway officials said.

Kennamer Suspect Attempts Suicide

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Edward Shroder, 34, Tulsa, Okla., today attempted to kill himself in a cheap rooming house here. He recently was sought for questioning in the investigations growing out of the deaths of John F. Gorrell, jr., and Sidney Born, jr., Tulsa youths.

Police took Shroder to a hospital. He had slashed his wrists and inhaled illuminating gas.

Detective Fred Green said that Henry B. Maddu, Tulsa criminologist, recently sought Shroder here for questioning about the activities of a coterie of Tulsa youths from whose activities two deaths, extortion plots and other crimes were alleged to have resulted.

Philip Kennamer, 19, son of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer, is charged with the Gorrell killing. Born was believed a suicide, although county authorities are working on a theory that he was killed.

A First Essential.

On two separate fronts District authorities have adopted sweeping policies for greater protection of the public. In one department a vigorous drive against motorists who violate the traffic regulations is being launched. In another department a major anti-crime movement is in the process of development, with the aid of civic and professional groups. Extensive new responsibilities will be placed upon the Metropolitan Police in both instances.

These activities afford the strongest possible support for the plea of Superintendent Brown for an increase in his force. The current demand for more vigorous enforcement of the law can not possibly be met without an adequate number of trained men. Increased lawlessness unquestionably has a direct relationship to the decline in police protection. Failure to augment the number of patrolmen on duty when the population is substantially increased is an invitation to criminals to center their activities in Washington. Regardless of what recommendations may be made by the special committee studying local crime conditions, more police officers will be needed to carry them out.

Likewise the prevention of accidents is largely a police function. The steady growth of fatalities from this source reflects an acute need for more directors of traffic and motorcycle officers. The eleven-point program which Commissioner Hazen has outlined is likely to be ineffective unless a larger body of trained men is available to translate orders into action.

It is to be hoped that both of these attempts to make Washington a safer place to live will be given due consideration by the House sub-committee studying the District budget when it passes judgment upon Maj. Brown's request for 141 additional officers.

Railroads And Public Works.

The importance of the railroads to the durable goods industries is convincingly demonstrated by certain statistical data published in the current issue of the Railway Age.

In the five years following 1929, the roads bought $3,265,000,000 less from the durable goods industries than during the five preceding years. It is estimated that steel production alone would have increased 36 per cent last year if purchases had been as large as in 1929, while lumber production would have been 21 per cent higher. These figures not only prove the importance of the railways as an outlet for the products of the country's heavy industries, but they show the impossibility of supplying the stimulus required to restore those industries through Government expenditures on public works.

Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Coordinator of Transportation, suggests that the railroads could employ public funds most effectively, with great benefit to themselves as well as to the rest of the country. The problem, he says, is a difficult one, but not in his opinion insoluble. On the contrary, Mr. Eastman himself has offered constructive recommendations for a coordinated transportation policy that would strengthen the position of the railways, and give them greater confidence to finance an expanded program of repairs and improvements.

Government loans for such purposes might well provide a far greater amount of indirect employment for each dollar expended than can be afforded by relatively costly construction projects undertaken chiefly to make jobs.

Ubiquitous.

When you put your finger on the proverbial flea, he isn't there. When, however, you do anything that makes news, he nearly always is. Some ten days ago, a battered freighter came to grief in mid-Atlantic: a French correspondent was aboard the rescuing ship and wirelessed his vivid account of it. This week another battered freighter succumbs at a nearby spot: Newspaperman Frank Gannett, of Portland, Me., is a passenger on the succoring Europa, and radios the details.

Of course much news does come second-hand, or is chronicled only by reporters who have arrived at the scene as swiftly as ingenuity permits. But such an amazing number of events are actually witnessed by professional chroniclers that one wonders whether there are not newsmen who attract news much as a lightning rod attracts lightning. It is not merely that such men scent news as soon as it happens. They seem subconsciously to scent it before it happens, and then proceed—fully prepared, even if totally unguessing—to the very place where the event is destined to occur.

Omniscient, reporters certainly are not, yet they are, in this sense, omnipresent. Indeed, about the chief difference between them and the lightning rod—aside from the rod's immobility—is that the latter attracts the thunderbolt merely to divert it, whereas the ubiquitous reporter does not absorb, but emanates the flash.

Doles Or Work Relief?

Only a few years ago it was the custom of American business leaders vehemently to denounce the dole in all its aspects. This week, in conferences at White Sulphur Springs, a cross-section of our industrial leadership has moved rapidly toward indorsement of a dole system for the United States, in preference to plans for work relief.

This pronounced change of position is significant for at least two reasons. In the first place it indicates capitulation of the extreme form of "rugged individualism." The claim of the involuntarily unemployed to a measure of support from organized society is fully and freely recognized.

In the second place the shift shows that business leaders are beginning to give more thought to the very complex problems of scientific unemployment relief. It used to be customary, for instance, to describe the British system of unemployment insurance as a dole. The conferees at White Sulphur now seem to realize that there is a great difference between outright relief payments and benefits based upon previous contributions, in accordance with actuarial principles.

The conclusion that flat relief payments are preferable to work relief will arouse plenty of criticism. For it is unquestionable that the former are socially demoralizing while the latter tend to stimulate industry through use of materials, in addition to giving useful employment. It may also be argued that conferences of industrialists should now be more concerned with specific suggestions for business recovery than with debating the principles of Governmental relief policy.

The issue here posed, however, is fundamental and it is well that business leaders should express a considered opinion before the Administration commits itself to the enormous work relief program which has been foreshadowed. The experience of many countries, in many periods of history, has demonstrated that extensive programs of made work may be excessively costly and inefficient by contrast with their value in providing jobs. They can tend to injure private enterprise without themselves affording any really substantial unemployment relief. Nor is it certain that made work is necessarily less demoralizing than a carefully supervised dole.

The group at White Sulphur is acting in the public interest, therefore, in pointing out that a work-relief program must be drafted with the most exceptional care if it is to be regarded as preferable to the relative economy and simplicity of a dole system.

By raising this issue, however, the spokesmen of industry have assumed a responsibility for showing how a dole system can be made less costly and more efficient than a carefully contrived system of work relief would prove to be. Concretely, it must be shown how dole payments can be restricted to those really in need, and how such a system can be operated without encouraging idleness on the part of recipients.

The only effective check on malingering in this matter is to have the dole paid through public employment offices, instructed to withhold payments whenever an applicant refuses suitable available work. To be effective such offices must have knowledge of the positions available in the community, which means that employers must cooperate wholeheartedly in notifying their vacancies to the exchanges. It will mean little for business spokesmen to advocate a dole system if they do not show practical leadership in helping to prevent the intolerable abuses to which such a system may easily be subjected.

The efficient nucleus of a Nation-wide system of employment exchanges already exists in the United States Employment Service. This service will probably be chosen as the appropriate agency for the payment of unemployment insurance, as Federal and State legislation to that end is shaped.

Unemployment insurance, however, is no solution of the relief problem. And the more carefully it is devised the less possible it is for an insurance system to do more than care temporarily for a minority of the unemployed. For the great majority of workless, the problem of relief will remain. And whether that relief takes the form of made work or simple doles, the necessity of a selective agency is apparent.

If the thinking of our business executives fails to visualize this need it will have scratched only the surface of the relief problem.

Americana.

Slang and slang expressions may no longer be eyed askance, nor frowned upon by those who feel that the two are a language apart. For no less than a highly respected librarian and a learned professor have come out almost simultaneously with voluminous tomes on the subject.

Mr. Burton E. Stevenson, librarian for 35 years, of Chillicothe, Ohio, has compiled 2,605 pages of quotations so familiar to the average American that they are sometimes thought of as slang. In it are explanations of such remarks as "forgotten man," "chiseler" and "You can fool some of the people all of the time. * * *" The latter he attributes without bickering to Lincoln's speech in Bloomington, Ill., in 1856.

It remained, strangely enough, for a member of a department of English to take enough cognizance of American slang to do a book on it. Prof. Maurice H. Weseen, of the University of Nebraska, has not only collected these vital and colorful additions to our language, but he has separated them into the categories to which he attributes their source. There are 22 pages alone of stage and screen slang and a little over 6 pages, without intending any pun, of newly coined synonyms for money.

Mr. Stevenson's book is being hailed as the logical successor to Bartlett's Quotations, of which there has not been an edition since 1914. Mr. Weseen's dictionary is practically a pioneer by virtue of its adequate entirety. Both books will no doubt form a useful and interesting addition to the ever-growing collection of Americana.

Mary Harriman Rumsey.

It is very hard to believe that the superb and restless energy of Mary Harriman Rumsey has been stilled forever. Even in this age of multiple tragedy her death must be felt as a real loss by all who knew her, as fellow-worker or as friend. Hers was a valiant spirit that battled ceaselessly to escape the influence of great wealth and to appraise without prejudice the social problems of modern life. And having made up her mind to remedy what appeared to her an injustice, or merely an example of human stupidity and waste, she spared neither time nor labor nor money in her attempts to be helpful to her fellow beings.

She unquestionably inherited much of her father's great ability and capacity for action. Her struggle for independence began as a very young girl when she insisted, against the custom of her class and times, upon putting herself through Barnard College while carrying on the routine of a purely social existence. Recognizing the futility of the life of the average debutante, she founded the Junior League in order to turn the minds and efforts of her associates into useful channels. Proceeding from this limited sphere, she devoted herself to the much more serious problems of cooperative farming, to politics, and finally to the great opportunities which she saw in the social readjustments made necessary by the depression.

So great was her vision that not even her abilities could possibly accomplish the incredible demands which she made upon herself. But those who were inclined to criticize her for undertaking too much failed to see that her enthusiasm, generosity, and unselfish and tireless devotion to the public good were primarily the qualities which made her a force.

Like Ulysses this restless spirit reached out for the difficult, the remote, the unattainable, and like Ulysses she seemed ever to be saying:

> . . . My purpose holds
> To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths
> Of all the western stars, until I die.

The Eastman Plan.

A national transportation policy is brought one step nearer by the program which Joseph B. Eastman has submitted to the President. As Federal coordinator of transportation, Mr. Eastman undoubtedly has the full confidence of the Chief Executive. It may be taken for granted that the general principles of his plan will, soon or late, be incorporated in an Administration bill for presentation to Congress.

If Mr. Eastman's plan is adopted, the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be extended to include regulation of bus and truck lines, coastal shipping, aviation and barge lines doing interstate business. In other words, all major transport agencies would be subjected to the same degree of control as are the railroads. The present chaotic situation, in which unregulated carriers are allowed to make inroads upon the business of highly regulated carriers, would be terminated by a policy of equal treatment for all, with the best interests of the public as the sole objective.

Legislation of this sort has been advocated for a number of years. It is especially urgent now because of the sorry plight of the railroads. No one contends, of course, that such a measure would immediately solve the complicated problems of the railroads, but it would certainly lay a foundation for lasting improvement of their position. Needless competition between motor vehicles and rail carriers could be eliminated. Instead of merely trying to coordinate the services rendered by a single agency, the I. C. C. would then have an opportunity to bring all transportation units within a carefully integrated system.

President Roosevelt is said to be uncertain whether the Eastman plan should be submitted to the forthcoming session of Congress. Considering the urgency of the railroad problem, this decision should not be difficult to make. As noted elsewhere in these columns today, railroad recovery is intimately connected with the Administration's policy of stimulating the durable goods industries. It appears, therefore, that few bills designed for deliberation by the next Congress could be of greater importance than the Eastman proposal.

Huey Long has been trying to place a football player in the Louisiana Legislature. No one knows better than Huey the value in politics of knowing how to play football.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

The Traffic Troubles.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with traffic and road regulation for fuller safety, I suggest:

1. Taking the dangers and danger spots out of the highways, which have existed for years.
2. All fast highways to be painted white at sides as well as center.
3. Make stop lines further back from railroad crossings, so that cars can cross tracks at a controllable speed.

I should like to have opinions of experts on the following:

1. Making pedestrian crossings in the middle of blocks.
2. Having municipally-owned garage storage in cities and doing away with all parking during business hours, this storage to be computed by the number of parked cars possible in its immediate area multiplied by the number of parking periods during the day.
3. Return to right-hand drive. I believe in this because of the natural caution and fear of the individual driver. This is desirable in taking curves—they are to the left being easier to take faster than they are to the right—due to position of driver.

A bit more of common sense and practicability along well defined lines would do a lot.

Alcoholic Fiction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested in reading a letter by what I presume is a mere man, signing himself Quidnunc, in which he objects to the excessive use of "rough-house" words in love stories.

I would have been better pleased by what he wrote if he had called attention to the numerous cigarettes and cocktails consumed by the young heroes and heroines of modern fiction. The heroine refuses a smoke or a drink only once in a while, and in my opinion cigarettes and cocktails—especially cocktails—are a great deal worse than the bad words. The words objected to are not really wicked, but are only out of place; and, even if all the characters do like to smoke and drink, too much of this in an ordinary love story seems very much more out of place. It spoils the story's vraisemblance, don't you think?

Middlemen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is one phase of price regulation that should receive notice from the powers that are.

If a party or company markets an article at a specified price under a specific title and advertises such price to the public, and the wares, etc., carry the price conspicuously, that price should be maintained. It should not be in the power of a middleman to change it.

This would not prevent anyone from producing similar goods under his own title and selling at any other figure in real competition. The real value of money lies in its diffusion, not in its concentration, in the country at large. The producer tries to fix the actual value of the dollar; the middleman can kill it.

A Dissenting Voice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read in The Post that the wife of "Baby Face" Nelson is on her way to jail to serve a year for violation of parole. Thanksgiving week we had the Department of Justice accusing her of assisting in the killing of the two Federal agents and headed for the chair. Subsequent facts indicate that her only participation in the killing of the two agents was her presence at the scene.

The Department of Justice has made a fine record under the Roosevelt Administration in its drive on crime. But it might very well, with grace, drop the smoke screen and publicity methods it is now using in building up its reputation.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express my appreciation of The Post's news broadcasts by Mr. Harris Hull. I think they are the best evening news broadcasts that we receive.

However, many times they are so late that I do not get to hear them. Would it not be possible to have Mr. Hull broadcast not later than 9 or 9:30 every evening. I hope that you will be able to arrange an earlier hour with the National Broadcasting Co.

Sartorial Symposium.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I will be regretfully brief in this contribution to the symposium on the world's 12 best-dressed citizens, since The Post will, of course, be swamped by an embarrassment of riches in response to its public-spirited request for an expression of opinion by all and sundry.

As an old-timer I regret the necessity of refraining from a general view of sartorial distinction in the good old days. However, the mere mention of three distinguished nineteenth century citizens I at once call to mind may be sufficient. They are Berry Wall, mid-Victorian Beau Brummel of Broadway; John James Ingalls, in his day the Adonis of the Senate; and Chester A. Arthur, historically conspicuous in the list of well-dressed officialdom.

In my opinion, these representatives of the Old Deal outclass anything the New Deal can show. Mind you, these were not picked by star-chamber experts but by a unanimous Nation-wide acclaim.

QUIDNUNC.
Washington, Dec. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago you were glorifying the Plain Clothes man. Today you are glorifying the Swell Clothes man. How about the Old Clothes man? Doesn't he rate any consideration?

I want to get in this contest of yours, if you will have a division devoted to gardening costumes. I wear the pants of the swallow tail in which I led the Bachelors Cotillion in Baltimore in 1907. Can you beat it?

PLUS FOURS.
Washington, Dec. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with great interest and appreciation your present series of stories on "Present-Day Beau Brummels."

May I respectfully suggest that, in my humble opinion, the prevailing exemplars of best-dressed men are mere pikers compared to the Beau Brummels of yesterday in Washington society. That is a title that belongs still to the late Admiral George Dewey more than to any man in official life here for the last 30 years.

From the days when, as Commodore Dewey, the palm of best dressing was accorded cheerfully to the future Hero of Manila Bay to his last fruitful days as president of the General Board of the Navy, when his reputation for good dressing kept pace with his fame, Admiral Dewey was the realization of a Bond street tailor's fondest dreams.

Groomed in the Navy tradition of "shipshape," at all times Admiral Dewey was the pink of perfection in his attire. His Filipino valets were kept busy with his wardrobe, in which there were always, at least, 25 changes of civilian dress—at one time he had 37 suits of civilian wear and 10 dress and service uniforms—and his ties, shirts, shoes and other appurtenances of a Beau Brummel's dress were elegant, in every sense of the word.

Other Beau Brummels of yesterday were several Speakers of the House of Representatives, notably Champ Clark, a sartorial dream in his white linen summer suits with a fresh red carnation in his button-hole each day, his noble physique and classic features adding to the ensemble effect; Speaker Gillette, trim, a figure of conservative elegance and jovial "Nick" Longworth, a picture of the well-dressed man about town.

CAVE-DWELLER.
Washington, Dec. 19.

Seeing Nellie Home.

On the prosaic records of the city building department of Lowell, Mass., an "old house on Lee street" is marked for demolition as unsafe. Back of this notation lies a story. For this old house once was the home to which a certain "Nellie" was "seen" after "Aunt Dinah's quilting party."

There it was that Ellen O'Neill, the "Nellie" of Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore's song, lived and was wooed by the song writer, then leader of the Salem Cadet Band. That was back in the '50s. Nellie and Patrick were married in St. Patrick's in Lowell, on May 18, 1858, by the Rev. John O'Brien, the "Father John" whose name also has long been an American household word. Gilmore went on to become a bandmaster of note in his day. Nellie lives forever in his song.

Lesser shrines of good American memory than Nellie's home have been preserved. Were all the men who have sung the song to contribute a dime toward saving the old Lowell house, as the Hartford Courant suggests, the old pile could be made safe and sacred. The idea ought to commend itself to Henry Ford, our chief preserver of antiquities.

The Post Impressionist

Sack-Posset And Kill-Devil.

Post Office, Thursday.

HARD drinking is on the decline—according to the victorious veterans of the war for repeal.

It is on the increase—according to the hardy and surviving prohibitionists.

Which is right, the Post-Impressionist has no notion. But he finds consolation in the fact that, according to the records, we modern Americans shall have, anyhow, a long way to go before we attain to some of the hard drinks of our colonial forefathers. We may take too much corn liquor, or almost none. We may consume too many cocktails, or less than a relative few. At all events, we do not touch—we have even forgotten the names of:

Sack-Posset,
Metheglin,
Rumbullion,
Kill-Devil,
Calibogus,
Flip-Dog, and Whistle-Belly-Vengeance.

Yet all these devastating concoctions—and some still worse—were familiar to thousands upon thousands of palates in those dark ages which preceded our first Revolution.

* * *

> "From famed Barbadoes on the Western Main
> Fetch sugar half-a-pound; fetch sack from Spain
> A pint; and from the Eastern Indian Coast
> Nutmeg, the glory of our Northern Toast.
> O'er flaming coals together let them heat
> Till the all-conquering sack dissolves the sweet.
> O'er such another fire set eggs twice ten,
> New-born from crowing cock and speckled hen . . .
> From shining shelf take down your brazen skillet,
> A quart of milk from gentle cow, and fill it.
> When boiled and cooked, put milk and sack to egg,
> Unite them firmly like the Triple League . . ."

Who would now dare open lips for such a mixture?

Nevertheless, that is the once-famous sack-posset. The rhymed recipe you will discover in the New York Gazette for February 13, 1744, allegedly from the pen of Sir Fleetwood Fletcher. It was the period's festival-drink par excellence: the drink of and to brides and grooms, the punch for christening-parties. Even staid New England knew it well, for in the diary of old Judge Sewell, a hundred years after Boston was founded, you may read, of a wedding:

"There was a pretty good deal of company present. Many young gentlemen and young gentlewomen. Mr. Noyes made a speech, said love was the sugar to sweeten every condition in the marriage-state . . . After sack-posset, sang the 45th Psalm from 8th verse to end."

* * * *

They liked cooked drinks, and sweet drinks, you see, in those times. Babes in arms were given mulled hard cider. Old men started the winter's day with a prebreakfast quart. Half-gallon tankards of the stuff were passed from hand to hand at students' commons in the universities of Harvard and Yale. Lest any host should run out of flavoring, the beaux and belles always carried nutmegs with them and gave gilded and beribboned nutmegs upon gift days.

Black-strap—we have Alice Morse Earle's authority for it, in her "Stage Coach and Tavern Days"—stood in casks "in every corner store and tavern, a salted codfish hung alongside, slyly to tempt, by thirst, additional purchasers." Yet black-strap was, save for a few "simples," a blending of rum and molasses!

Reflect over metheglin, a drink of high popularity in Virginia and Kentucky—and in New Hampshire, too. It was made from the brown and green beans of the honey locust tree, ground fine with certain herbs, immersed in not too much water, and left to ferment.

Consider, if you have the courage—the Post-Impressionist hasn't—rumfustian: "One quart of strong beer; one bottle of white wine or half a pint of gin, the yolks of 12 eggs, orange peel, nutmeg, spices and sugar."

Calibogus—just "bogus" for short and well so-called—was "mightily much liked:" A mixture of unsweetened rum and beer.

Scotchem ran it a close second: "Applejack, boiling water and a good dash of mustard." Clearly another punch whereof the name fitted the concoction!

Nor should you forget American Flip. "Made in a great pewter mug," it was, or in "an earthen pitcher." Two-thirds of it were heady beer. This was "sweetened by sugar, molasses or dried pumpkin, flavored with about a gill of New England rum," into which the recipe commands that there be "thrust and stirred a red-hot loggerhead made of iron." Its close companion was Flip-Dog, its greatest rival, whistle-belly vengeance: "popular in Salem . . . sour household beer simmered in a kettle, sweetened with molasses, filled with crumbs of 'ryneinjun' bread, and drunk piping hot."

Then there was rumbooze. And then there was mimbo. And then——

But why pursue a painful subject? These were the drinks of the drinking Colonials!

Trade Opportunities Sought In Manchuria

Oil Controversies Obscure Activities Of Britain And France As Japan Extends Monopolies.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

Shanghai.

MANCHURIA, "the cradle of conflict," is reappearing in the world's news. A recent event to attract international attention was the British Industrial Mission, headed by Lord Barnby, to Japan and Manchukuo. Almost immediately followed the sensational outbreak of hostilities between the foreign oil concerns and Hsinking and Tokyo. In the shadow of these two major events, numerous other events of great importance, such as the publication of the new tariff, the announcement of the despatch of a French economic mission to Manchuria and the proposed monopoly on life insurance, passed almost unnoticed.

Lord Barnby's mission gave birth to a heated controversy in China, where most observers took it as an indication of Great Britain's desire to trade recognition of the "puppet state" (as Chinese censors call it) and the resumption of Anglo-Japanese entente for a mess of pottage of Manchukuo orders. Although numerous denials have been issued by Lord Banrby himself and Downing Street, and duly reprinted in local British publications, it was assumed here that the mission of such importance must have had the official blessing of the British government.

The concrete results in terms of pounds and shillings of the mission's visit can not yet be correctly estimated. An American daily in Tokyo said that orders amounting to $200,000,000 were carried home by the mission, but the report was denied. It is known, however, that the Selection Trust Co. of London has obtained a franchise from Manchukuo for alluvial mining in Kirin Province, in a project involving about $20,000,000. It is also known that a large order for railway equipment was obtained by one of the members of the group from the South Manchuria Railway Co. On the other hand, a British proposal to Japanese rail manufacturers to join the world cartel was snubbed rather pointedly by the Japanese, who obviously fear that the cartel would raise Japan's prices, thus undermining her position as the chief exporter of rails to Manchuria.

The results of the mission probably will not be known until the termination of the London naval negotiations. Meanwhile, in both Tokyo and London, special trade committees are nursing the Anglo-Japanese friendship, which England needs to bolster up her trade which Japan needs for political and military reasons.

* * * *

THE oil controversy flared up rather suddenly, as the result of the publication in London of a copy of a letter received by the oil concerns in Manchuria from the Manchukuo government. Such an outbreak could have been, and by the Soviet observer was, predicted last year when the Japanese army in Manchuria began to work on its plan of "economic development and consolidation." Gen. Koiso is credited with having nurtured the oil baby to the kicking stage.

Japan's pioneer in Manchuria, the South Manchuria Railway Co., began to prospect for oil in the summer of 1933. Later in the year it also commenced the construction of a huge refinery near Dairen, and also unofficially opened a department to deal with oil affairs.

Early this year the Manchukuo government began to consider the establishment of an oil monopoly. On February 23, by special grace of he government, the Manchuria Petroleum Co. came into being, thus justifying the faith of the South Manchuria Railway in the future of petroleum. The South Manchuria Railway was gievn a 40 per cent interest in the new concern; four large Japanese oil firms, including the gigantic Mitsui and Mitsubishi, a similar share, and the Manchukuo government the remaining 20 per cent. The company was the agency through which the Hsinking authorities intended to enforce the monoply.

The American and British firms—the Standard-Vacuum Oil Co., the Texas Oil Co., and the Asiatic Petroleum Co. (British)—were aware of the plan almost at its inception, for the first representations by the two governments to Tokyo were made early in July.

On August 4 Tokyo replied disclaiming all responsibility for the actions of Manchukuo, and declaring that it "can neither discourage Japanese capitalists from investing in the oil company, incorporated under the law of Manchukuo, nor dissuade the Manchurian authorities from proceeding with certain measures of oil control."

Late in August protests were lodged with Tokyo by the two governments. Tokyo's reply, made public on November 5, declared that the "control of oil in Manchukuo falls under the jurisdiction of the Manchukuo government and the Japanese government is not in a position to give any explanations on the matter." Another protest is said to be in preparation, and reports from London indicate that the oil controversy has become a part and parcel of the naval conversations. Meanwhile, putting aside foreign protests, the Manchukuo government announced a few days ago the inauguration of the monoply.

* * * *

TWO aspects of the situation draw wide attention here. The first of these is the rumored oil boycott of Manchuria. Such a step is considered unlikely for several reasons. To be effective such an embargo would have to include Japan as well, which would make the step too costly, both financially and politically. To be effective the embargo would have to have Soviet support, which is doubtful. The large supplies of petroleum in Japan and the Saghalien and Formosa resources would make the outcome of the embargo uncertain.

The second aspect of the problem deals with the "open door" assurances given by Manchukuo on several occasions. The creation of the oil monopoly has been a part of a comprehensive plan to place all important branches of national economy in Japan and Manchukuo under state control. Manchukuo is Japan's outpost on the mainland, and also an extremely profitable market. These two motives combined make a myth out of the "open door."

Manchukuo's forests are divided today into four sectors, each of which is exploited by a Japanese monopoly firm. Manchukuo's gold is mined by a Japanese concern, having a monopoly, or its subcontractors. Heat, light and power come mostly from a huge newly-organized Y-90,000,000 concern, controlled by Japanese capital. All of Manchukuo's railways, with the exception of the Chinese Eastern, which is now the object of intensive haggling, are managed and to all intents controlled by the Japanese South Manchuria Railway Co. Oil has just been taken over by a concern, four-fifths of whose capital is Japanese. The Hsinkiang government is now working on a plan for life insurance monopoly, which would concentrate all the business in the hands of a single concern, in which the Japanese insurance companies would be asked to participate in view of their "vested interest." This list could be extended to practically every line of economic activity.

Manchukuo's new tariff, which was published last week, has made considerable concessions to the Japanese, especially in the cotton piece-goods line. Foreign importers were hit hard by a number of increased levies. Thus, the automobile traders will have to pay a 30 per cent duty on assembled cars, instead of the former 15 per cent. At the same time the duty on parts was reduced from 30 per cent to 10, thus giving a boost to a Manchurian concern, the Manchurian Automobile Manufacturing Co., which operates an assembling plant.

What little business is done by foreign concerns is done by the tolerance of the Hsinking authorities, and this tolerance, it seems, decreases proportionately with the development of native national economy, backed by Japanese capital. Some observers here believe that to continue to insist on the maintenance of the "open door" in Manchukuo is to ignore the realities.

The Barnby mission is taken here as an indication of the British desire to work out a new formula applicable to the new set-up.

Married 42 Years, Frederick Woman Seeks Separation

Frederick, Md., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Married more than 42 years and the parents of adult children, Mrs. Blanche Beall has filed suit in the circuit court for separate maintenance and alimony from T. W. Beall. She charges cruelty, especially in the last six months.

Mrs. Beall's petition states they were married by the late Rev. Dr. E. R. Eschbach, formerly pastor of the Reformed Church, April 4, 1892, and that on last October 31 she was ordered by her husband from their home and went to the residence of her sister. When she returned ten days later, she contends, her husband further abused her and she was compelled to go back to her sister where she is now residing.

Mrs. Beall declares she is without means of support and that her husband owns three properties and has considerable money in the bank and an income of more than $40 per week.

Hard on Nags!

23 Horses Are Used Up in County's Mail Services.

Luray, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—According to records kept, 23 horses were sacrificed to the R. F. D. service in this country before mails were carried in automobiles.

The records show that George W. Rothgeb, one of the carriers had 7; J. R. Broyles, 5; D. B. Broyles, 4; Charles B. Dyche, 3, and J. A. Beach, 4.

Records also show that the horses traveled an aggregate of 414,000 miles, or each one of the animals about 18,000 miles.

The Widows and Orphans.

BARGERON.

IT is beginning to appear that those critics of the efforts of Senators Borah and Nye to liberalize the Republican Party have spoken too soon. In asking just how the Republicans expect to get into a field already held by the Democrats they have apparently overlooked the Senators' analytical ability.

At first glance it does look ludicrous for the Republicans to try to be the same thing or things the Democrats are. Why, one asks of them with some heat, do they think the people would kick the Democrats out in favor of a bunch who stand for the same policies, who love the working men and tillers of the soil with the same devotion? It would not be possible for anyone to love them more than the Democrats. It would be idle then for the Borah-Nye Republicans to contend that they do. Just where, under these circumstances, would these Republicans get any votes? Looking at it in this light it would seem quite conclusive that the Senators are barking up the wrong tree.

* * * *

What we critics of them are overlooking, though, are the widows and orphans and the Administration's seeming attitude toward them. It is almost inconceivable, this seeming attitude is. One could not bring oneself to believe it were it not so often reflected. It is more than we can understand. It is a question for Freud; but there it is, nevertheless.

One has only to mention the security holders of the power companies in Administration circles to be greeted with a most derisive laugh. "Oh, you are bringing up the widows and orphans issue," he is told.

Now, the inquirer has 9 times out of 10 not mentioned the widows and orphans. By way of seeking information he has simply asked, without prejudice, What is to become, in this great fight on the power companies, of the security holders? The outburst of mirth will astound him.

"Ho, ho! the old widows and orphans issue again." The derision has frequently appeared in print.

* * * *

It is shocking, it is. If it were to come from the vested interests or the Old Guard Republicans one would not be surprised. It is what he has been taught to expect of them, a cold-hearted attitude toward the people as a whole.

But never have we had an Administration that avowed such overwhelming, all-consuming interest in the plain people, the workingmen and the tillers of the soil, as this one. How that avowal can be squared with the fiendish way in which they say "Ho, ho! the widows and orphans' issue," is not seen.

It is hard to believe that anyone could have such a heart that would just overflow toward workingmen and tillers of the soil and then, at a certain point, contract to exclude the widows and orphans. Usually an overflowing heart is uncontrollable. Its possessor can no more let it expand to a degree of overflowing and then shut it off than a monkey could resist a 100 yards of grapevine. An overflowing heart is not a self-regulatory machine.

* * * *

Yet you can try it yourself—you can inquire any time in Administration circles about the security holders of the power companies and you will hear such a laugh about the widows and orphans as will make you shudder.

In fairness, though, it is believed that the seemingness of the Administration's attitude in this respect is deceiving. They can't really feel toward the widows and orphans as their derision indicates. It must be that they don't think there are any widows and orphans, or, if there really are, that they aren't security holders in the power companies. On the other hand, it may be a story similar to the one related by O. Henry. A wife murderer had escaped to Central America. The pursuing detective had never seen him. But with an uncanny understanding of human nature the detective one day seized a man who was overly nice to a dog.

Interest Cut Totals $34,342.

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Reduction in the interest rate from 3 to 2½ per cent on time and savings deposits, decreed by Federal agencies, will amount to $34,342.99 here, it was shown by bank figures today.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

WHEN Frederick Palmer urged Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, a professional soldier, who had the command of words of a trained literary mind, to write the memoirs of his life, Bliss only replied: "There are the papers."

And there they were, piled ceiling-high in an upper back room of the Bliss home in Kalorama road—diaries, letters, translations from the Russian, annotated Greek texts, lecture schedules, memoranda from the Philippines and the Peace Conference—almost the whole life written out or suggested of the sixth general in United States history (after Washington, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan and Pershing) to win four stars in performance. All these Col. Palmer used, filling in gaps with everything from reminiscences of Bliss' associates to the war memoirs of Ludendorff, to make a biography which is at once the story of a remarkable man and the picture of the American and allied high command in the frenzied days of the war and the peace. Peace.

"Bliss: Peacemaker" (Dodd Mead, $4) gives readers their first full view of a career which affected all of them, of a soldier-statesman who shunned publicity but whose stature is one of the very few which is still growing in these disillusioned days.

* * * *

Bliss was a parson's son and a 6-footer—wherein lies the key. Even when he graduated from West Point in 1875 he was known as a scholar, and all his life he studied further. With enormous energy he took French, German, Spanish and Russian unto himself; like Newton Baker he read Greek for relaxation (covering the volume with the jacket of a novel so that he wouldn't seem high-hat to his fellow officers on an Army post); with equal curiosity he delved into everything from the life of the oyster to (when his daughter Eleanor was taking the subject at Bryn Mawr), a thorough study of geology. Americans who are impressed with the classic tale of Gladstone's learning Greek in his old age have an even better example closer home.

The same strong-mindedness went into his routine army work—military attache in Spain just before the trouble in 1898; collector of customs in Havana after the war (where he left such a precept of honesty that it survived even under the rule of corrupt Cuban dictators); commander in the Philippines; president of the War College, and assistant chief of staff in early 1915.

Bliss was then a one-star brigadier, 61 years old, within three years of retirement. A worthy career, you would have said at the time, and expected little more. Yet he was only, as Col. Palmer says, "on the thresold of his supreme responsibility and achievenment."

* * * *

Newton Baker once remarked that Bliss was the only man he knew who thought continuously. That power for sustained concentration (and the vigor of body behind it) kept Bliss going when many a younger man broke under the strain of the prewar and war years.

The months before April, 1917, were almost worse than those after. Army plans for war had to go on even if Wilson were determinedly neutral. Once Wilson, in a rage at hearing that the staff had a warplan against Germany, ordered that all general officers be sent away from Washington if the report be true—Bliss held his ground, and the War College went on with their preparations, though secretly. Further, Bliss saw into the prime need for ships and supplies, and quietly laid the ground-work before that decisive April. Confused as were our first efforts in the war, they would have been far more painful and costly without the steady bald head of Bliss.

By fall he was chief of staff with the weight of the Army on his and Baker's shoulders. Immediately he went abroad on the mission to coordinate the Allies' efforts. How desperate was the allied need he learned then: Men and more men, but always the supplies to keep them going and the ships to get them across. It was the mechanics of getting an army overseas which occupied Bliss.

But when the Supreme War Council was formed, who but Bliss could be our military representative? Here he backed Pershing in keeping our Army a separate unit, fostered the appointment of Foch as generalissimo, countered many a plan for a wasteful attack on Germany away from the western front.

That same hard common-sense was somewhat swamped by the actions of his superiors in the hasty peace of Versailles, when Bliss was a member of the Peace Commission along with Wilson, House, Lansing and White. In the high wrangling with the commissioners of other nations, especially in the "closet diplomacy" of Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau, and Orlando, many of Bliss' sterling suggestions went unheeded.

Clemenceau referred to Bliss as "an independent mind who had well-anchored personal opinions and never budged from them. Also an admirable physician who returned an everlasting 'no' to whatever he was asked, and never attempted a word of explaining." History is not likely to look kindly upon that tartness. For what could be more sound and true than Bliss' too taciturn comments after the signing of the peace treaty?—"The treaty is neither punitive nor, constructive," he said, and added: "We are in for a low period, then a high period, then the devil will be to pay all over the world."

* * * *

It was both the trained soldier and the classical scholar speaking. Militarists called him a pacifist, and pacifists a militarist. Somewhat between lay the ripe, rounded wisdom of Bliss, seen like a mountain now in this biography. After his retirement and up to his death in 1930, he spoke all over the country for the cause of peace. "Has the time come," he would put the plain question, "when great international wars must of necessity destroy more than they save? If so, then every war means a step backward toward the extinction of what we want to save."

And then he would turn from this "slipperiest of all slippery problems," chuckle with his old friends (he never laughed aloud), and pick up Thucydides or a detective story.

He must have known he had a good, rich life, and "Bliss: Peacemaker" proves it.

For Corps And Country

Many Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers now living in Washington have had careers studded with heroic incidents and adventures so thrilling that they read like fiction. The stories of these men are material for a fascinating series of articles now appearing in The Sunday Post.

This week: the Marines McCawley, father and son, who served their corps and country for more than 76 years, fighting through four wars and countless revolutions and uprisings.

If you are not a member of a service family, you will find this series an exciting glimpse of the men who make the protection of their country their profession. If you are from a service family, you probably will find your friends included in the series.

Right Quotations

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

BURTON STEVENSON, one of the best of anthologists, whose "Home Book of Verse" is a classic in its field, has placed the world still deeper in debt to him by a truly magnificent work called "The Home Book of Quotations."

Had I been a betting man, I could have won a large sum of money years ago, when a man offered to bet me that I could not name the book containing a certain quotation. I refused to bet because it was too easy; and I told him he would find the passage he had in mind, in Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations."

* * * *

Since then, however, I have often sought phrases in vain in Bartlett's volume and in Hoyt's huge "New Cyclopedia of Practical Quotations;" though they are both useful and valuable works, and I keep them continually at hand.

Now, in addition to these two reference books, comes looming over the horizon, like a gorgeous sunrise in the world of literature, "The Home Book of Quotations—Ancient and Modern," by Burton Stevenson. And how much more valuable and reliable this is than any book of quotations on the stock market; for these quotations do not lose their value.

I salute the publishers (Dodd, Mead & Co.) for their courage in this enterprise; it must have cost a fortune to produce such a tome. It contains 2,605 pages; the type is easily readable and the paper satisfactory.

* * * *

There are three noble indexes—Table of Contents, Index of Authors, Index and Concordance—so that a man in a hurry can find what he wants speedily.

The editor correctly states that the great problem in a work so huge as this is to find the right quotation with a minimum of search. He has done his best to help us, and a prefatory page might be called First Aid to Readers.

The book is appropriately dedicated to his publisher, Frank C. Dodd.

It has already become an indispensable part of the furniture of my house.

Reynolds Estate Sold to Daughter

Mrs. Mary R. Babcock Buys Winston-Salem Property.

Winston Salem, N. C., Dec. 19 (AP). Mrs. Mary Reynolds Babcock, of New York, daughter of the late R. J. Reynolds, was disclosed today to have purchased Reynolda Estate, family home of the tobacco family.

The purchase was made from Reynolds, Inc., whose capital stock is held by the Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, trustee under the will of Mrs. Katherine Reynolds Johnston, mother of Mrs. Babcock. The price was not made known here.

Besides the huge family home, the estate includes several thousand acres of farm lands, a golf course, an artificial lake with a hydroelectric power plant, a church, parsonage, schools, greenhouses, workshops, telephone exchange and several homes for the retinue of employes.

Mrs. Babcock's younger brother, Smith Reynolds, was living at Reynolda with Libby Holman, Broadway star and his bride of a few months, when he was fatally shot on July 6, 1932.

Profitable Business Will Expand Lending

Viner Report Cites Minor, Not Deeper, Causes for Shrinkage of Bank Loans.

By Elliott Thurston.

THE Treasury credit survey, taken under the supervision of Prof. Jacob Viner, assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury; Charles O. Hardy, of the Brookings Institution, and Prof. S. H. Nerlove, of the University of Chicago, and just made public, ought to dispose of the fallacy that the bankers are at fault for the failure of bank loans to expand.

Undoubtedly bankers have become much more cautious, as a result of sad experience since the depression. Bank examiners, riled by unjust public criticism of their supposed laxity, have no doubt tended to become more rigid. The drive for liquidity, which Prof. Berle has so vividly brought to light, tends to discourage longer term lending. Some sound and solvent borrowers have no doubt been denied credit which could safely be extended in their own and in the public interest.

Nevertheless, it must be clear from the so-called Viner report, that the basic trouble is the lack of borrowers rather than the lack of banking facilities. The report is not addressed to this point, though the survey was undertaken, according to its introduction, for the purpose of finding out, among other things, whether there is, in fact, an "unwillingness of business men to assume the risk of borrowing."

In a foreword the authors say, "No alarm need be felt . . . merely because of the failure of the bank loan figures to expand. What is important is the question whether credit is available for those business men who do need added funds if they are to be able to make their appropriate contributions to the rising volume of business."

* * * *

But the banker, certainly, will question this assertion that no alarm need be felt. Perhaps alarm is too strong a word. In any case, the important thing in general banking opinion is why bank credit does not expand. It never was so abundant. Excess reserves never even approached the staggering and dangerous volume they have now reached. And yet, between January and August, both inclusive, of this year, the member banks in the seventh Federal Reserve district, studied by the survey, collected $696,000,000 in loans, paid off or curtailed, and made loans of only $629,000,000.

Here is a shrinkage, a net liquidation, as the report states, of $67,000,000. It was offset in part at least by extensions of credit by the land banks, by the HOLC and other Federal lending. Nevertheless, the shrinkage in this typical, important and highly diversified area can not be laid to lack of banking facilities or to undue caution or rigidity. The banking facilities are there. Available credit is practically unlimited. The bankers want to make sound loans.

It is plain enough from the report, even though it is not directed to this point, that making due allowance for increased timidity or rigidity the real trouble is the lack of sound borrowers who want or need money for commercial operations. Otherwise stated, the prospects for making a profit do not exist sufficiently to induce borrowers to ask for loans or bankers to feel justified in making them. And the reasons why the prospects for making a profit do not exist are to be found in other causes than undue banking stringency.

* * * *

THIS is not meant to imply that the Viner report is actually or deliberately misleading. It is an impressive study, apparently impartial and remarkably complete. It is an important contribution. Yet it would be most unfortunate if it should divert attention from the basic difficulties, simply because it concentrates upon certain evidently well-considered and proper changes designed to relax unduly rigid requirements.

The best banking practice, built on long experience, agrees with the report's conclusion that the Federal Reserve system should not be made into an instrument for making capital loans. Similarly, sound banking will accept the conclusion that an intermediate system may be needed to supply loans which are too long for commercial banks and too short for investment banker financing.

Yet, here again, there is danger of putting too much emphasis upon continued relaxation of sound banking rules and too little upon creation of conditions under which business can operate profitably under existing rules. The inference from the report is that the RFC has been too exacting in its lending requirements. This may be so, but it is, after all, a matter of opinion. The vital thing is to fix the attention of public officials upon the reasons why existing credit is not being utilized and not on how to break down safeguards which experience has shown to be necessary to the protection of the too often forgotten bank depositor.

* * * *

IN so far as the Viner report confines itself to recommendations for facilitating, rather than relaxing requirements for, loans, it will be accepted as an intelligent, useful contribution. So far as it tends to divert attention from the basic troubles in the economic system, so far as it suggests that commercial bankers should go in for capital loans, or loans on longer terms than prudent practice has demonstrated to be incompatible with commercial banking, it will hinder, not help the situation.

It is evident from the report that the volume of unsatisfied demand for loans that can be justified upon any prudent banking basis is remarkably small. It is apparent that even if all of the report's recommendations were immediately put into effect, there would be no material upturn in business. In other words, such improvements or modifications as the report suggests are relatively minor.

Recovery will come from removing such obstacles as are presented by the securities act, the uncertainity over NRA and other costs, over labor, budgetary and tax problems—not by any more attempts to break down the rules of sound banking.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

(The scene is a fireside on Christmas morning. Father and mother are hurriedly putting the finishing touches on the butler, who is to play Santa Claus.)

Mother (as she smoothes out some wrinkles in the Santa Claus coat)—You look perfect, Hudson.

Butler—It's very nice of you to say so, ma'am.

Mother (to father)—I'm so glad we can give Junior a good Christmas this year.

Father (as he hands the butler his white wriskers)—So am I. It's been pretty tough picking for us Republicans; but depression or no depression, I decided to give Junior a big surprise.

Mother—You shouldn't go around admitting you're a Republican, my dear.

Father (shoving the butler out as the disguise is completed)—Now, remember, you come in when I snap my fingers.

Butler—Very good, sir.

Willie (from his room)—Mommer!

Mother—Come, darling!

Willie—Ooh-h-h-! Gee!

Mother—And we've got another big surprise for you, sweet!

Willie—Ooh-h-h-h! Golly, mommer!

Father (pointing to the tree)—Isn't that wonderful, W'llie?

Mother—Just a minute.

(Father snaps his fingers and the butler comes in as Santa Claus. He sets his bag beside the tree and tries to seem very merry and genuine.)

Mother (to little Willie)—See? Do you know who that is?

Willie—Sure I know who it is. (Pointing to his father.) He told me.

Mother (to the father, in surprise)—You told him!

Father—Why, no! Of course not.

Willie—Yes, you did, daddy.

Mother—Well, who is it, Willie?

Pointing the Finger.

New York City will now put its new 2 per cent sales tax on all meals costing more than one dollar. In other words, a cheese sandwich in a Park avenue restaurant will cost you $1.02.

This is going to mean the disappearance of the dollar dinner and the debut of the ninety-nine cent table d'hote.

Since the tax will be on food and liquor, Elmer Twitchell is going to solve the problem by going to a saloon and bringing his lunch.

Boy Hunter Wounded, Treated at Hospital

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—With a load of shot in his right hip and some of the pellets in his right finger, James Wright, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, of Darkesville, this county, was brought to a hospital Tuesday.

The lad said he and Reginald Bidgett, 13, were hunting, using a gun carried by the Bidgett boy. The weapon had been put down for a time, and, the Wright boy thinks, it must have become dislodged, striking the trigger and discharging the load.

County Board to Meet.

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 19 (Spl.). The St. Marys County Commissioners will meet on December 27. This will be the first business meeting of the newly elected officials.

Business Asks $173,754,000 From Reserve

1,055 of 4,868 Requests Are Approved by Total of $51,387,000.

ume of this demand was less than is popularly believed.

The Viner report recommended that the Federal Reserve banks be relieved of the responsibility of making direct loans to industry on the ground that this type of credit conflicts with responsibilities of the banks as supervisors of the lending investment policies of member banks. Abolition of the industrial advisory committees, set up by the Glass act, was recommended by the Viner report if the reserve banks were not relieved of the direct loan responsibility.

The industrial committee chairmen made no comment on these proposals, but announcement of what their groups had accomplished was interpreted as an effort to justify their work. The purpose of the meeting, called before the Viner report was made, was to obtain an exchange of ideas to stimulate the direct loans to industry campaign.

Emphasis, however, was placed by the industrial committee chairmen on the opportunities open to commercial banks to make industrial loans which may be covered by commitments from the reserve banks to rediscount or purchase such advances on request.

Under the Glass act the reserve banks assume 80 per cent liability for such advances when made. The member bank making the loan is responsible only for 20 per cent of the loss, if any. The reserve banks have made such commitments totaling $7,120,000.

Loans Are Liquid.

"Industrial advances covered by such commitments are among the most liquid assets that member banks can hold," the industrial committee chairmen asserted in a formal statement.

"Experience brought out at our conference indicates that as a result of the readiness of the Federal Reserve banks to grant commitments to take over such loans, an increasing number of businesses in need of working capital are finding it possible to get the desired credit through their local banks.

"This is a hopeful condition and since the provision of the law authorizing the Federal Reserve Bank to make commitments to banks and other financing institutions limits the risk that need be assumed by the latter and gives to the advances a liquid character, it is to be expected that an increasing number of applicants to whom advances may be made on a sound and reasonable basis will be able to obtain their requirements from their local institutions."

The committee also pointed out that the $44,124,000 in loan applications approved by the reserve banks were not fully indicative of the benefits of the provisions of the Glass act. In many instances, the committee reported, commercial banks have taken over such loans when it appeared the advance would be made by the reserve banks and that in other cases the knowledge that the reserve banks will make such loans has encouraged banks to make loans that they otherwise might have rejected.

Tungsten to Be Offered For American Boats

Hong Kong, Dec. 19 (AP).—An exchange of tungsten for United States Shipping Board vessels was contemplated by the provincial government of Kwangtung Province today.

The government instructed its Washington representative, Lee Fang, to negotiate for the purchase. Lee Fang also is under orders to promote the sale of tungsten in the United States. The vessels would be turned over to a semiofficial Canton company for use in a coastal service.

Work Starts on Highway Link in West Virginia

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—Work was started today on the new State highway link which starts at Nollville, a mile west of here, and is to be built southwestward through Mills Gap to Forks of Cacapon, thence across a narrow strip in Virginia and through Hampshire County to tap Route 50 several miles east of Romney.

A force of 40 men from relief rolls here started the work. The crew on the road job will be increased as work is organized, indicated Maj. Marshall McDonald, junior district road engineer.

Social and Club Notes
Of Towns and Cities in Nearby States

Warrenton, Va.—A progressive dinner following the trend of a fox hunt was given this week in honor of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Amory Carhart, as guests from Loudoun, Fauquier and Rappahannock counties pursued their courses in the spirit of the chase.

A chartered bus furnished transportation for the "field" as they made their "run" past the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wallach, William Streett, William Doeller and Sterling Larrabee. The main course was served at the Carhart apartment.

Entertainment was furnished throughout the "hunt" by three professional entertainers imported from New York for the occasion.

Marriage License Issued.

Harpers Ferry, W. Va.—A marriage license was issued in New York to Miss Margaret G. Doll, 26, native of Harpers Ferry, now New York, and Baron Yurgen H. von Stackelberg, 32, aviation engineer of New York.

Miss Doll is a daughter of Charles P. and Mary Gude Doll. Baron von Stackelberg was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, a son of Alexander and Valentine Zilberg von Stackelberg.

Club to Give Pageant.

Crozet, Va.—The Woman's Club will present Dr. Russell Bowie's pageant, "The Holy Grail," as a community project in the Claude Crozet School auditorium Sunday night.

The pageant is being directed by Mrs. S. S. Lockhart, with Mrs. J. W. Clark in charge of music. Mrs. F. P Nelson has charge of costumes, Mrs. H. M. Wayland, staging, and Mrs. F. T. Renick, art.

Principal characters include Kitty Nelson, Sara Clark, Dorothy Warick, Martha MacLeod, Marie Gill, Ann Garth, Mildred Mitchell, Sara Littleton, Beverly Roberts, Virginia Jarsuan, Louise Clark, Chlotilde Jarsuan, Mrs. M. G. Garnett, Marion G. Garnett, Temple Rea, Sinclair Foster, William Driscoll, John MacLeod, Irvin Starke, Ray Warrick, jr., James Sandridge and Wilson Wyant. The pageant reader will be Mary Jones.

Hospital Auxiliary Elects.

Cumberland, Md.—Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum was elected first president of the Memorial Hospital Auxiliary at its organization meeting. Other officers elected are:

Vice president, Mrs. Robert A. Compton; treasurer, Mrs. Gerard Everstine; secretary, Mrs. Frank M. Wilson; financial secretary, Mrs. Arthur J. Weber. The directors at large are: Mrs. Mary Crowe, Mrs. Isaac Hirsch, Mr. George W. Legge, Mrs. Fleming W. Burrows, Mrs. Wyllys R. Hodges and Mrs. James W. Thomas.

Committee members include Mrs. Robert R. Henderson, Mrs. William W. Brown, Mrs. W. Ralph Bretz, Mrs. Lloyd J. Lanich, Mrs. Edward H. White, Mrs. Joseph Klawan, Mrs. Howard T. Robinson, Mrs. Victor D. Royce Hodges, Mrs. Webster K. Edwards, Mrs. John A. Pindley, Mrs. Walter C. Capper, Mrs. James H. Cook, Mrs. Morton Peskin, Mrs. David Davis, Miss Nell Bane and Miss Marie Holsshu.

35 Riders at Hunt.

Charlottesville, Va.—The weekly fox hunt of the Farmington Hunt Club furnished rare sport for a field of 35 riders, who included George Grande, author of "The Silver Horn," and William Knapp, both of Long Island, guests of Mrs. Cary Jackson at her home at Keswick.

Hounds were cast at Ingleside, home of Mrs. William Garth, and during the chase two foxes were jumped.

The next fixture for the Farmington Hunt is a drag Saturday afternoon at the home of Richard O. Hall, Keswick, former president of the Virginia Foxhunters Association. After the drag the riders and members of the hunt will be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Bogert at the Keswick Hunt Club.

George W. Koiner, for 34 Years Head of State's Agriculture Bureau, Describes Department Growth and Increasing Value to Farmer.

By Warren A. McNeill
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19.—Why has the State department of agriculture grown from what the commissioner called "a mere fertilizer bureau," with a personnel of three and an appropriation of $6,000 in 1900 to a division which last year spent $369,000, or approximately four-fifths of 1 per cent of the State's expenditures?

How does it serve the farmer, in whose interests it has been built up? What activities does it carry on requiring use of two and a half of the 11 floors of the State office building?

These were among the queries taken on behalf of the mythical citizen, Mr. Virginius Taxpayer, to George W. Koiner who has headed the department for 34 years—twice as long as any similar official in the United States.

The inquiry led to a tour of the top portion of the State office building—the entire eleventh and twelfth floors and part of the tenth. It involved walking through numerous rooms filled with flasks, test-tubes, burners and bottles; to acquaintance with chemists, marketing experts, statisticians, plant and animal experts, and to scanning of numerous publications intended to inform the farmer of facts pertinent to his business or to bring Virginia's products to the attention of buyers on markets outside of the State.

Aim of Department.

This function of the State Government, in the opinion of Mr. Koiner, is not in line for retrenchment but must continue to expand as agricultural producers make their desire for further services more evident and the general assembly is persuaded to provide additional funds to meet these needs.

Mr. Koiner said that fees paid by producers or others for testing or inspecting services now provide income to cover approximately half the cost of carrying on the department's work, the rest being paid for out of public funds.

To drop any of the services now rendered, the Comissioner said, would be to invite lowering of standards or introduction of fraud where the State now gives assurance of proper value in tested feeds and fertilizer bought by the farmer and standard quality in inspected products sold to consumers. He expressed regret that reduced appropriations already had forced curtailment of the publicity activities which included distribution of a Virginia handbook and certain bulletins containing information the department regards as valuable for the farmer.

Supply Information.

In addition to its regularly organized work, Mr. Koiner said that his department last year sent out more than 30,000 letters answering individual requests for information and gave practical information to thousands of persons who called personally at the department offices to ask for advice.

He spoke particularly of the value of the fertilizer testing law, which he sponsored as a member of the General Assembly before beginning his long period of service in the department, and of the testing of seeds.

Seed which looks perfectly all right even to an experienced farmer may all be dead, Mr. Koiner said, and no mere examination will show the true value of a fertilizer, which the old-fashioned farmer too often judged by its odor—the stronger the odor, the more valuable the fertilizer.

Test of Seed.

Now, however, seeds sold in the State must pass the department of agriculture tests for trueness to type and germinating qualities and fertilizers must come within stated limits of the analysis marked on the bag.

In its fertilizer law, Mr. Koiner said, Virginia goes farther than any other State in the Union, giving additional protection to the farmer by a provision that if the manufacturer fails to make financial adjustment after selling fertilizer of substandard quality, the State may seize his stock, sell as much of it as necessary and reimbursed the previous buyer directly.

In adoption of inspection and grading laws, likewise, this State has been a leader, originating the practice of grading a number of products and now carrying on a more varied program than that of any other State.

The commissioner discussed briefly the functions of the divisions of markets, statistics, plant industry, animal industry, dairy and foods, and chemistry as he led the way through their offices.

(In the next article of this series, appearing in The Post on Saturday, the several functions of the State department of agriculture are described in more detail.)

Peery Pardons Score; Others May Be Freed

There's Really No Yuletide Clemency as Such, but Cases Are Sped.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—It will be a really "merry" Christmas for approximately a score of convicts, pardoned by Gov. Peery and free with new suits of clothes and the small sums of money they were able to save from their tiny allowance during the period of their confinement.

There are no "Christmas pardons," the executive said today, explaining that each case is decided strictly on its merits and in the same manner as at any other season of the year. An effort has been made, however, in recent days, to push to a conclusion a number of pending cases so that the prisoners involved, if pardoned, could be freed before Christmas.

About a score have been released during the last week and one or two others may get out later this week, the Governor said. Approximately the same number of petitions have been refused during this same period.

When there is a pardon request, the prisoner's record during his confinement first is investigated. If it then appears that he deserves consideration the Commonwealth's attorney who convicted him and the judge who presided at his trial are consulted. After their opinions have been obtained the Governor exercises his discretion.

So, Gov. Peery explained, he hopes there will be no last-minute rush of applications between now and Christmas. They would have to follow the usual course, and those who are to get this form of Christmas gift already have been spotted and, in most cases, already are enjoying it.

Wayne Band Renames George Arnold Director

Waynesboro, Pa., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—The Wayne Band of Waynesboro, one of the oldest in the Cumberland Valley, has reorganized for the year by reelecting George H. Arnold, director.

Other officers of the band are: assistant director, Walter Stenger; president, Jesse Metz; vice president, Marshall Smith; secretary, Ernest C. Larrabee; treasurer, Merle Benchoff; business manager, J. R. Zook, and trustee, Frank Good.

Robert F. Duer Heads Somerset County Bar

Princess Anne, Md., Dec. 19 (AP). Former Judge Robert F. Duer, who was defeated last month for reelection to the bench of the first judicial circuit, heads the Somerset County Bar Association for the ensuing year.

Judge Duer was elected president of the association at its annual meeting at the courthouse here. State's Attorney-elect F. Kirk Maddrix was chosen secretary and H. Fillmore Lankford, of Princess Anne, treasurer.

9:15 p. m.—"La Forza Del Destino," opera in tabloid version—WOL.
10:00 p. m.—Mammoth Minstrels, with Ephraim Lee, black-face star—WJSV.
11:30 p. m.—Christmas carols sung by local theater audience, led by Arthur Godfrey—WJSV.

NOW WJSV has gone a step farther with Christmas Carol programs. It has arranged to broadcast singing by audiences gathered at the Fox Theater today, tomorrow and Sunday at 11:30 p. m. for a half hour each night, with Arthur Godfrey leading the singing.

Admission is free (at 11:30 p. m.) and words of all carols will be flashed on the screen. One of Washington's leading clergymen will address the audience each night with a message of Christmas cheer. A collection will be taken for the benefit of Godfrey's Christmas Fund, which will be devoted to providing poor children with toys.

The carol singing will go on Saturday night at 11:30 p. m. but WJSV will not broadcast the result that night.

FLASH! Quintuplet fans please take notice! The Dionne sisters will be heard today in their radio howling debut on WJSV.

It appears that WJSV officials were merely plaguing Arthur Godfrey when they announced Tuesday that under no circumstances would that lad's Gazette be interrupted tonight to carry the Dionne infant broadcast. But Arthur's well-known love for infants was overlooked. He actually pleaded with WJSV officials to break into the middle of his sponsored program to bring the sisters' howls to Washington.

So a CBS engineer, starting at 8:15 p. m., when the Dionne program goes on the network, will listen with headphones and the moment the infants begin to howl, WJSV will flash the program to Washington and Godfrey and his cohorts will sit down and mop their brows until the howling ceases. Then the engineer will put Godfrey back on the air.

A DIGEST of America's front pages, entitled "Headlines of 1934," presenting the 10 biggest news stories of the year, will be dramatized today at 9:30 p. m. on WMAL from a list selected by news executives of the United Press. The broadcast will re-enact news most eagerly followed by newspaper readers during the past 12 months.

THIS department recently informed its readers that both N. B. C. and C. B. S. would have to wait this year until a new Speaker was elected until permission to broadcast the opening of Congress could be obtained.

N. B. C. officials, knowing this, withheld announcement of the broadcast. C. B. S., however, announced that it had "completed plans with congressional leaders" to broadcast the opening. We do not challenge either network's intention to carry the event and so print the following letter from Majority Leader Joseph W. Byrns, addressed to N. B. C., further to clear up the matter:

"I have no objection whatever to your broadcasting the proceedings of the opening session," the letter says. "In fact, I would like to see it done. Of course, you understand that I have no authority in the premises and will not have until after I am elected on January 3."

Majority Leader Byrns concludes that it can be arranged with the "Hon. Joe Sinnott" and asks N. B. C. to confer with him.

"Station Breaks."

JOHNNY SLIAUGHTER'S Band, at the Willard Hotel, will begin broadcasting for A. B. S. at the end of December through WOL . . . The famed English Singers, slated for the next Library of Congress musicale on C. B. S., will be guests with Rudy Vallee today at 8 p. m. on WRC. Also appearing on the bill are Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon in a specially written playlet . . . Big Christmas gift for A. B. S. will be the addition of its twenty-first station, WCOL, Columbus, Ohio, to its network on Christmas Day . . . Molasses and January, blackface favorites, currently appearing at the Earle, again will welcome visitors to WRC tonight during their broadcast at 9 o'clock on Capt. Henry's Showboat . . . Ephraim Lee and his multiple minstrels offer the following tonight at the Willard at 10 o'clock: Larry Elliott, singing "Bake That Chicken Pie;" Justin Laurie, singing "Song of the Flame;" Bill Baine, singing "Throw Another Log on the Fire;" the chorus in "Mandy Lee," and Mr. Lee in his own inimitable rendition of "Truthful Parson Brown" . . . Jimmie Wilkinson, after singing "I Love Life" on an N. B. C. Southeast web the other night, got a letter from Mana Zucca, author of the song, praising his rendition of it . . . Johnny Marvin, the N. B. C. tenor, who reads no music but sings it swell, starts a week's appearance at the Earle tomorrow . . . New York's famed Grace Church Choir boys, ranging in age from 10 to 13 years, will sing Christmas carols on A. B. S. today at 7 p. m. . . . Paul Whiteman presents Helen Jepson on his variety show tonight at 10 o'clock Also appearing with him will be Derek Oldham, leading tenor of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, currently occupied with Gilbert and Sullivan pieces. Oldham will sing "The Wandering Minstrel," from "The Mikado," and "Two Sparkling Eyes," from "The Princess Ida."

Air Nurse to Bears.

Cheyenne, Wyo. (U.P.)—Sky nurse to a family of three honey bears was the unusual distinction of Miss Mary Mannion, who brought them on a United Air Liner through Cheyenne on the way to San Francisco. The honey bears, about the size of racooons, belonged to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Robinson, worldwide explorers.

Dr. Ray O. Hall Given National Economic Post

Washingtonian to Join Conference Board Staff in N. Y.

Dr. Ray Ovid Hall, of Washington, former chief economist of the Indian Land Unit, National Resources Board, has just been appointed chief economist of the National Industrial Conference Board, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Hall left this week to assume his new duties in New York.

The conference board is an organization of many years' standing for statistical research into finance and business and is financed principally by contributions from a large number of trade associations. Dr. Hall will conduct researches into international accounts, a field in which he is a recognized authority.

A member of the diplomatic service for a number of years, he holds the degree of doctor of philosophy in economics from Columbia University. He has held successively the posts of assistant treasurer and instructor in commercial subjects at Robert College, Constantinople; lecturer on industrial history and economics, Cooper Union Institute, New York; director of the Peping School of Commerce and Finance; teacher of business administration, Alexander Hamilton Institute, New York; regional economist on the Near East for the State Department; assistant chief, East European Division, and commercial attache at Athens and Constantinople for the Commerce Department, and investigator of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act for the Social Science Research Council.

Interior Building Strike Is Settled

Carpenters Return Today; School Tie-up Also Ends.

Settlement of the carpenter's strike on the Interior Building's seventh-story addition was announced yesterday by D. S. Scott, construction superintendent of McCloskey & Co., and J. A. Rinis, union business agent.

The men will return to work this morning at a scale of $1.25 an hour. They were receiving that rate until the walkout was called last Monday in protest against its being lowered to $1.10.

Adjustment of the dispute, which was effected without outside aid, also means the return to work of union carpenters on the new Woodrow Wilson High School. They also struck Monday in sympathy with the Interior Building workmen. Both projects are under contract to McCloskey & Co.

Between 30 and 35 carpenters were involved in both walkouts, according to Rinis. The Interior Building addition is a PWA improvement, while the school is being built under regular appropriation by the District government.

Dern Set to Take Part In Philippine Inaugural

Secretary Dern will be the Administration's chief envoy at next year's ceremonies inaugurating the new Philippine commonwealth, the Associated Press says.

The War Department head has told Commissioner Pedro Guevara of the Philippines that he will go to Manila prior to the inauguration, which is scheduled for either next July or September. Uncertainty over the adoption of the final form of the new constitution has made the date a matter of conjecture.

HERBERT R. O'CONOR, of Baltimore, who will take the oath of office today as Attorney General of Maryland.

O'Conor Assumes Attorney Generalship of Maryland Today.

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP).—Attorney General-elect Herbert R. O'Conor today submitted his resignation as State's attorney of Baltimore City.

The resignation will be effective tomorrow, when O'Conor will be sworn in as attorney general. At special ceremonies in criminal court, O'Conor also submitted a report covering the 11 years he has been State's attorney.

Judge George A. Solter announced that J. Bernard Wells, deputy prosecutor under O'Conor, would be appointed to serve the rest of O'Conor's term. Well's elective term as State's attorney begins January 7.

Eucharistic Congress Off to February, '37

Manila, P. I., Dec. 19 (AP).—The thirty-third Eucharistic Congress, to be held in Manila, will convene February 3 to 7, 1937, Archbishop Michael J. O'Doherty announced today.

The date was changed after pilgrims complained the original meeting time, in early December, would prevent them from enjoying Christmas at home.

Rites Today for Army Victim of Plane Crash

San Francisco, Dec. 19 (AP).—Funeral services for Lieut. William C. Reeves, U. S. A., killed in an airplane crash near here Sunday, will be held tomorrow at the Presidio.

Lieut. Reeves' father, Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States fleet, and his eldest son, Joseph, jr., will accompany the body to Annapolis for burial, leaving tomorrow night.

Italians Guilty, Ethiopian Note Tells League

Emperor Reiterates Charge of Aggression After Rome's Warning.

Geneva, Dec. 19 (AP).—The dispute between Italy and Ethiopia over responsibility for clashes between their garrisons on the frontier between Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland assumed increasingly alarming proportions today.

Emperor Haile Selassie's government sent the League of Nations a second communication, reiterating charges of "Italian aggression" and accusing Italy of illegal occupation of Ethiopian territory.

The protest charged that Italian troops stationed at Ualual, near the border, opened fire on an Ethiopian detachment without provocation. The attack, it said, menaced members of an international boundary commission and brought forth a protest from the British commissioner.

[Italian reports said 35 Italians and 110 Ethiopians were killed or injured in the encounter. Rome blamed the Ethiopians for inciting the attack.]

The protest to the League of Nations accused an Italian army officer of giving the signal for an attack by a blast on his whistle.

"Suddenly," it said, "airplanes dropped bombs and a tank fired machine guns. The Ethiopian machine guns were still under cover and not in battle position. All officers, with the exception of sentries, were in their tents."

Two clashes between Italian and Ethiopian border forces along the undefined frontier between Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland have been the subject of controversy in the last two months.

Prize Winners Named in Toy, Doll Contests

Jane Hampton Awarded Coveted 'Shirley Temple' in Post Event.

Old-fashioned dolls, with lace pantaloons peeping from beneath quaint print frocks, vied with dark-haired beauties in Spanish mantillas and rag dolls when the judges in The Post doll and toy contest set about the task of awarding prizes. Girls showed excellent taste and careful workmanship in dressing dolls for the contest, and boys, who entered home-made toys, displayed remarkable ingenuity in making hobby horses, battleships, dolls' furniture, model airplanes and bird houses.

After a full morning of deliberation, the judging committee, headed by Miss Katherine Smith, of The Post staff, awarded the Shirley Temple doll, first prize in the older girls' group, to Jane Hampton, 1321 Euclid street northwest. Jane made a complete outfit for a doll, a blue and white dress with inverted pleats, a cloth coat carefully lined and a matching hat. The Shirley Temple doll was one of 20 prizes offered by Lansburgh's Toy Department, which cooperated with The Post in the contest. The complete list of prize winners, with the awards they won, follows:

Older Girls:

Younger girls:

Louise Koester, 3100 Fourteenth street northeast, doll's coach.

Edith Nelson, 1830 Jackson place northeast, Shirley Temple doll, a smaller size than was awarded for first place in the other group, but a faithful model of the motion-picture star.

Wins Doll's House.

Older boys:

Grayson H. Johnson, 50 East Myrtle avenue, Alexandria, Va., won a streamline train, a sleek aluminum model patterned after the most modern train on rails today. Grayson made a sturdy sled and also an eight-compartment bird house for the contest.

Bobby Winans, 110 Myrtle avenue, Mount Ida, Alexandria, Va., won an American flier train for making a wooden hobby horse to hang in a doorway for a child to swing on.

H. R. Rutland, jr., 1851 Wyoming avenue, receives a chemcraft set for making two model airplanes.

Battleships Take Prize.

Robert Sorrell, Germantown, Md., submitted two wooden battleships and was awarded a football.

Jaime Cester, Hotel Roosevelt, fashioned a huge battleship, complete to swiveling guns and lifeboats that lower on threads, from cardboard. He receives a caster set for his ingenuity and skill.

Younger Boys.

Vincent Shields, 1604 Newton street, northeast, won a Sky King velocipede for making a set of toy furniture, carved from cigar boxes and painted. This included living room, dining room and bedroom suites. The velocipede, a new, stream-lined model, was the coveted first prize in the younger boys' group.

Richard Koester, 3100 Fourteenth street northeast, won a Streak-o-lite wagon, for making a scale-model airplane.

Airplane Maker Rewarded.

Robert Duffy, 1842 Caley street northwest, also made a model airplane and won a steel wagon.

Richard Taylor won a fire truck by making a scrap book.

George Finch, jr., 100 Virgilia street, Chevy Chase, made and painted a set of lead soldiers and was awarded a magic lantern.

The number of entries in the older boys' group so far exceeded those in the other group that the age limit in the second group was raised to make a fairer distribution of prizes. The two first prize winners, however, are both under 10 years of age.

In addition to the 20 prizes given by Landsburgh's toy department, 7 were offered by the Hecht Co. for girls from 14 to 18. Announced later than the original contest, this group had so few entries that only one prize was awarded, and the other six were distributed among girls in the other groups, where the entries were so numerous that judging presented a difficult task.

Makes, Dresses Rag Doll.

Ruby Sullivan, 15, of Upper Marlboro, Md., will receive a bingo game for a rag doll which she not only dressed but made.

Other prizes from the Hecht Co. were awarded as follows:

Lucy Morris, Manassas, Va., bingo game.

Betty Cochran, 923 North Carolina street southeast, Henrik Van Loon Wide World game.

Julia Mills, 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest, Henrik Van Loon Wide World game.

Peggy Kennedy, 2434 Wisconsin avenue northwest, paint set.

Lena Vinokouroff, Forest Glen, Md., paint set.

As previously announced, all dolls and toys entered in the contest will be donated to The Post Toy Fund, to be distributed to needy children at Christmas.

Prizes will be presented to the winners Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Post Toy Fund headquarters, 1418 H street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. Children who can not go there for their awards will receive theirs by mail.

Income Levies In States Add To Wealth Tax

New York Collects Most Money Out of 30 Levying Such Imposts.

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP).—Sharp boosts in State income tax rates in the last two years, despite increases in Federal personal and corporation income taxes, were added to the total Government levy on wealth in the United States, a survey by the Interstate Commerce Commission on conflicting taxation showed today.

There now are 30 income-taxing States in the Union, according to the survey, prepared by James W. Martin, research director of the commission.

Martin's study indicated income tax rates have been increased in three ways: The maximum rates have been raised; exemptions have been lowered so that the tax now frequently applies to incomes of lower middle-class citizens, and in many States the graduation has been made steeper.

Some of the facts brought out by the survey were:

New York collected the most money for the fiscal year ended June 30 of all income-taxing States. New York's revenue from the personal income tax and the franchise tax amounted to more than $70,000,000. New Mexico, deriving the lowest aggregate yield, received less than $85,000.

In terms of average revenue per person, New York enjoyed the maximum yield, receiving $5.60 per capita. Arkansas got only 11 cents per capita for corporation and personal taxes combined.

From the revenue point of view, income taxation is much more feasible in States with high per capita wealth. Per capita yield of personal income taxes in Delaware, for example, is seven times as great as in Virginia, although the rate is approximately 20 per cent lower. Per capita yield in New York was about 73 times that of Arkansas in the year ended June 30, although rates in New York are only a trifle higher.

American U. Debaters Meet Penn State Team

The American University met Penn State College on the debate platform yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School for its second contest of the year. The local institution upheld the negative of the question, "Resolved, That the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions."

Edward Hopper, Sidney Sachs and Melvin Wheatley were the American University speakers, while James Townsend, speaking twice, and Aaron N. Decker represented Penn State. Adrienne Henderson presided.

Stores Looted Of Guns, Rifles

Police Fear Gangsters Are Replenishing Stocks in D. C. Burglaries.

Theft of 12 shotguns and rifles from the show windows of three downtown sporting goods stores was being investigated by police last night.

Believing it possible that the robberies might have been perpetrated by mobsters from gangland, seeking to replenish diminishing stocks of firearms, led Capt. Bernard Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, to assign Detectives H. E. Brodie and Leo Murray to the case.

Stores looted were the Atlas Co., at Eleventh and E streets northwest; the Army and Navy Trading Co., at 801 D street northwest, and Fogel's Army and Navy Store, at Tenth and D streets northwest.

At the Atlas store the robbers got a 12-gauge shotgun, a straight 10-gauge shotgun, a straight 12-gauge shotgun, a 16-guage Stevens pump gun and three knives.

From the Army and Navy Trading Co. a quantity of ammunition and several guns were missing, along with other sporting goods. Fogel's reported one shotgun, a .22-caliber rifle and a leather hunting jacket stolen.

Thieves smashed showrooms of four uptown stores last night. Police said they were seeking a young colored man for questioning in connection with the case.

Saar Truce On Over Christmas

Nazis and Foes Agree to Hold Peace in Holidays.

(Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.)

Saarbruecken, Saar Basin Territory, Dec. 19.—A Christmas truce to preserve tranquility in the Saar territory over the holiday was declared today by the League of Nations plebiscite commission.

Both Nazis and anti-Nazis were pledged to keep the peace from December 23 to December 27, hold no meetings and forget the imminence of the January 13 plebiscite to determine the future sovereignty of the Saar.

The truce was declared as 200 British Tommies, advance contingent of the international patrol force, occupied their billets.

Nazis, regarding the troops' arrival without demonstration, warned the young women of the Saar against forming any romantic attachment for the foreign soldiers.

Adkins Studies Wage Dispute In Cotton Code

Manufacturers Query Constitutionality of Amendment by Roosevelt.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of the District Supreme Court, last night took under advisement a dispute between 62 cotton garment manufacturers and the NRA as to the legality of an amendment to the Cotton Textile Code lowering hours 10 per cent a week, but maintaining a full weekly wage scale.

Making no contention that the code, in its original form as it was approved by the textile manufacturers, was illegal, the attorneys representing the industry claimed that the amendment which President Roosevelt inserted into the code last August was unconstitutional.

Cite Two Charges.

They based their charges on two grounds: That in lowering the weekly hour limit, but in keeping the same wage per week, the President was in effect taking property without due process of law, and that the plainstiffs were manufacturers only and that they were not subject to Federal control or regulation until their product had begun to move in interstate commerce.

While the raw goods was being manufactured into the finished product, it was charged, the Government was without power to impose its will. Such cases as the child labor amendment, which was held unconstitutional, and the attempt to regulate the hours of female employes, which was also held invalid, were cited in support of the contention.

See Unfair Competition.

The manufacturers, in the closing arguments yesterday, insisted they were being subjected to unfair competition at the hands of convict labor. In 29 States cotton garments are manufactured in penal institutions and were being offered in direct competition with the goods produced by free labor, they charged.

A code of fair competition has been drawn up for prison manufacturing plants as well as a Blue Eagle, somewhat dissimilar from that which is placed on the free labor product. The manufacturers asked Justice Adkins to rule that the prison-made garments be so labeled that the consumer will know whether he is buying "outside" or "inside" goods.

The record in the case already involves three large volumes and a large batch of loose papers and records. Justice Adkins indicated he would attempt to render an opinion this week because the Christmas holidays, starting Saturday, will prolong the matter unless he can determine the case before Friday night.

Life Sentences Given 4 Kidnapers Who Admit Guilt

Miami, Fla., Dec. 19 (AP).—Ten days after Dr. Santiago Claret, former Cuban editor, was left bound, gagged and tied to a post in an unfinished Miami Beach building, four men today were sentenced to life imprisonment on charges of kidnaping for ransom.

The men, including the former chauffeur of Dr. Claret, forced him to sign a $16,000 check, but wariness of bank officials and the escape of the victim from his bonds frustrated payment of the draft.

Those sentenced were indicted as J. Roy Gray, 26, the chauffeur; Fred H. Gray, 30, his brother; Sam Garelick, 37, formerly of Bayonne, N. J., a 'jitney" taxicab driver, and W. R. Millard, 45, "jitney" starter.

Although the men, indicted yesterday, pleaded guilty to kidnaping for ransom, which carries a maximum penalty of death in Florida, the State did not ask the extreme sentence and the defendants begged the court's mercy.

Returns From Benefit Fight Send Toy Fund Above $400

Post HeadquartersBesieged With Mother' Appeals for Assistance.

A check for $140.70 made out to The Post Toy Fund from the returns of the benefit fight at the Riding and Hunt Club Monday night carried The Post fund past the $400 milestone last night.

When Goldie Ahearn, matchmaker for the fight, arrived with the check at The Post there was great rejoicing because the fund was getting below the requests upon it from social welfare agencies in the city looking to it for money with which to purchase toys for their small charges.

The total of the gift check was made up as follows: The Riding and Hunt Club contributed $104.56, from Buck Everett came $26.14 and Steve Dudas gave $10, making the total of $140.70. Never was a fistic combat productive of more good works, for this money will mean that hundreds of needy children will rejoice in Christmas toys, as the result of the generosity of all concerned in the benefit fight.

Appeals Multiply.

The Post Toy Fund headquarters was besieged yesterday with appeals for assistance from many welfare organizations and most pathetic of all from mothers unable to provide toys for their children.

Boys and girls of Washington are looking forward to the benefit show at Keith's Theater on Saturday at 9 a. m. when the only ticket for adult and child alike is a new toy to be added to The Post Toy Fund. The Stage Hands and Operators unions are donating their services and in addition these two union organizations are giving $50 worth of new toys. Among the other features to be shown is "Babes in the Sea," a Techni-color animated cartoon, running currently at R. K. O.-Keiths. The children are anticipating the Buck Rogers feature "White Eagle," and the music of the National City Boys Band which is donating its services.

Two Trees Donated.

At The Post Toy Fund headquarters at 1418 H street northwest, two huge Christmas trees, donated by Vice President James of the National Commission Distributing Corporation, Fifth and Morse streets, have been decorated in blue and silver and are carrying their Christmas message of good will to the many visitors there.

Readers of The Washington Post are asked to bring their donations of new toys as soon as possible to the Toy Fund headquarters at 1418 H street northwest. It is hoped that last-minute contributions of cash will bring the total of the fund to within striking dsitance of the required $1,000 by Saturday night.

The public is again reminded that drivers of Terminal taxicabs will call for donations of toys and bring them to the headquarters without charge.

Report Shows Hospital Jam

Washington Tuberculosis Center Continues Overcrowded.

Continued overcrowding of the District Tuberculosis Hospital was reported during November in a report made public yesterday by Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, superintendent.

The hospital has 210 beds available for patients. During November the average number of patients was 218.7, or 104 per cent of capacity. In October the average daily number of patients was 214.5, or 102 per cent of capacity. In November last year there were 214.9 patients, 102.2 per cent of capacity.

Total number of days of care given patients during November was 6,561, in October it was 6,251, and in November last year it was 6,447.

"This increase in service," Dr. Peabody said, "was due to an increased demand for services and to a slightly longer average number of days' stay on the part of patients. The average stay was 28.2 days in November, 26.6 days in October and 27.8 days in November last year.

"In spite of the increased number of patients cared for the number of deaths were reduced. They numbered 37 in November last year, 33 in November this year. This shows the value of longer treatment and improved care."

County Offers Bounty For Wild Dogs' Heads

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—Berkeley County Court will pay $1 per head to the person who kills and disposes of unlicensed and untaxed dogs and presents satisfactory proof of the killing.

This is the latest effort in the move to rid the county of wild dogs, which have been praying upon sheep, turkeys and other property.

Crashes Kill 1 During Storm On Boulevard

Series of Accidents on Baltimore Highway Involves Police.

One man is dead, two others are seriously injured, and several more were treated at local hospitals after a series of auto accidents on the Baltimore boulevard yesterday.

Richard Anderson, 23, of Churchville, Va., was killed early yesterday when the truck he was driving collided with another near Beltsville. The two machines were wedged into one another by the crash, and it took more than an hour to free Anderson from the wreckage.

Anderson died last night in Casualty Hospital. Charles Ohland, 17, of New York, said to be the driver of the other truck, also is in Casualty Hospital with lacerations of the scalp and face. John Ohland, his brother, was taken to the same hospital to be treated for a dislocated hip, lacerations of the body, and a possible fractured skull. An inquest into Anderson's death has been set for January 16.

Rain Causes Crashes.

Police on the boulevard said that accident calls yesterday, due to the rain, were almost continuous. The auto of one policeman, responding to a report of a crash, was wrecked when it was in a collision with another machine.

Prince Georges County Policeman Albert Anderson was en route to a collision between Beltsville and Berwyn when another car crashed into the police machine. Anderson was not injured, but he charged the driver of the other vehicle with reckless driving.

Three persons were slightly hurt and one man was arrested as a result of the crash to which Anderson was bound. A car driven by Peter J. Dellemana, 29, a Bayonne, N. J., policeman, was in a head-on collision with another auto. Dellemma, who received slight cuts, was charged with reckless driving by Corpl. C. W. Cubbage, of the Maryland State Police.

Reckless Driving Charged.

Dellemana was returning to Bayonne from a Florida vacation. His wife, with him in the car, was treated by a nearby physician for slight injuries to the chest and head. Dellemana and his wife went to Bayonne by bus after he posted bond.

The other car involved in the Dellemana crash was occupied by Allen W. Grobin, of New York, and his wife, Emily. Both were taken to Casualty Hospital, where Grobin was treated for shock and bruises. Mrs. Grobin's injuries were diagnosed as a compound fracture of the nose, shock and multiple bruises.

A collision between an auto and a truck near College Park yesterday morning resulted in undetermined injuries to Kenneth Belt, 17-year-old freshman in the College of Engineering. Belt was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Engineer Held Liable For Deaths in Crash

Meaux, France, Dec. 19 (AP).—Lucien Daubigny, a railroad engineer, was charged by police today with responsibility for the deaths of the 200 persons who died in a train disaster at Lagny last Christmas Eve. Daubigny was the pilot of the speeding express which crashed into a standing train.

He was charged with homicide by "imprudence" in failure to heed a warning signal. The authorities accused him of running past four signals in the fog the night of the tragedy.

Big Business, Girding for Recovery, Counters Plan of New Deal

Leaders Draft Platform, Send It to Roosevelt

Oppose Made Work Plan and Suggest New Emergency Laws.

In a preamble to the resolutions, the conference declared that the task of bringing about recovery "calls for unselfish cooperation of all and that the Government, in exercising the proper responsibilities of leadership, is entitled to their whole-hearted support."

The statement continued: "The need for goods and equipment of every description necessary to the continuance of our economic program and the maintenance of those high standards of living to which America has become accustomed is daily growing more pressing. There is ample work to be done to require the employment of all the labor now idle and the use of all the capital that may be available."

Hits "Made Work."

While not mentioning the dole or direct relief specifically, the conference expressed firm opposition to creation of public works for providing relief, declaring that such operations "invite and definitely defer" a balanced budget. This opposition to "made work" is reflected in various sections of the platform.

In the section on Government competition, the conference declared that "programs for work relief do not justify the Government entering into competition with its private citizens in the production of goods and their distribution for relief purposes."

Relief, the conference held, is not the function of the Federal Government and the burden of relief should be returned to the States as soon as practicable. Wage rates on work relief projects to which the Government already is committed, the conference declared, should always be less than those of private industry in the same locality. The group, however, favored employment on necessary public construction.

Two Surveys Proposed.

Without committing itself either to unemployment insurance or the old-age pension, the conference went on record as favoring a study of both of these proposals, recognizing, at the same time, the fact that they can not provide immediate relief. It pointed out that knowledge was lacking regarding the detailed facts of unemployment, even to the extent of unemployment. Among the subjects recommended for study in this connection was "increasing inflexibility of wage scales and production costs."

The conference, on the subject of labor, declared flatly that the "Federal Government should not assume or attempt to control local relationships between employers and employes." It declared that employes and employers should be free to bargain "collectively or individually" without coercion from any source. It added that men should be protected in their right to work as well as in their right to strike and protected in their right to join or refrain from joining any labor union.

It declared for legal prohibition of sympathetic strikes and boycotts.

In opposing the proposal of labor for a 30-hour week the conference declared that such legislation "ignores the fundamental principle" that labor can not share what is not produced. It insisted that such limitations decrease the opportunity for employment by increasing the cost to the consumer.

Urges Even Budget.

On the subject of Federal finances, the conference went on record as favoring balancing the budget at the earliest possible date, and declared that further increase in the public debt beyond June 30, 1935, can be avoided. It demanded limitation of unemployment relief to an indispensible minimum and limiting expenditures for all emergency activities next year, including those for public works.

The resolution declared that a balanced budget by 1937 will contribute to business recovery and will allay fears of currency inflation. Spending by the Government in an effort to increase purchasing power retards rather than aids recovery, the conference insisted.

Return to the gold standard was advocated in these words: "Definite action by our Government to establish as soon as practicable a standard dollar with a fixed and unvarying content will be of unmeasurable benefit to business."

It pointed out that issuance of securities is being deferred by uncertainties attributable to the securities and exchange acts, and that "resumption and expansion of private enterprise will be aided by modifications of the securities act." While the conference held that the securities act is being administered with consideration of the legitimate requirements of issuers, it contains provisions which can place upon trade and industry unnecessary burdens.

"Economic Unity" Cited.

The conference recognized the economic unity of agriculture and industry and declared that limitation or undue restriction of production should be guarded against. It asked, however, that the Government develop a program for removing from agricultural use as much as is feasible of the land on which the production of crops is ordinarily unprofitable.

The durable goods section of the platform declared that a major offensive against the depression lies in establishment of such confidence that the people "dare look beyond their day-to-day needs."

As a means to this end the conference found necessary:

A free flow of private capital into private business.

A sound real estate mortgage market.

Low construction costs necessitating removal of artificial restraints curtailing volume and increasing costs, whether of material or labor.

The resolution asked that Federal construction be limited to a noncompetitive field. It set as a maximum of Federal activities "slum clearance and the limited construction of such low-cost housing as could not be accomplished commercially under normal conditions." Direct Government participation, it declared, "will inevitably ruin the sound program of the Federal Housing Administration."

"Destructive Competition."

The section of Government competition declared that when the Government enters a business it competes unfairly with the great mass of its own citizens. The Federal Government, the resolution said, is now competing in more than 200 different kinds of business.

"This destructive competition," the resolution said, "carrying with it the threat of extension into other fields, has profoundly shaken confidence.

"When it (the Government) employs the taxes of the citizen to menace his enterprise, it threatens the security of his job, the safety of his savings, and converts his compulsory support of his Government through taxation into a weapon for his injury."

The platform declared for an extension of American foreign trade and for establishment as soon as possible of world monetary standards. It also declared for negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements which will safeguard American industry.

On the subject of transportation the conference declared that "to the extent that Federal funds are available for loans it would seem prudent to make loans to National and local common carriers, where financially justified, on terms as reasonable as those made for other purposes."

Guns Assure Starling Pie For Congress

There'll be plenty of meat for a huge starling pie when Congress convenes January 3 if South Trimble, clerk of the House, decides to serve one again this year for the Speaker and his friends.

Capitol police, scornful of the toy balloons used by Clifford Lanham, District superintendent of trees and parking, last night inaugurated their annual war on starlings at the Capitol. They were armed with air guns this year, instead of shotguns with blank cartridges, as last year.

Stalking stealthily about the corridors of the Capitol, they gathered at windows just above a favorite starling roost, took aim, and then fired. At an early hour the casualties had not been counted, and the police declined to make optimistic predictions.

"It's all the fault of the District," one policeman commented. "They chase the starlings off the District Building and they come up here to roost; then Congressmen give us hell if we don't get rid of 'em."

Trimble still insists that starlings make excellent pie—providing you prepare them properly—but he has been unable to convince the members of Congress.

Last year, however, the late Speaker Henry Rainey and Majority Leader Joseph Byrns, together with other Democratic House leaders, smacked their lips at a starling pie lunch. Trimble told them the pie was made of reed bird.

"That's the best reed-bird pie I ever tasted," Byrns commented after the lunch.

Text of Joint Economic Conference's Report on U. S. Recovery

New NRA Is Suggested, With Voluntary Compliance.

The Joint Business Conference for Economic Recovery has reviewed the conditions under which trade and industry are now operating with a view to the identification of the problems involved in the improvement of business activity.

In making this survey, the conference has been actuated solely by the desire to direct attention to the difficulties business has encountered in the path of recovery and the conditions of which it necessarily must take cognizance. It has done this with the full realization that the task is one which calls for unselfish cooperation of all and that the Government, in exercising the proper responsibilities of leadership, is entitled to their wholehearted support. It has, therefore, approached its task with the conviction that patience and tolerance are requisite to the reconciliation of divergent views and the concentration of national effort upon the one great purpose—the revival of the normal processes of industry and trade.

Need of Goods Daily More Pressing

The conference is of the opinion that this end can be achieved to the common advantage of industry, agriculture and labor and to the benefit of the Nation as a whole. The need for goods and equipment of every description necessary to the continuance of our economic progress and the maintenance of those high standards of living to which America has become accustomed is daily growing more pressing. There is ample work to be done to require the employment of all the labor now idle and the use of all the capital that may be available. The accumulating unsatisfied requirements of the American people will test the resourcefulness of our industry for years to come. With this goal so clearly before us, it is inconceivable that a way will not be found to release our halting national energies and bend our efforts to its achievement. This being true, the conference called jointly by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers, submits the following consideration as expressing the consensus of those participating as to certain steps that may be taken to revive industry and accelerate recovery.

Relief of distress caused by unemployment is one of the foremost problems confronting the Nation. Management, employes and all other social groups share in the responsibility of solving this relief problem and in obtaining the reemployment in productive enterprises of those now idle.

Creation of Confidence Declared Vital

Society recognizes that distress should be relieved. The most effective solution of the problem of unemployment and relief is the creation of such confidence between industry and the Government that business can proceed with plans to develop new industries, to enlarge existing enterprises, and freely to place private capital in the investment field. This conference believes the following principles should guide the granting of relief:

1. Relief is not properly a function of the Federal Government, but it is primarily the obligation of the family, or private charity, of the municipality and of the State. The Federal Governments should aid only when absolutely necessary. An unwillingness on the part of the States and municipalities to share in relief aid is manifest. A constructive step in overcoming this reluctance would be to return to the States as soon as practicable the burden of relief.

2. Relief should be administered by agencies with sympathetic cooperation of civic-minded citizens, conversant with local conditions.

3. All forms of relief should be under local centralized control and should, where practicable, be granted in connection with properly organized employment exchanges which will first endeavor to supply work in private industry.

4. The balancing of the Federal budget will provide confidence, stimulate private initiative and increase opportunities for private employment. The creation of public works for the purpose of providing relief invites waste and definitely defers a balanced budget. In those projects to which the Government is already committed the wage rate paid for work relief should always be substantially less than the going rate paid for similar work in private industries, thus supplying a definite incentive to engage in private employment. Direct relief payments in any locality should always be materially lower than rates paid for work relief.

Jobs on 'Useful' Public Works

5. For those out of work employment on useful public construction projects not created primarily for the purpose of relief and at wages not in excess of the direct relief payments which they would otherwise receive should be encouraged in order that long-continued idleness, with its unfortunate effects, both physical and moral, may, wherever possible, be avoided.

Unemployment reserves: We urge a thorough and sympathetic business study of unemployment reserves, with a view of developing the best and most feasible means of solving this problem. A sound solution must be based upon a definite knowledge and not merely upon a commendable desire. Unsound legislation at this time would prejudice the possibility of securing a satisfactory solution in the future.

We lack sufficient knowledge regarding depressional, seasonal, technological and other types of unemployment. Even as to the actual extent of unemployment, the information is contradictory.

No plan of unemployment reserves can be of immediate help in relieving the present problem, inasmuch as there must be a considerable field for the accumulation of reserves. There is, therefore, ample time for thorough investigation.

In order to give consideration to all elements involved, a committee should be created by business to study the practicability of a comprehensive program of social security adaptable to American conditions, giving immediate attention to unemployment reserves and old age pensions.

Points Enumerated For Study

The committee, in its study of unemployment reserves, should give consideration to the following, among other points:

1. Method of creating a competent administrative system.
2. The increasing inflexibility of wages scales and productive costs.
3. Immobility of labor.
4. A system of payments that will not remove the incentive to work.
5. Requirements as to willingness of applicant for payments to accept available work.
6. Unsuitability of a uniform standard to widely separated localities differing in industrial development.
7. Proper relation of payments to method of relief of those ineligible for benefit payments.
8. Investment of accumulated reserves.
9. Principles governing compulsory contributions by employes.
10. Absence of accrual basis for unemployment reserves.

Industrial relations—Efficient management has always recognized that it was and is good business to adopt such policies as would bring about a condition of mutual confidence and cooperation between the working organization and the supervisor's force. Satisfactory employe and employer relationships require the maintenance of safe and proper working conditions and a wage schedule which compensates the worker fairly. Labor can not share what is not produced. Arbitrary determination and limitation of hours and wages as proposed in such measures as 30-hour bills ignore this fundamental principle. Such limitations decrease the opportunity for employment by unnecessarily increasing the cost to the consumer.

Hits Attempts to Rule Local Relations

The Federal Government should not assume or attempt to control local relationships between employes and employers.

Employers and employes should be free to bargain collectively or individually, in such forms as are mutually satisfactory to them without coercion from any source.

There should be no attempt to lessen, through legislative restrictions upon particular kinds or organization, the freedom of employes in determining the form of any organization for the purpose of collective bargaining.

Men should be protected in their right to work as well as in their right to strike. They should also be protected in their right to join or to refrain from joining any labor organization.

The test of what is in the public interest should apply to the acts of employers as well as of employes. We believe that sympathetic or general strikes or walkouts, blacklists and boycotts should be prohibited.

Federal finance: Definite evidence of a determined effort by Congress and the Administration to balance the budget, including both ordinary and emergency expenditures, at the earliest possible date is fundamental to any real or lasting improvement in economic conditions. Budget equilibrium should be attained primarily by limitation of expenditures rather than by increased taxation.

Balanced Budget Is Demanded

The best information available indicates that further increase in the public debt beyond June 30, 1935, can be avoided, a reasonable program of emergency relief expenditures can be financed without debt increase in the fiscal year 1936 by confining unemployment relief to an indispensable minimum and limiting expenditures for all emergency activities next year, including those on account of existing commitments for public works, to the expected surplus of receipts over ordinary expenditures plus the net repayments from various lending agencies and a reduction of the unallocated amount of the general fund balance.

The assurance throughout next year that will result from an avoidance of increasing the debt and from the adoption of an immediate program to produce a balanced budget in 1937 will contribute both to business recovery and to increase in Federal revenue. It will allay fears of currency inflation, permit more refunding of Government debt on a long-term basis, release investment funds for normal enterprise, safeguard the Government's credit position, and induce a greater mobility of private resources and energy.

Projects for Government spending initiated to increase purchasing power or to create business would retard rather than aid recovery.

That is true of all proposals for extraordinary expenditures that would mean debt increase after June 30 next or preclude the success of a definite program to produce an early balance of the budget.

Balanced Budget and Return to Gold Demanded.

Return to Gold Standard Urged

Business financing:

Understandings with important commercial nations to achieve stabilization of external exchanges, and definite action by our Government as soon as practicable to establish a standard dollar with a fixed and unvarying gold content will be of immeasurable benefit to business.

It is of the greatest importance to business that the banks in which its deposits are placed be privately owned and managed under the supervision of existing agencies properly coordinated and consolidated, and that the control of primary and reserve credit be independent of governmental domination and political influence.

Issuance of securities are being deterred by uncertainties attributed to the regulatory acts (securities act and securities exchange act) now under the jurisdiction of the securities exchange commission. Encouragement has been given by the evident disposition of that commission to consider the practical problems of business in relation to the administration of these acts. Notwithstanding the helpful attitude of the commission, our judgment is that the resumption and expansion of private enterprise will be aided by modification of the securities act.

While the securities exchange act is being administered with consideration of the ligitimate requirements of issue it contains provisions which can place upon trade and industry unnecessary and unreasonable burdens of the character requiring correction of the securities act. Industry needs intermediate credit for capital purposes in small and medium amounts, maturing in not more than seven years. Credits of this type should be made available from private sources, if such regulatory measures as the securities act, which preclude the establishment of private facilities to handle business of this character, were properly modified.

Favors Underwriting On British Plan

Another substantial aid to the opening of the capital markets to the needs of business would be to grant to member banks of the Reserve System under license to be issued by the Federal Reserve Board, the right to engage in underwriting of the British type, while continuing the prohibition upon these banks to engage in the public distribution of securities by solicitation of purchasers. Limitations upon the amount of an issue which may be purchased by any bank should be based solely upon a percentage of the bank's capital and surplus.

This conference affirms its belief in the economic unity of agriculture and industry.

One of the major factors which brought about the depression was a maladjustment between agriculture and other industries.

Any arbitrary limitations or undue restrictions of production, processing or distribution should be guarded against and prevented for the mutual benefit of all concerned.

Specific control measures should be undertaken only with the separate assent of a strongly predominant percentage by numbers and volume of the respective group or groups primarily involved.

There should be coordination of the activities of all Federal departments to promote cooperation with the States and counties and land owners in the solution of their land utilization problems. The Federal Government and the States, in cooperation with private owners, should develop a program for removing from agricultural use as much as is feasible of the land on which the production of crops is ordinarily unprofitable and for discouraging the expansion of agricultural land beyond the effective demand for the production therefrom.

U. S. Acquisition of Submarginal Land

Federal acquisition and administration of submarginal land and administration of erosion-control projects and the grazing or other agricultural activities on the public domain, should be centralized in the United States Department of Agriculture.

Durable goods industries—Sixty per cent of estimated 10,000,000 unemployed are in the durable goods industries. More than 2,000,000 are unemployed in one segment alone—construction—representnig a total nearly four times as large as the combined unemployment in all consumers' goods industries.

Deferred demand for the products of the durable goods industries has reached staggering proportions, but must remain potential and useless rather than effective until the people of this country possess such confidence in their future that they dare look beyond their day-to-day needs. Herein lies a major offensive against depression.

Chief among the fundamental conditions needed for recovery in the durable goods industries are: (1) A free flow of private capital into private business, (2) a sound real estate mortgage market, (3) low construction costs necessitating removel of artificial restrains curtailing volume and increasing costs whether of material or labor.

In particular, there can be no recovery in private residential building unless Federal construction is limited to a field that can be demonstrated to the noncompetitive slum clearance and the limited construction of such low-cost housing as could not be accomplished commercially under normal conditions. This is the maximum limit to Federal activities, if recovery is to be achieved. Direct Government participation in housing, if carried beyond this point, will inevitably ruin the sound program of the Federal Housing Administration. If that program is ruined by the direct and competitive insertion or coordinate branches of the Government into the construction field, a general level of costruction activity higher than that of 1934 can not be expected.

Competition With Private Industry

Government competition — The great majority of the people owns American business. Each of the 60-odd million insurance policyholders, each man or woman who has savings in banks or building and loan associations, each holder of a share of stock or a bond, has such savings invested in some corporate business activity. In addition, there are nearly 3,000,000 partnerships and industrial undertakings. When government—Federal, state or local—enters a business, it competes unfairly with the great mass of its own citizens. The small business and the industrial of small means are the first to suffer.

The Federal Government is now competing in more than two hundred (200) different kinds of business. Programs for work-relief do not justify the Government's entering into competition with its private citizens in the production of goods and their distribution for relief purposes. Government competition dries up the source of its own support.

Government competition with private business leads toward socialism. This destructive competition, carrying with it the threat of extension into other fields, has profoundly shaken confidence.

Our Government was neither conceived nor fashioned to engage in competition with its citizens. Such competition disregards many recognized elements of costs. Then it employs the taxes of the citizen to menace his enterprise, it threatens the security of his job, the safety of his savings, and converts his compulsory support of his Government through taxation into a weapon for his injury.

Calls for Expansion Of Foreign Trade

Foreign Trade: Complete business recovery demands the expansion of American foreign trade.

Among the principal obstacles now impeding such expansion are: Instability of world currencies; quotas and bounties; exchange restrictions; discriminatory agreements; intergovernmental debts; and increased domestic costs. The conference favors:

1. Establishment, as soon as possible, of stable world monetary standards, with a prompt reconsideration of governmental debts due the United States.
2. Cooperation with foreign nations to remove quotas, exchange restrictions and export bounties.
3. Negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements with foreign countries under conditions which will safeguard American industry.
4. Recognization of the fact that increase of domestic production costs lessens ability to compete in foreign markets.
5. Cooperation with efforts of the export-import banks and restoration of adequate governmental trade representation abroad.

Transportation: The continuing improvement of our systems of transportation is conductive to economic recovery and essential to the promotion of community prosperity. We are now entering a period of more rapid change and development in transportation than existed during the past two decades. The potential purchasing power involved in modernization of equipment and the utilization of already known technical development would materially contribute to the restoration of employment in the durable goods industry.

The achievement of maximum efficiency demands freedom for development in each field transportation.

To the extent that Federal funds are available for loans, it would seem prudent to make loans to national and local common carriers, where financially justified, on terms as reasonable as those made for other purposes. Such loans can be made with greater security in already developed and sound enterprises such as transportation, with competent organizations to direct them, than to end and untried enterprises.

New Emergency Laws Favored

NIRA introduction:

By its own terms, the National Industrial Recovery Act expires not later than June 16, 1935. The Administration has indicated its desire for further trial of certain features of the act. Experience has not sufficiently determined whether permanent measures are desirable, or if desirable, the form that they should take. In view of these considerations, this conference recommends that new emergency legislation, prior to its expiring date, be enacted for a period of one year, in conformity with the principles hereafter presented.

30-Hour Week Fought; Made Work Relief Also Opposed.

Such legislation should be administered by an administrative agency of at least five members, possessing the authority to approve or disapprove codes of fair competition in or affecting interstate commerce that has been voluntarily submitted by an association or group truly representative of a given trade or industry.

Labor provisions of the codes:

The NIRA was a temporary measure, designed to meet a national emergency, and it is recognized that its expiration would entail hardship in certain industries, the operation of which are being temporarily conducted under its provisions. In view of this fact, and without prejudice to the opposition of industry to Federal legislation in the field of local labor relations, this new emergency legislation should follow the NIRA upon its expiring date, such legislation to conform to the following principles:

Any new legislation continuing the NIRA should be of the same temporary emergency character as the original act, and one year is recommended as the term of any such law.

Voluntary Action Of Industries

The continuance of present codes or the adoption of new codes should be conditioned upon the voluntary action of the respective industries or trades.

The new act should require every code of fair competition to contain suitable provisions concerning maximum hours and minimum wages, prohibiting child labor, safeguarding both labor and employer by giving to labor the right to deal with employers either individually or collectively directly or through representatives of their own free choice without intimidation or coercion of either party from any source.

During the emergency period the problems of child labor, of minimum wages and of maximum hours are likely to be especially acute. In any industry, therefore, not operating under a code of fair competition in which the administrative agency finds that child labor is used or threatened or wages are so low, or hours so long as to impair materially our living standards, we appeal to employers in such an industry voluntarily to apply for a code in order to prevent or correct conditions which all responsible employers condemn.

Competitive practice provisions of codes: It is recommended that the new legislation provide that any industry or trade voluntarily desiring to do so may, subject to the approval of a governmental administrative agency provided for in such legislation and after proper investigation and public hearings, adopt and make effective a code of fair competition.

A main objective of codes of fair competition in this period of emergency has been and should be to aid in increasing employment, relieving pressure on wages, and in securing the restoration of the sound functioning of the competitive system of mitigating the effects of destructive competition aggravated by the depression. It should be the objective of these codes thereby to aid in securing competitive conditions fair to producer, distributor and consumer, the restoration of credit, the resumption of replacements and improvements in operating machinery, and relief from that instability in markets which retards coincident increase in production and consumption.

The standard to be set forth in such legislation, which the administrative agency is to apply in passing on the provisions of a proposed code of fair competition, should be consistent with and should promote these objectives and, to that end, should facilitate the elimination of unsound and unfair methods of competition and, in proper cases in the public interest, should permit of practicable measures to reduce or prevent price demoralization, to secure reasonable adjustment of available capacity to available demand in overcapacitated industries, and to afford protection against the elimination or oppression of small business. No code provision should be approved or continued which results in a price level burdensme and unfair to the public. The provisions of each code should be determined by and adapted to the particular conditions of that industry.

General provisions: In some natural resource industries, conservation is a matter of great public concern and may require specific treatment. These industries should be able to utilize such provisions of general legislation as outlined herein, but since these provisions may not be sufficient to meet the needs of the industries and for the protection of the public interest, specific legislation should be considered to meet their requirements. Such legislation should follow the general principle that the farther the actions thus approved extend into fields otherwise restricted or prohibited by law, the greater the governmental supervision necessary to protect the public interest.

The development and the submission of codes of fair competition should be voluntary on the part of industry, and subject to the approval or disapproval of the administrative agency, with opportunities for submission to the same authority, for approval of modifications.

Raskob and Young Reconcile Conflict of Views at Parley

2 Veteran 'Plan Writers' Drafted for Service at White Sulphur.

(By a Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 19.—With almost as many conflicting points of view as delegates, the business recovery conference today drafted two veteran plan writers to take command of putting its recovery program in final form.

Arriving a day late for the conference, Owen D. Young, who once formulated a plan designed to settle reparation difficulties, joined John J. Raskob, who once had considerable to do with a Democratic platform, in attempting to bring about order. These two eminent Democrats, both of whom are on the outside of present affairs of the party, probably influenced more than any one else the final decision of the convention.

Young and Raskob presented a striking contrast as they paced the hotel lobby just before the final session. Young, tall, smoking a pipe, presented a calm appearance. Raskob, whose head doesn't come to Young's shoulder, was nervously darting from one delegate to another, apparently never pausing, although he had slept no more than three or four hours the night before.

Smoke-Filled Room."

Most of the work of drafting the program was done literally in a "smoke-filled room." The preliminary drafting session lasted from early last night until after 2 o'clock this morning. Then, despite Raskob's energy and Young's conciliatory advice, no definite agreement was reached on some points and it was found necessary to present preliminary reports of sub-committees to the group as a whole for discussion.

The general group meeting was held in the hotel auditorium, where the night before a motion-picture was shown for the entertainment of delegates who were not actively at work on the program. Some genius selected the picture "David Harum" for the entertainment.

Doors of the auditorium were carefully guarded. All of the discussions were conducted in an atmosphere of utmost secrecy. At the opening gerenal meeting everyone present was asked not to discuss with newspapermen anything concerning the conference. Until the close of the sessions there were only two formal statements, each saying almost exactly nothing.

Program a Compromise.

The final draft of a program could present at best only a compromise. As the meeting continued there was a growing sense of the seriousness of that which was being undertaken. There was continuous discussion of whether the program adopted should be general in its nature, laying out broad statements of policy, or whether it should take a specific stand on individual economic questions. The result was a little of both, but more of the former than the latter.

Accompanying the delegates was a crowd of experts, almost as numerous as the principals themselves. There were economists, statisticians, brief case carriers, stenographers and press agents. The latter were concerned mostly with telling their bosses what not to say.

Gathered here, too, were a number of self-appointed "experts" who had not been invited, but who came hoping to put their pet schemes across. They sat in the lobby engaging everyone who even resembled a business tycoon in endless conversation. They appeared to have almost as many panaceas as the business men themselves.

"Met" Stars Heard Here In Musicale

Distinguished Audience Gathers to Hear Two Artists.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

There probably is no event in Capital society which brings out a more distinguished gathering than does the first, as well as others in the series, of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicales held annually at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Townsend is one of the most popular hostesses of Washington, and for many years has been one of the outstanding patronesses of music here. Several years ago she started bringing musicians to Washington and gathered a number of friends who subscribed to the concerts. The popularity of the musicales increased, until they are among the most attractive gatherings in town.

Officials, diplomats and members of smart resident society, as well as a representative number of local musicians, meet there each Wednesday morning. They hear not only artists well known in America, but many from Europe whom Mrs. Townsend has been instrumental in bringing to Washington for their first appearance.

Mrs. Townsend knows music, and for many years lived in Europe while Mr. Townsend was in our diplomatic service, and as she visits abroad almost every summer, she has an opportunity of selecting the pick of the new-comers in the musical world.

'Met' Artists Are Heard.

The artists at yesterday's concert were Mr. Richard Crooks, popular American tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, and Miss Kathryn Meisle, Metropolitan contralto. The program included a number of solos, and Miss Meisle and Mr. Crooks gave a duet, "Gypsy Songs," by Brahms. Afterward it was learned that they had rehearsed it together only five minutes before the concert.

As an encore, Miss Meisle sang the "Erlkonig," and Mr. Crooks the popular "Dream Song" from "Manon."

Following each of her musicales, Mrs. Townsend entertains at luncheon for the artists, when the ranking guest is a distinguished member of the Diplomatic Corps. Yesterday, the retiring Minister of Finland, Mr. L. Astrom, was ranking guest. Others included the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi, Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, wife of Senator Barbour; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, the former Countess Cornelia Szechenyi; Mrs. George West, who came from New York, where she is passing the winter, and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan.

Also present were Miss Helen Lee Doherty, who will return to Denmark in a few weeks to resume her duties as secretary to Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, United States Minister; Signorina Maria Luisa Ferrero, Miss Hope Jackson, Miss Marjorie Walsh, Miss Florence Slocum, Mrs. Richard Crooks, Mr. and Mrs. Frank LaForge; the second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Don Eduardo Vivot; the Secretaries of the Italian Embassy, Signor Giuseppe Tommasi and Signor Andrea Ferrero; the Third Secretary of the German Embassy, Herr Gustav Struve; the Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, Mr. Anthony Balasy; Mr. Pendleton Turner, Mr. Arthur Bradley Campbell, Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. George P. Marshall and Mr. Solon Alberti.

Large Table Decorated.

The large table was decorated with poinsettia in baskets and a centerpiece of a lyre made of red and white sugar.

In spite of the rain, Washington society turned out for the opening concert. Mrs. Roosevelt planned to be present, but the death of her close friend, Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, prevented her from attending. However, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the war-time President, was there, and Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the President and Chief Justice.

The United States Ambassador to the Argentine and Mrs. Alexander Weddell were there with Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy. Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, wife of the former United States Ambassador to the Argentine, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Warren, also were present, as were Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury, who was among the guests in Mrs. Roosevelt's box; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, wife of the Chief of Protocol; Mrs. John H. Russell, wife of the Commandant of the Marine Corps; Baroness von Buelow, Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely, Mrs. John Magruder and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard.

Others Are Glimpsed.

Others glimpsed were the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon, the latter in a beige and brown ensemble; Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, with a party of guests; Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan; Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Ze Barney Phillips, with her daughter, Mrs. Guido Perera, of Boston, who arrived yesterday to spend Christmas with her parents; Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, wife of the Solicitor General, in a brown costume; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts, accompanied by her handsome daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, who wore a suit of green tweed; Mrs. Donald Richberg, in a frock of checked woolen with a brown coat and hat; Mrs. Crosby Miller, in a brown and beige tweed suit with topcoat to match; Mrs. John Crosby, in a smart tweed suit of raspberry with a felt hat to match and a swagger coat of mink; Mrs. John Lewis Smith, in a gown of bronzine green trimmed with velvet of the same shade and a tailored hat to match, and Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, also in green with a black hat.

Also seen were Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, in a coat of black broadtail trimmed with silver fox; Mrs. Morris Shepherd, accompanied by Mrs. Ollie James, and Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyons.

Mrs. Stone Honor Guest.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell at the Mayflower after the concert.

Mrs. Justin Miller, of Durham, N. C., was the guest of Mrs. Frank C. Bright, who was a hostess at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower. Her other guests were Mrs. George M. Eckels and Mrs. Emily Newell Blair. Mr. Miller is now in Washington as assistant to the Solicitor General.

Mrs. James Couzens also entertained at luncheon after the concert. Other hostesses were Mrs. Delos Blodgett, Mrs. James R. Mann, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Mrs. W. W. Abell and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson.

Davis, wife of Senator Davis, with her guest, Miss Elena de Hillebranth, of Atlantic City, who has been passing several days in the Capital. Miss de Hellebranth and her sister, Miss Berta de Hellebranth, are well-known artists and passed the winter here a few seasons ago.

Assembly Set For Tomorrow At Shoreham

Elaborate Program of Entertainment Planned for Guests.

The Washington Assembly will be held at the Shoreham tomorrow, when Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, Mrs. Landra Platt, Mrs. Wrisley Brown, Mrs. George Amory Maddox, Mrs. Karl W. Corby and Mrs. Robert W. Aldrich Rodger will receive.

The party is given for the debutantes, the postdebs and their escorts, and young married couples.

Mr. John M. Lynham is chairman and Mr. Humphrey Daniel vice chairman, and on the committee are Mr. Tinsley Adams, Mr. Ivan Alfaro, Mr. William Blum, jr., Mr. DeLong Bowman, Mr. Smith Bowman, Mr. Frederick B. Cartwright, jr., Mr. Phillips Clarke, Mr. Daniel Fahey, Mr. Herbert F. Feaver, Mr. Manning Gasch, Mr. Oliver Gasch, Mr. Pendleton Hogan, Mr. William S. Hoge 3d, Lieut. Comdr. J. J. Hughes, U. S. N.; Mr. Charles James, Mr. William G. Mitchell, Mr. Edward Northrup, Mr. Douglas Phillips, Mr. Albert A. Richards, Mr. George Riggs, Mr. Hilton Smith, Mr. W. Waverly Taylor, jr., and Mr. Frank Walker.

The subdebs, debutantes and postdebs have planned a floor show to be presented at 11:30 p. m. The Tut-Tut, an old Egyptian dance, will be the first number, Miss Mary Katharine Bentley, Miss Imogen Ficklin, Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler and Miss Elizabeth Zimmerman taking part. The second number will be a tango by Miss Marjorie Jane Dampman and Mr. Roeglio Alfaro. The dances have been rehearsed by Miss Marian Venable. Mr. John Reyburn, remembered for his success last year, has new songs and stories.

The "Campagne Waltz," with Miss Marjorie Jane Dampman, Miss Katharine Brown, Miss Fenella Castanedo, Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, Miss Betty Mattingly, Miss Mary Elizabeth Tilghman, Miss Frances Wooley and Miss Aileen Hood, also has been directed by Miss Venable, with costumes designed by Miss Dorothy Holt.

D. A. Reeds Will Start On Cruise Tomorrow

Senator and Mrs. David Aiken Reed have left for New York. They will sail tomorrow on a cruise to Venezuela and the West Indies.

Early in January they will return and will probably open their house on S street as it is understood Senator Reed will open a law office here following his retirement from public life.

Informal Ceremony to Take Place in New York.

Miss Mildred Adams, daughter of Mr. Charles Francis Adams, of Concord, Calif., has selected January 2 for her marriage to Mr. W. Houston Kenyon, jr., former Assistant United States Attorney in New York and special assistant to the Attorney General in Washington.

The wedding will be informal and will take place in the home of Miss Adams' aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brown, in New York City. The Very Rev. Arthur Kinsolving, dean of the Cathedral of the Incarnation of Garden City, Long Island, will perform the ceremony.

Mrs. Paul West, jr., the former Miss Julia Davis, daughter of Mr. John W. Davis, former Ambassador to Great Britain, will be matron of honor and only attendant for the bride. Mr. Theodore Kenyon will be his brother's best man. After the wedding Mr. Kenyon and his bride will live in New York where Mr. Kenyon is a member of the law firm of Kenyon & Kenyon and a lecturer on law at New York University.

Raymond T. Baker Plans Yule Party

Former Director of Mint to Fete Relatives.

The former director of the mint, Mr. Raymond T. Baker, will entertain a house party during Christmas week. Mrs. Hugh Dillman will remain with her son-in-law until after the new year, and Mrs. Baker's aunt, Mrs. Delphine Ashbaugh, and her daughter, Miss Helene Bovee, of California, will arrive tomorrow for Christmas.

Mrs. Ashbaugh and her daughter returned recently from England, where they visited Mrs. Baker, who is studying piano in London. Mrs. Baker's brother, Mr. Horace Dodge, and his two children will join others of his family and be with Mr. Baker during the holidays.

Panama Envoy Gives a Dinner For the Derns

Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter Among Guests at Function.

The Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro entertained at dinner yesterday at the Legation in honor of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern. The guests were the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, the Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Arcaya, Dr. Narciso Garay, Dr. Carlos Lopez, Admiral and Mrs. Harry P. Huse, Gen. and Mrs. Chase W. Kennedy, the Secretary of the Panamanian Treaty Commission and Senora de Chevalier, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Harry Baxter and Senorita Hercilia Urrutia, sister of Senora de Arcaya.

The Minister and Senora de Alfaro will entertain at dinner Monday at the Legation in honor of their daughter, Senorita Amerita Alfaro, who is home from the Knox School, Cooperstown, N. Y., for the holidays. Later the guests will attend the dance Mr. and Mrs. Landra B. Platt will give for the former's daughter, Miss Jane Esther Platt, at the Chevy Chase Club.

Senorita Alfaro will be hostess at dinner again next Thursday preceding the dance Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton will give in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, at the Sulgrave Club.

Mme. Troyanovsky Off to Meet Envoy

Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, accompanied by her son, Oleg, left Tuesday for the West Coast, from whence she will sail on December 28 for Honolulu to meet the Ambassador, who is returning from Moscow by way of the Orient.

Mme. Troyanovsky, who was to remain in Washington for Christmas, changed her plans Sunday when the Ambassador called her by telephone from Tokio.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Don Fernando Gonzalez Roa, left several days ago for his home in Mexico City, where he will pass the Christmas holidays. The Ambassador was accompanied by his two nieces, Senorita Dolores Chico Alatorre and Senorita Sara Chico Alatorre. They will return early in January.

The Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Arcaya were hosts at luncheon yesterday in celebration of the twenty-sixth anniversary of the Peace and Progress of Venezuela. The guests, who included the Legation staff and out-of-town friends, numbered 20.

The Naval Attache of the British Embassy, Capt. A. R. Dewar, will entertain at a cocktail party Saturday afternoon in his home on Masachusetts avenue.

The Commercial Attache of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Don F. Jaime Gaxiola, left yesterday for Mexico City, accompanied by Senor Don Rafael Castiello.

Mr. Thad H. Brown, member of the Federal Communications Commission, Mrs. Brown, and their son, Mr. Thad Brown, jr., who attends Princeton University, have closed their apartment at the Shoreham for the Christmas holiday. They departed last night for Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. Oscar T. Crosby has as his guest at the Fairfax his sister-in-law, Mlle. Lea M. Bouligny, principal of the Warrenton Country School for Girls, at Warrenton, Va. Mlle. Bouligny will accompany Mr. Crosby and his daughter, Mrs. Crosby Miller, to New York the end of the week, where they will pass Christmas with Mrs. Arthur Hornblow, another daughter of Mr. Crosby.

Capt. Roland M. Brainard has arrived at the Martinique from New Orleans, accompanied by Mrs. Brainard and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth W. Brainard.

Miss Anna Carol Drum Returning From Vassar.

Miss Anna Carol Drum, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Hugh A. Drum, will arrive tomorrow from Vassar College to spend the Christmas holidays with her parents in their home on LeRoy place.

Mrs. David Fiske will be joined at the Shoreham, today, by her daughter, Miss Isabel Fiske, who attends Randolph-Macon College at Lynchburg, Va. They will leave immediately to spend Christmas in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis Elkins have issued cards for an at home, Sunday, December 30, from 5 until 7 o'clock, at 2029 Connecticut avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Elkins entertain their friends each year at an eggnog party.

Col. Samuel P. Wetherill, of Philadelphia, Pa., is at the Raleigh Hotel.

Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin will entertain at a dinner Saturday at the Chevy Chase Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Granger will entertain at a buffet supper, Sunday, in their Georgetown home.

Hornings Issue Cards For "At Home" Dec. 31.

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Horning, jr., have issued cards for an at home December 31 from 5 until 7 o'clock at their home in Kenwood, Md.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:
Marjorie Jane Dampman—becomingly attired in gray, from head to toe—came into the Mayflower yesterday with a few remaining raindrops, like crystal beads, clinging to her fur coat; her bright smile, as she paused to chat with friends on her way to a luncheon, made others forget the dull skies outside.

Little Janet Hartz is simply delighted with the new car tags for Maryland. She commented on the fact that those of last year were so gloomy and dark looking and that their substitutes are bright and suggestive of blue skies and glistening snow. That's very nice and wintry sounding. And I s'pose that when summer comes along the same plates will take on the appearance of the dashing blue and white ocean waves at summer resorts.

Crosby Tea to Honor The A. Harry Moores

Mr. and Mrs. John Crosby will entertain at tea January 3 at their home, 4700 Davidson drive, in honor of Senator-elect and Mrs. A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey. Senator-elect Moore is the former Governor of New Jersey, and for many years has been a close friend of Mr. and Mrs. Crosby, who have a summer home at Spring Lake, N. J., near Seagirt, where the Governor had his summer mansion.

Bargains Await Eager Shoppers For Christmas

Stockings, Perfumes, Hassocks Available at Low Prices.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

TO KEEP or to give, that is the choice that arises with the purchase of some exceptionally fine and at the same time reasonably priced hose featured in a local shop.

There are few women who don't keep a weather eye open for unusual bargains in hose, and certainly there are fewer women who would fail to recognize what bargains these are.

They look as though they were sheer enough to shoot straws through but at the same time they will wear for ages without wearing out. They are guaranteed, too, to be absolutely ringless. Seventy-nine cents is the price.

Women who are interested in lovely shades to wear with brown may take their choice of six soft colors; solera, cedar, fawntaupe, smoke, jaffa and cloister. There are six other graduating shades which are exquisite with black.

Princess Marina's Gown.

Those who have read of fairy princesses, with their robes of gold trimmed in precious jewels, have a rare opportunity this week to see the wedding dress of a real princess. It isn't actually the dress she wore—the "she" meaning Princess Marina—but it's a duplicate. The fabric is woven of real silver threads in the old English rose Tudor pattern. The train is actually 15 feet long. Another interesting feature is the neckline. It's—well, no fair telling everything! Stop by the F street store and see it all for yourself.

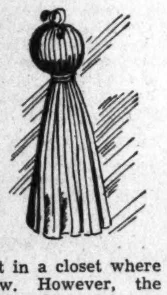
Extra Eau de Cologne.

What looks like a bottle of choice champagne turns out on closer inspection to be a large bottle of eau de cologne. The label reads, vintage of 1871. The silver paper around the cork and even the wire fastener, to say nothing of the hollowed bottom, further the disguise. These are ideal for those looking for gifts in an original vein.

Hassocks in Favor.

Hassocks, particularly those covered in conventional colors of velour, answer several different purposes. They may be used for a footstool beside a large easy chair, or a kind of clubby little fireside seat. When the room is literally running over with company and all the chairs are in use, a hassock serves a noble purpose for any one not averse to this informal manner of sitting. There are several on display now which cost only 69 cents. They are in dark green and brown, but can easily be recovered to suit any room.

Take the most delightful perfume you can imagine and combine this with the peak of designing and you have the prize sachet of the season.



Thousands of glossy threads cover a round ball and hang down beneath it in a silken tassel. Hang it by your dressing table and your whole room is subtly scented. But it's such a show piece that it takes a bit of courage to put it in a closet where it doesn't show. However, the wealth of fragrance that seeps out and clings to your clothes is delightful compensation.

Snugglers Acceptable.

Snugglers, priced from 79 cents to $1, make incomparable Christmas gifts for elderly women or convalescents. They are combination scarfs and jackets being chiefly scarf across the shoulders and jacket where the sleeves begin.

A downtown store has dozens of these woven of soft downy wool, in pink, rose, orchid, blue and yellow.

Bargain in Gloves.

A local store was eager to offer its patrons a special "buy" in gloves. In order to have the finest quality for the lowest price they did a bit of importing and from across the seas brought the soft kid gloves available now for $1.98. Needless to say, if it were not for these circumstances the gloves would be at least a dollar more. Any purchaser may consider herself lucky that she has only this minimum price to pay.

The gloves are extremely soft kid which fits the hand like the paper on the wall, but gives sufficiently not to tear or pull at the seams. They come in black and brown, in plain or novelty styles.

A Dollar for Beauty.

If you have a dollar, now's the time to spend it, and here's how. Buy just any one of the products put out by a nationally known cosmetic house for, with your purchase, if it's a dollar or more, you'll be given a trial kit which includes a skin freshener, a box of powder, a smooth skin oil, a nourishing cream, a cream rouge and a cleansing cream.

It's hard to decide which of the creams is really your favorite, but a vote would probably run in favor of one which (and it's the only cream that does!) contains the fresh juice of lemons. It cleanses, stimulates, bleaches and refreshens all in one.

Perfume bottles are disguised as brass bells. When they're opened up, however, there is a small bottle of perfume—a bell which actually rings. This would be a clever thing to hang upon a Christmas tree.

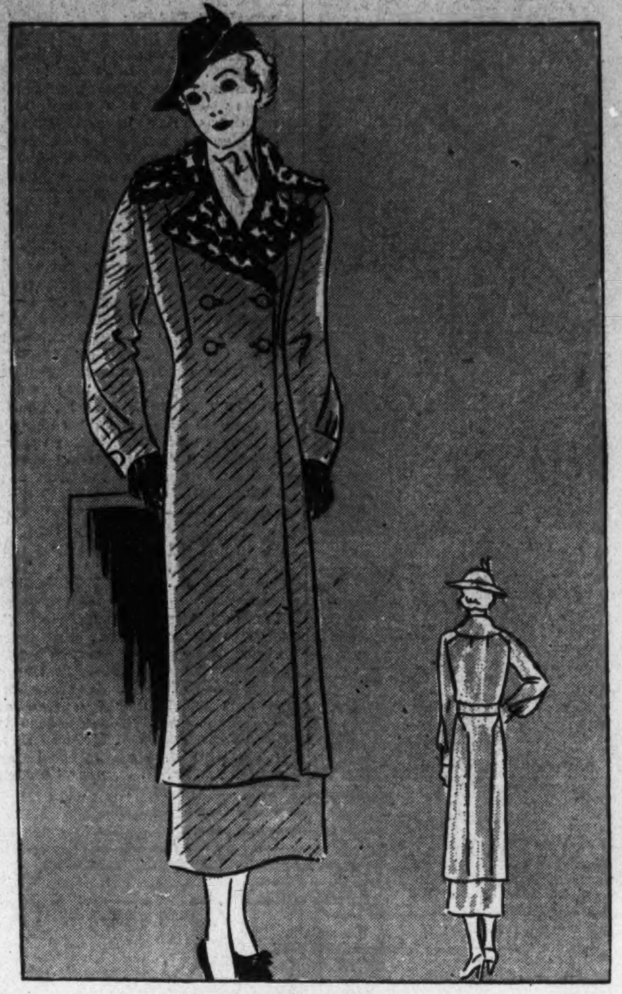
The Two-Coat Problem Is Answered by Suits



Pattern No. 773.

DECIDEDLY YES! For suits are not only fashion-right, they answer the two-coat problem in an economical way. Too many of us have to choose a winter coat that must do duty for casual wear as well as for afternoon and formal hours. The result is a too-often-worn coat, and a never-quite-right ensemble.

This suit, for instance, is just right for run-about-town wear. Its seven-eighths-length coat is warmly interlined and may be worn with its own skirt or other wool frocks. A tweed, a velvety woolen, velveteen, or mohair are fabric suggestions. The fur collar is optional. The pattern is accurately cut in sizes 14 to 42. Size 18 (36) requires 4⅝ yards of 54-inch fabric, including collar, lining and interlining.

Teach Delinquent Girls' Families, Expert Urges

Best Place for Those on Parole Is Own Home, Says Dr. Charlotte Grave, but Relatives Should Be Educated to Their Needs.

THE best place for a delinquent girl on parole from a school of correction is her own home, Dr. Charlotte Easby Grave, psychologist, is convinced. But before the offender goes back to her family the latter should be informed what to do with her.

"The most important contribution society can make to its problem children today is to reeducate not only the young people but the homes from which they come," the psychologist declared yesterday.

For the last five years she has been connected with Sleighton Farms, a school for delinquent girls at Darling, Pa. She was in Washington yesterday to speak at the annual meeting of the Juvenile Protective Association.

"When a girl is ready to leave Sleighton Farms on parole she usually wants to go back to her own people and her own people usually want her," Dr. Grave said. "But frequently, while the girl has gained a new outlook from her years at the school, her family has stood still. And so she returns to the same conditions that probably contributed to her delinquency in the first place."

Gives Solution of Problem.

The same social agency that reports delinquent girls should assume the responsibility of rehabilitating their families, the psychologist believes. But, she continued, if the families can not be educated to the point where they can deal understandingly with the returned offenders, then the offenders should be placed with other families.

"But most housholds take in paroled girls because the girls can do something for them, not because they see an opportunity to do something for the girls," Dr. Grave said. "This means that sometimes the young offenders come up against the same set of circumstances which brought about their original delinquency."

In the last few years, however, society has been more cognizant of its responsibilities toward those who have broken the rules, the psychologist observed.

Unfortunate, She Says.

"Until recently, whenever a girl made a misstep her only hope upon leaving a school of correction was to become a houseworker," she said. "This was unfortunate because many of the girls had no aptitude for housework. They remained misfits or ran away and became delinquents again. Now those who have ability for business courses are given an opportunity to study typing and shorthand. We try to get them into business colleges when they leave the school of correction. Then the colleges help them to find jobs."

In addition to her work at Sleighton Farms Dr. Grave is psychologist at the Friends' Select School in Philadelphia, a coeducational private school. Most of her work there consists in straightening out the parents instead of the pupils, she explained.

She believes the competitive system does more harm than good.

"But I don't see how we're going to do away with it as long as Johnny's mother eggs him on to make better grades than Mrs. Brown's little boy," she added. "It's the parents who are responsible for schools keeping the competitive system."

Child Chats

Parents Urged to Reduce Pre-Christmas Tension to a Minimum.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

THE LAST few days before Christmas are probably the most difficult time in all the year. Suspense has keyed nerves to high pitch. The disorder of the house; the mystery of packages bulging from every closet, all contribute to the excitement. And as a result, childish nerves are apt to be pretty badly frayed by the time Christmas eve arrives.

Especially for the sake of the very little children, it is wise to keep the suspense to a minimum. Hide the gifts so they are entirely out of sight, not in some place where they offer a constant temptation to tear a corner of the paper to see what is inside. Talk about Christmas during the day, but give it a rest at dinner or during the bedtime-story hour. Sleeplessness results from too constantly thinking about the great event that is to come.

This does not mean that children are to be deprived of the thrill of Christmas. There will be plenty of excitement in the air, even though you try to keep it to a minimum. My plea is only to use moderation in order to save frayed nerves and make Christmas a wholly happy occasion.

Youngest Great-Grandparents.

West Warren, Mass. (U.P.).—Charles J. Mosso, first cousin of Ovila Dionne, father of the famous Canadian quintuplets, and his wife are believed to be the youngest great-grandparents in the East. They are 62. Mrs. Ruth Lavigne, 19, was the mother of the great-grandchild.

Icing Is Spread On Spice Cake Before Baking

There Are Two Ways to Cook Breaded Veal Cutlets Successfully.

By Dorothea Duncan.

CAKE RECIPES are always in demand. Today a reader has requested a recipe for a spice cake that may be baked with an icing which has been spread on the cake before it goes into the oven. Here are the directions for making the icing: Beat two egg whites until they will stand in peaks and add a pinch of salt during the beating. Sift four tablespoons of light brown sugar and beat the sugar into the egg whites, two tablespoons at a time. Spread this mixture lightly on top of the cake batter after it has been put into the pan. Use a shallow square cake pan, as the cake will bake more quickly and the icing will not become overcooked. The recipe for the cake follows:

Spice Cake.

1 cup thick sour cream
⅝ teaspoon soda
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon cloves
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ nutmeats, if desired

Stir the sugar into the cream and beat well. Beat the eggs until light and add to the first mixture. Mix and sift the remaining dry ingredients and add them to the first mixture gradually, stirring and beating until the mixture is smooth. This may be baked in sheets or as individual cakes. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 or 30 minutes.

The following questions have been submitted:

Breaded Veal Cutlets.

Use slices of veal from leg cut one-half inch thick. Wipe, remove bone and skin, then cut in pieces for serving. The long, irregular shaped pieces may be rolled and fastened with small wooden skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; dip in flour, beaten egg and crumbs and saute slowly, until well-browned, in salt pork fat or butter.

Place in a stew pan and pour over 2 cups of brown sauce (sauce made with browned flour and meat stock) or tomato sauce. Cook slowly one hour or until cutlets are tender. Cutlets may be cooked in a casserole dish in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit).

What is the correct way to measure brown sugar, pressed or loose?

Brown sugar should be packed firmly into the measuring cup unless a recipe says otherwise.

Brown sugar is lighter and more moist than granulated sugar, and when it is used in place of granulated sugar the substitution should be weight for weight rather than measure for measure.

What is a "johnny cake" and from what is the term derived?

A "johnny cake" is a kind of bread made of Indian corn meal, flour, eggs and milk. Formerly it was called "journey cake," as such bread was frequently taken on long trips.

The following recipes have been requested.

Corn Pudding.

2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon mustard
2 cups corn pulp
1 egg
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Buttered crumbs
Paprika

Make a sauce of fat, flour, milk and seasoning, add corn, egg slightly beaten, and Worcestershire sauce. Pour into a baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees to 400 degrees Fahrenheit), 15 to 30 minutes.

Grapefruit on the Half Shell.

Cut grapefruit in half crosswise. With a pair of sharp shears, or with a grapefruit corer, cut a circular piece from the center of each, being careful not to cut through the skin. Then with a sharp knife loosen each section from the membrane and skin. Sprinkle with sugar and set in the refrigerator to chill. Pink the edges of the skin if you prefer, and remove the pieces of membrane between the sections of fruit, if you have time. In this way the shell is left with only edible portions of the fruit. In any case, each mouthful of fruit should be entirely detached from the shell. Serve a half grapefruit on a plate or in a special grapefruit glass imbedded in ice. If the fruit is thoroughly chilled it is as attractive served on a flat plate without ice. If your family prefers it the grapefruit may be served without sugar.

SHY CINDERELLA

By WILSON COLLISON.

Lillian and Anne, two jobless chorus girls posing as mother and daughter, have found employment as housekeepers in Jimmie Grenville's palatial home. Anne has just discovered that Mrs. Grenville's absence is not temporary, that she has left her husband.

"HE'S probably checking up on us." She took the teakettle and filled the coffeepot with steaming water. She stood with the coffeepot poised in her hand. She said, "I just want to say one thing to start with, baby; he doesn't know anything about us and we don't know anything about him. You watch your step and if he gets fresh when you're alone with him, see me."

"Don't be silly," said Anne.

"I'm not," said Lillian. "I'm your mother. You're a pretty girl and he's a man, that's all."

Anne went up the long stairs at 8 o'clock with a tray upon which was Mr. Grenville's breakfast. Lillian's first batch of waffles had failed; she had left something out because she had been thinking. It seemed to her that it might have been the yolk of an egg. The second batch came out perfectly. She would have to stop thinking while she was cooking; that was the only solution, the only way to avoid mistakes.

A Courteous Employer.

Anne tapped upon Mr. Grenville's door; she heard him call, "Come in."

She went in. He was standing at the window which overlooked the balcony, watching it rain.

Anne asked, "Would you like it over there?"

He said, "That would be fine."

Anne looked around for a table. He suddenly moved across and dragged the night table away from the bed and set it near the window.

"Thank you," said Anne. "But that's too high for you."

"It'll do," he said.

Anne placed the tray upon the table. She pulled the big, comfortable-looking chair away from the clothespress door. He started quickly to help her, but she got the chair across the room before he could get to it.

She said, "If you don't mind, I'm going to change your room around today. It isn't charming. It's distorted. Things are in the wrong places. It's out of balance."

Secret Was Out.

He stood looking at her with a smile. He seemed to be studying her. He was again struck by the vivid beauty of her face, the utter loveliness of her dark eyes, which sometimes had the soft look of a fawn's eyes. She was so small, so dainty, like a doll with a perfect figure.

He said, "You do anything you like with the room. The house has been a mess since my wife left me."

Anne gave a little start. He had had a wife and she had left him. She must have been a silly, stupid woman . . . to leave such a home, such a man . . .

Mr. Grenville was saying, "I forgot to tell you yesterday. I don't want to frighten you and Mrs. Martin. I'm giving a small dinner-party this evening."

Anne tried to keep from appearing panic-stricken, but she knew there must be a look of dismay in her face.

Everything Was Perfect.

Mr. Grenville said, "There'll be nothing to it, really. Just three intimate friends and myself. Mr. and Mrs. Belden and Mrs. Arden. Nothing elaborate. I'll leave the dinner to Mrs. Martin. A roast or chicken, oh, she'll know—the usual thing. I'll give her the gin later for some cocktails to be served in the living room before dinner. Dinner around 7, I think. I'll just leave the meal to her—I don't want to be bothered. My friends aren't fussy. They're often hungry and like to eat, but they're really not fussy."

Anne said, "Yes, sir, your breakfast is getting cold."

He sat down in the chair with his back to her. The chair was placed so that he could look out the window and see the rain falling. "This is jolly. I've never had breakfast in my room in this house."

"Will there be anything more, sir?"

"This is perfect." He said it quite as though he meant it.

Anne went down the stairs and ran through the dining room into the kitchen. Lillian had their breakfast ready on the table in the dinette. She was pouring a cup of coffee; a cigarette dangled between her lips.

Anne said breathlessly, feeling a little panic-stricken, "Mr. Grenville is having a dinner party tonight. There will be three guests. Oh. Lillian, can you do it?"

"Do what?" asked Lillian.

"Satisfy his guests with your cooking?"

Lillian looked wounded. "Isn't Mr. Grenville still alive? Has he had indigestion yet?"

"I mean," said Anne, "will you be nervous cooking for so many people?"

"Don't be silly," said Lillian. "Nothing makes me nervous when I eat and sleep regularly."

"You have to arrange the whole meal, Lillian. He doesn't want to be bothered with it. He said a roast or a chicken——"

She Could Do It.

"Okay," said Lillian, pouring some syrup over a waffle. "Give me 15 minutes with electric cookery and I'll have a menu picked out that would startle the King of England."

"He's going to give you some gin for cocktails to be served in the living room before dinner."

A sudden and boundless enthusiasm swept over Lillian's face. "Baby, I'll make cocktails that will turn their shirts purple."

Anne sat down at the table. Lillian poured her a cup of coffee and said, "I could never be a starving chorus girl again."

"Hush!" said Anne, horrified. "If Mr. Grenville hears you, we'll be discharged."

The front doorbell rang sharply. Some one was ringing the front doorbell!

Anne leaped to her feet and ran across the kitchen through the hall to the front door.

She opened the door. A young man with a soft hat upon his head and a dripping blue raincoat stared at her. He stared at her for a long time, quite as though he were speechless.

Visitor Was Amused.

Anne was conscious of a little shock of surprise at the way the young man stared at her, but she stood firmly in the doorway, blocking his path. Once he seemed upon the point of brushing her aside and entering without a word; but he saw that he would practically knock over the dark-eyed little girl, who stood watching him like a sort o' sentinel at bay.

The young man said with a sudden smile, while water dripped from his hat to the floor, "Is Mr. Grenville in?"

Anne said, "Yes, sir. Who's calling?"

"I'll go right in," said the young man.

"Oh, no," said Anne sternly. "Who's calling?"

"I'm Mr. Belden," said the young man quietly. "Colin Belden."

"Yes, sir," said Anne. "Mr. Grenville mentioned you this morning."

"What did he say about me?" the young man inquired.

Laughter in His Eyes.

"He said that you were coming to dinner this evening."

"Well, I'm not coming to breakfast this morning. May I step in?"

Anne said, "Yes, sir," and stood to one side while the young man with the round face came into the hall and took off his very wet hat. "I'll tell Mr. Grenville that you're here."

"Don't bother," said the young man. "We're very friendly. I drop in any time. Where is he?"

"He's having breakfast in his room, sir."

For a moment the young man tottered upon the verge of laughter; he seemed to control himself by putting a hand to his mouth and coughing a little. A look of amusement crept into his eyes and his round face glowed with laughter.

Still Laughing.

"Having breakfast in his room? Well, well!" He stood with his hat in his hand, surveying her. "Are you the new maid?"

Anne said, "Yes, sir."

"And how are you getting along?"

"Very well, thank you."

"That's fine. I'll go upstairs." He walked through the hall and started up the stairs. Anne stood looking after him. Halfway up the stairs the young man turned and glanced back at her. He was smiling and his whole attitude was one of suppressed amusement. In fact, it seemed to Anne that he had a kind of humorous tolerance for her.

But Anne stood at the foot of the stairs and waited until she heard Mr. Grenville call, "Come in." She was not going to let any burglars into the house; he might be Mr. Belden, but how did she know that?

What to Do?

She heard Mr. Grenville saying, "Hello, Colin," and Mr. Belden said loudly, "Your maid wasn't going to let me in," and Mr. Grenville laughed and said, "It's too bad she did."

There was a pause; a silence; then Anne thought she heard the sound of the door closing.

She was upon the point of returning to the kitchen when it occurred to her that Mr. Grenville might be ready for more coffee; and, too, perhaps he would want Mr. Belden to have coffee with him. But should she disturb the two men?

Knife Is Only Treatment for Bone Infection

Specialist Outlines New Method of Sterilizing and Healing.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

BONES, joints, and tendons (the structures that attach muscles to the bones) are strong but at the same time delicate parts of the body. They will not brook insult without rebellion, nor will they forgive easily. When injury or disease comes along these structures take their time in healing and may incapacitate their possessor for a long period.

Bones may not only be broken or crushed, but they may be infected with bacteria. When infection begins in the bone marrow the disease is known as osteomyelitis.

At the onset there may be delirium, great prostration, chills, severe headache, vomiting, and considerable pain. The temperature is the up-and-down type, often rising to 104 degrees F. The affected part is exceedingly tender and the slightest movement causes pain. At first there may be no swelling, and the X-ray will not show the beginning abscess in the bone.

The only method of treatment is prompt operation. This usually consists in exposing the bone and providing an opening sufficiently large to evacuate the pus. Rarely will cases of osteomyelitis heal quickly.

Attempts have been made to sterilize the infected parts with strong antiseptics, and to chisel away every particle of diseased bone. Chlorine in the form of Dakin's solution has been used. Within recent years a new plan has met with some success. W. H. and N. B. Taylor used salt solution under pressure to fill the wound completely, dilute the bacteria, and bring about cleansing and healing. This fluid is changed at approximately one hour intervals. They report that swelling and tenderness disappear under this method and that the discharge of thick pus changes to clear serum within a few days.

Lois A. Cornell Becomes Bride Of Mr. Dawson

Former Arlington Hall Teacher Marries in Kansas City.

The wedding of Miss Lois A. Cornell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Howard M. Cornell, of Dulce, N. Mex., to Mr. Raleigh W. Dawson, son of Mr. W. Y. Dawson, of San Benito, Tex., took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Congregational Church in Kansas City, Mo., The church was decorated with Christmas greens and tall white tapers.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her mother's wedding gown of satin, made with a yoke of net with embroidery of seed pearls. The skirt terminated in a long train. She wore the handmade Venetian lace veil which belongs to her cousin, Mrs. August Miller, of New York. Her bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley.

Sister Is Maid of Honor.

Miss Audrey Cornell attended her sister as maid of honor. She had on a tea gown of soft blue and carried a bouquet of roses.

Mr. Dudley E. Cornell, brother of the bride, acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. Howard M. Cornell, another brother of the bride, and Mr. John Allen Krok, cousin of the bride.

Member of Delta Gamma.

Mrs. Dawson was graduated from the University of Colorado, where she was a member of Delta Gamma Sorority. After receiving her master's degree, she taught at the Arlington Hall School for Girls here. For the last year and a half she has been with the Farm Credit Administration. Mr. Dawson attended Baylor University in Texas and was graduated from Georgetown School of Foreign Service. For the last two years he has been editor of Domestic Commerce, a magazine of the Department of Commerce.

Mrs. Ruth Tatum Weds C. H. Cecil

Ceremony Is Performed in Chevy Chase Methodist Parsonage.

Mrs. John Vance Williams, of Chevy Chase, Md., announces the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Williams Tatum, to Mr. Charles Heywood Cecil, of Washington, formerly of England. The ceremony took place Tuesday night at the parsonage of the Chevy Chase Methodist Church with the Rev. Edward Gardiner Lapch officiating.

The bride wore a gown of sapphire-blue velvet, made on long lines with a small train and trimmed with sable. Her small hat was of brown as were her accessories, and her flowers were tea roses and babies breath. Mrs. H. W. Floyd, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor, who wore a gown of raspberry velvet made on on princess lines with a small gold hat and gold accessories. She wore a corsage of talisman roses. Mr. H. W. Floyd was best man.

Mrs. Williams, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black metalasee, trimmed with white, and wore a corsage of white roses.

Mr. Cecil and his bride will be at home after January 1 at 3425 Sixteenth street.

Grain Foods Impair Hawaiian's Health; Return to Former Diet Is Sought

This smiling 1-year-old is Dr. Martha R. Jones' prize exhibit in her dental clinic in Honolulu.

The perfect teeth of this Filipino girl are largely due to a fruit and vegetable diet.

ALOHA to pearly teeth and beautiful physiques! Thus spoke civilization when, incased in the first barrel of flour, it rolled into the Hawaiian Islands more than a century ago. Discarding their own adequate diet for the grain foods of the White Man, the Islanders have continued to pay in health and happiness for foreign education.

"Today we are attempting to undo the wrong by persuading them to revert to the food habits of their forefathers," said Dr. Martha R. Jones, research associate of the Queen's Hospital at Honolulu, who studied the teeth and health of the Hawaiians for six years. Dr. Jones, who discovered one solution to the cause of pyorrhea and tooth decay, precipitated a mild sensation recently at the Centennial Dental Celebration in New York, and last week before members of the medical and dental officers of the U. S. Navy here, by reading a paper supporting her findings.

Unnecessary to Health.

"Grain foods are absolutely unnecessary to the health of the Islanders," asserted the dark-eyed, vivacious educator, a graduate of the Yale Medical School. "Nature provided the perfect set-up in climate and food for the people there. The introduction of flour and the acid-forming foods of the White Man was as unnecessary as it was unwise. Widespread disease susceptibility and rampant tooth decay has resulted. Babies are born with defective teeth that disintegrate as soon as they come through the gums.

"This is due to an overemphasis of the seed or grain food diet today and a lack of appreciation of the unique value of leaves and grasses, which are rich in the necessary elements lacking in seeds. The more sunshine you have, the more fruit and vegetables and the less grain foods the diet should contain."

Previous to the invasion of the foreigners in Hawaii, said Dr. Jones, the diet consisted of taro (a root), sweet potatoes, fish, fruits, grassy vegetables and sugar cane.

Cane Benefits Teeth and Gums.

"The latter," she said, "was chewed constantly by native children and grown-ups. This was an important factor in broadening the dental arches and cleansing the teeth of the ancient natives. They work in the islands, Dr. Jones be-needed no further dental hygiene to keep their teeth and gums healthy.

"In addition to being a gum exerciser and teeth cleanser, the fibrous sugar cane contains a sirup rich in potassium, alkaline elements and iron, and includes vitamines, calories and minerals. The refined sugar of the White Man can boast nothing but calories."

Another result of discarding native foods for the foreigners' diet was a widespread susceptibility to pneumonia, tuberculosis and blood vessel diseases among the Hawaiian born, said Dr. Jones.

Completing her first two years'

gan putting her nutritional theories into practice. She opened the first health center in an isolated village among Filipino sugar plantation laborers. Here, with a staff of native wives and daughters, she supervised the feeding of mothers and babies. The infant mortality in this locality was cut from 320 to zero the first year.

After 16 months the results challenged the attention of the plantation manager. Through his efforts and those of Dr. Nils P. Larson, medical director of Queens Hospital, the aid of the Sugar Planters' Association was sought in an effort to extend the work.

This group, together with the Queens Hospital and the Ewa Plantation Co., lent their financial and moral support in broadening the project to embrace the entire plantation. Enrollment grew to include not only babies, but preschool and school children, as well as adults.

"General health has improved with startling results during the last three years," declared Dr. Jones. "The infant mortality has varied from one-third to one-fifth of its former standing. Now we are able to avert the rampant tooth decay up to the second year. It is easier from then on. This we accomplished by an emphasis of the alkaline reaction foods in prenatal and postnatal diets.

"Like most progressive peoples, the Hawaiians would rather learn something new than revert to discarded customs. Many of them were reluctant at first to go back to the native foods, still comprising (with happy results) the diet of the "old-fashioned" Hawaiians.

Conducted Pyorrhea Experiments.

Dr. Jones first won scientific notice when she accepted a position at the University of California Medical School. First she carried on an extensive study of the effect of different foods upon infant behavior. At the same time she experimented on dogs in the study of pyorrhea.

Helene Delvell Weds Mr. Ewing In Alexandria

Miss Helene Delvell, daughter of D. H. Delvell, of Salt Lake City, and Mr. Orman Lowell Howe Ewing, son of National Committeeman O. W. Ewing, of Utah, were married yesterday afternoon at Christ Church, Alexandria, Va. The Rev. William J. Morton, rector, performed the ceremony. Only members of the families and a few close friends were present.

The marriage was the outgrowth of a romance that started when the bride and bridegroom were students at the University of Utah. Miss Joy Ewing, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid, having come to Washington from Fassifern School at Henderson, N. C., where she is taking an art course.

Mr. Ewing is a second-year student at George Washington Law School and a member of Sigma Nu and Delta Beta Thi Fraternities. The couple will take a bridal trip through the North after the holidays.

Miss Ruby Gruman Weds Frank Hale

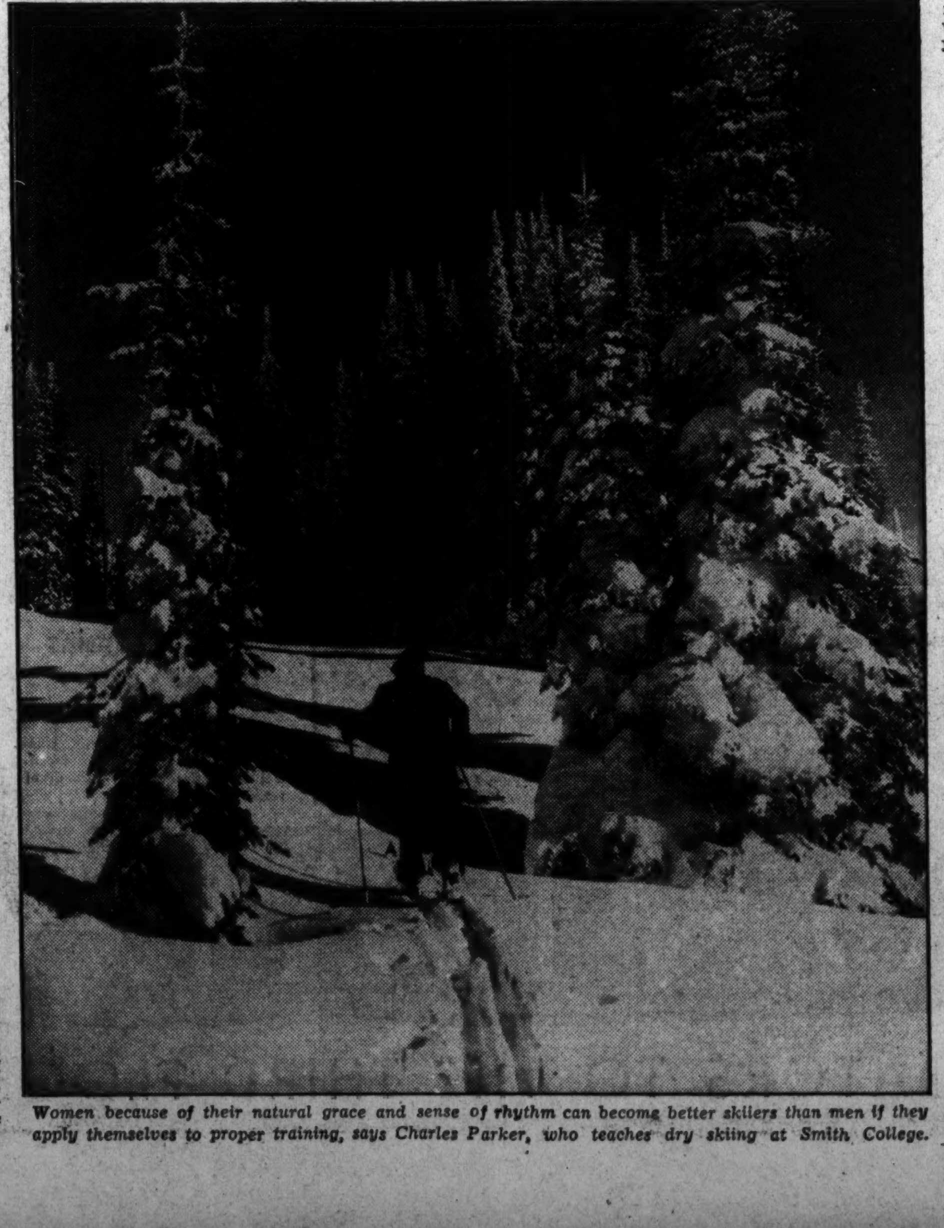
Ceremony Is Performed in New York.

The wedding of Miss Ruby Gruman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gruman, to Mr. Frank Connell Hale, son of Mrs. J. A. Newberry, of Jewett, Texas, took place yesterday in New York, with the Rev. George Gruman, cousin of the bride, officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of brown and gold net made with a brief train and short jacket. Her hat, halo effect model, also was of the net and she wore a shoulder corsage of brown and yellow orchids.

Miss Billie Gruman, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a frock of black crepe with a silver lame jacket. Her hat was of black velvet and she had a corsage of gardenias.

Mr. Roger E. Barnes was best man. After the ceremony the couple left on the S. S. Georgia for a two-week tour of the West Indies. Upon their return they will make their home in Washington.



Women because of their natural grace and sense of rhythm can become better skiers than men if they apply themselves to proper training, says Charles Parker, who teaches dry skiing at Smith College.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Local Woman Makes Gracious Bid for Three Guests to Christmas Party.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am writing to you for advice and help. I have been interested in the letters appearing in your column from lonely young women, for I well remember the loneliness which sometimes overwhelmed me during my first year in Washington. I did not attend the Strangers' Dinner on Thanksgiving Day, but I think the lady whose thoughtfulness and enterprise made that dinner possible is to be commended.

• • • •

My reason for writing you is this: The circle of friends with whom I would normally spend Christmas Day happen all to be otherwise occupied this year, and I expect to be alone over the holiday week-end. I have a comfortable little apartment and I wonder if I could contact two or three young women who might otherwise be sepnding a lonely day, who would care to come to my apartment and have Christmas dinner with me and perhaps an evening of games.

• • • •

Do you think it would be wise for me to try to do this? I live alone and, of course, should not care to welcome to my home anyone who would not accept such an invitation in as courteous a fashion as I wish to offer it. On the other hand, I have thought the writers of some of the "lonely" letters to you would be interesting persons to meet. I remember particularly one who signed herself "Faith." If she were free to come, I should certainly like to have her. I remember letters some weeks ago from two women in their early 30's who spoke of being comfortably situated but of having few opportunities to make friends, but I do not recall how those letters were signed.

• • • •

I do not wish you to think I am a lonely, disgruntled person who is looking for some way to pass the day. It is true that I do not wish to spend Christmas Day by myself—I did once!—but it is a combination of circumstances, not lack of friends, which leaves me alone this year.

• • • •

The fact that I am to be alone, however, gives me the opportunity to make this experiment which I have long thought of trying. I might say that I am 32 and am secretary to a man who is with one of the scientific bureaus of the Government, a position which I have thoroughly enjoyed every day for five years. I live in the Northwestern part of the city, within walking distance of downtown, and am about as contended as I suppose one grows to be in this world.

• • • •

I should like to have not more than three guests for Christmas dinner, for I could not very well make a larger number comfortable. Do you think my idea would work? If so, could you put me in touch with three young women—or they might be older—who would care to try such an experiment rather than eat Christmas dinner alone? I should try to make them welcome and give them a pleasant evening. We might all of us make new friends, and at any rate it should do no harm to try.

FRIENDLY.

Acceptances in Order.

DEAR FRIENDLY: Your plan for a small Christmas dinner party has my complete approval. While I have neither the name nor the address of the woman who signed herself "Faith," nor permission to divulge the names of the other two women you refer to, I do hope on reading your foregoing letter they will immediately communicate with you through this column.

• • • •

I am holding your self-addressed envelope in which I hope to be able to forward you the names of three wholly acceptable guests, who are socially and culturally qualified to enjoy your hospitality in the spirit in which it is extended.

• • • •

Certainly this is just the opportunity for which various of my correspondents have been yearning. It is up to them now to step forward and reveal their identity to so gracious a would-be hostess. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Girls Practice "Dry Skiing"

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

WHEN SMITH COLLEGE students start studying dry skiing, before it is time for even suspicion of snow, it is good evidence of the hold that the sport is taking among American women.

Charles L. Parker, who has been teaching dry skiing at Smith, recently told Amherst College students that they will have to find higher jumps and harder trails, to keep a skiing advantage over the women. Perhaps this is where the lighter sex has an inning.

Women students in Mr. Parker's class were told by him, in turn, that if women would apply themselves to proper training, they would prove capable of becoming better skiers than the average man. Women's natural grace and sense of rhythm, according to Mr. Parker, give them an initial advantage.

Although the majority of women's colleges have not progressed to the point of highly technical classes, informal skiing is becoming increasingly popular. On cold afternoons, instead of the fudge parties of the past there are groups of students setting forth for trail skiing.

Although more women are writing poetry today than ever before, they are still falling short of standards set by the greatest men poets, according to Virginia Moore, author of two volumes of poetry and a book of prose criticism.

Woman Poet Views Work Of Sex as Lacking Depth

"MORE WOMEN are writing poetry today than at any previous period in the history of the world. But for the most part, their work is imitative and derivative; it has no deep roots; it isn't first class."

Such is the opinion of Virginia Moore, one of the most promising of younger American poets, who recently visited in Washington. With two published volumes of poetry—"Not Poppy" and "Sweet Water and Bitter"—to her credit, this attractive woman (scarcely out of her twenties) is also the author of a recently published book of prose, "Distinguished Women Writers."

Her subject was "Women Poets" when she talked at the December breakfast of the League of American Pen Women. But yesterday, on her way back to her home in Scottsville, Vt., from New York, she discussed the work of both men and women poets.

"Women poets are not dramatic, nor epic, nor philosophic," she said. "They don't look very far back nor very far forward. They seem unable to synthesize many small confusing facts into one divinely simple fact."

Forecasts Great Women Poets.

"I believe in time women, entirely emancipated from the narrow lives they have lived through most of history, and with imagination enlarged and disciplined, will write poetry as great as any man's.

"Why shouldn't they? The fragments of Sappho prove that at least one great woman poet has lived. And there are others of later times who were perhaps not great, but at least had greatness in them. In England, Emily Bronte, Christina Rosetti, Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Charlotte Mew. In America, Emily Dickinson and perhaps—perhaps—in a flash at the last, Elinor Wylie."

But what about Edna St. Vincent Millay, proclaimed by some critics the greatest woman poet since Sappho?

"I doubt she is great," said Miss Moore. "I admit, of course, she has merit. She no longer wears her heart upon her sleeve. But she still sings—with what bitter sweetness! Personally, I don't consider her as fine a poet as was Elinor Wylie, who changed almost before our eyes from a merely gifted versemaker, fascinated by hard, bright surfaces, to a poet whom one is tempted to call—well, almost great."

Praises Leone Adams' Work.

The discussion then turned to men poets, and in reply to a barrage of questions, Miss Moore gave her opinions slowly and thoughtfully.

Of William Butler Yeats, she said:

"He is the greatest living poet writing in English. He has no close runner-up. His poetry has become purer, firmer and more significant with the years, until today, at 69, he stands a giant among pygmies."

Of Robert Frost:

"At his best, as in 'Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening' and 'The Pasture,' he moves me by his simplicity. But I confess that at his worst, or even middling, as in some of his long bucolics, he bores me by the same quality. I prefer a richer poetry, full of implications and allusions—'purified' as Yeats says, 'by elaborate artifice.'"

Having given her opinion of some of those whom she termed the "greater lights in modern poetry," Miss Moore answered a few questions about her own work.

"I can't stand up for any of that old poetry (she was referring to the selections in her two volumes, published both in America and in England) I wrote those books when I was too young. But I have almost enough verse now for another book. I hope it will be better."

Sisto's Captain Describes Gale Buffeting Ship

16 Seamen Snatched From Death Are En Route to Cherbourg.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Aboard Steamship New York, en route to Cherbourg, France, Dec. 19. Sixteen worn and weary seamen snatched from the very edge of Davy Jones' Locker were en route to Cherbourg today aboard the steamer that rescued them from the sinking ship Sisto.

A lifeboat in charge of Second Officer Wiesen braved high seas for two hours to save the 16 officers and crewsmen of the storm-battered Sisto.

While the rescue was effected the Aurania, one of the several vessels that answered the freighter's distress calls, poured oil on the water, and the Europa, another, played searchlights over the rescue scene.

Hundreds of smartly dressed passengers aboard the Europa lined the rail, despite the whipping wind, to watch enthralled as Wiesen and his ten men, partly shielded by the Europa's great bulk, fought their way to the Sisto's side, picked up the men as they plunged one by one into the water and battled their way back to the New York.

Capt. Fritz Kruse, commander of the Hamburg-American liner New York, commodore of the fleet and veteran of many tussles with the sea, will command the liner Resolute on its 1935 around-the-world cruise, Hamburg-American offices in New York announced.

(Dispatches from Hamburg said that city was preparing an enthusiastic welcome for the seamen who effected the rescue.)

Lost All Lifeboats.

Bound from Pugwash, N. S., to Belfast, the little freighter ran into a "terrific hurricane" December 13-14 and lost all her lifeboats, he said.

"The front part of the bridge was carried away and the doors of the saloon were smashed in," he related, "allowing seas to wash in and forcing the crew to leave the forecastle. There was great danger of the deck cargo covering the entrance, preventing the crew's exit. * * * Officers and members of the crew who remained in the chart room were in extreme danger of being washed overboard.

"Sunday night the storm again increased in fury. The hurricane lasted all day Monday and Tuesday, with huge breakers rolling over the ship."

Monday evening, the captain said, the ship refused to obey the wheel, the rudder apparently having been broken, and when the deck cargo shifted, causing the vessel to list heavily, the Sisto called for help.

Marriage for $20,000

If you're a blond or red-haired and worth $20,000, Salil Wells, Wisconsin farm girl, will marry you to help her father, once wealthy, but now destitute.

The New York, Aurania, President Harding, Europa and Gerolstein, together with the S. S. Mobiloil, arrived, and all stood by for several hours.

"The New York, making the first contact with the Sisto, took off our crew in the (early) morning," Capt. Reinerstein continued. "All during Tuesday night the danger increased, requiring the New York to start its salvage operations immediately, despite the tremendous seas * * *.

Crash Threatened.

"The New York's lifeboat crew, working valiantly, maneuvered the boat splendidlly, although the Sisto's list momentarily threatened the craft with a crash. Despite these overwhelming difficulties, the Sisto's crew of 16 was hauled through the water by lines pulled into the lifeboat.

"Returning to the New York, the lifeboat crew, due to the increased weight of those they had rescued, faced an increased danger of smashing up, but through excellent seamanship they succeeded in the wonderful feat of taking us safely aboard the New York."

Radio Operator Stoldt, of the New York, said the "west-northwest storm" lashing the Sisto and the rescue ships was of "force nine" (on the Beaufort scale, 47 to 54 miles an hour).

"After two hours of extraordinarily hard work and extremely high swell, the rescue was finished successfully," he said. "At 2 a. m. today the whole crew of the wreck was on board safely and unhurt. * * * The wreck is still drifting and a danger to navigation."

120 Passengers Rescued.

Oporto, Portugal, Dec. 19 (AP).—Swift-working seamen today removed 120 passengers from the Dutch steamer Orania just before she sank in Leixoes harbor after colliding with the Portuguese freighter Loanda.

A great hole was torn in the Orania and she immediately listed heavily to port, the passengers being disembarked. Efforts then were made to beach the Orania but she sank in the harbor, lying on her side half submerged.

The Orania, en route from Argentina and Brazil, was entering the harbor when the accident occurred.

pany for construction of the Old Hickory powder plant, which later was canceled by Secretary Baker because it would permit what he regarded as excessive profits.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and Col. C. T. Harris, of the War Department, clashed over the advisability of industrial leaders serving in an advisory capacity on the various war boards.

Clark said such men can't sit on the side of both seller and buyer.

Harris insisted the War Department held its right to pass judgment on any proposal.

"If there are Government officers who can not associate with industry without violating their trust," the Army officer said, "the whole thing falls flat."

Letter Submitted.

Chairman Nye submitted a letter written by Col. Williams in 1918 to the chief of ordnance naming the companies in which he was interested.

"Would not that lead to his retirement?" he asked Col. Harris.

"In my opinion," Harris replied, "it should have relieved him from duty so far as those companies were concerned."

The du Ponts again entered the inquiry with a disclosure that the War Department had spent $286,000 of PWA money to buy rifle and cannon powder from the company at a time when its sales to the Government were yielding it a profit of about 30 per cent on its gross sales price.

At the War Department officials said that in July, 1933, the PWA had made an allotment to the department of $6,000,000 for the purchase of ammunition.

The War Department's annual budget was reduced drastically last year, and officers said the PWA allotment was made to permit the Army to carry on its usual target practice.

The day's Senate committee developments also included an assertion by Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, that the War Department is planning that the Government wield an "absolute control" over the press should another war come. He contended the department was proposing Congress write it a "blank check."

Recreational Park Planned in Virginia

U. S. Proposes Tract if the Land Can Be Bought.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). A Federal recreation park of a score or more acres, to be located a mile from the city on the Lynchburg highway, will be set up here if the National Park Service is able to obtain the land.

The project is one of the many sponsored by the Department of the Interior. The plots, which are on through highways, are for the use of both transients and local people.

Under the plans, the Federal Government will acquire 18 acres of property at the old Moores Creek pumping station, which now belongs to the city. This acreage and another tract which it is hoped will be acquired from individuals, would be developed by Federal engineers.

Hard Liquor Leads Wines In ABC Sales

Whisky Outsells Less Potent Drinks 12 Times.

Virginia State Beverage Shops Disclose Varied Tastes.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—Liquor sold in State stores during the six months from May to October, inclusive, amounted to 12 times the volume of wine sold both by the State and by private licensees during the same period, A. B. C. Board figures indicated today.

In releasing the figures on consumption of various types of alcoholic beverages, the board pointed out that figures on wine represented the amount sold by the board or bought by licensees and did not make allowance for stocks which may remain in the hands of the licensees. Also, that figures on hard liquor sales are to be considered in connection with the fact that stores constantly were being opened during the period, varying from 9 in May to 65 in October.

But examination of percentages month by month gave little comfort to those who had expressed the hope that the end of repeal would mark the beginning of a turning of Virginia tastes from hard liquors to wines.

Low Wine Consumption.

In May, for example, hard liquors made up 66.42 per cent of the sales and wines 32.28 per cent, but in June, with retail stocks of wines probably more nearly completed and more liquor stores open, the figures became hard liquor 87.25 to wine 12.26. In July the liquor figure went over 90 per cent, going as high as 96.64 per cent in August and bringing the average for the six months up to 91.65 per cent, while proportion of wine dropped as low as 4.82 per cent in August and was 7.75 per cent for the six months.

Looking at the wine figure alone it appears that 93.08 per cent of domestic wine to 6.92 per cent of imported was distributed among the entire period. The first month imported wines sold more than 10 per cent but from July on through October they averaged only a little more than 5 per cent of the wine sales.

Gin Summer Drink.

The figures indicated a preference for gin as a summer drink, with the proportion of this beverage running as high as 29.40 per cent of hard liquor sales in July but starting at 23.88 per cent in May and dropping back to 22.03 per cent in September and then going down to 16.32 per cent in October.

Among the whiskies an increasing trend toward the straight product was seen. For the six months the proportion was 83.91 per cent straight to 14.75 per cent blended, with bonded, Scotch and Irish making up the negligible remainder. There was steady progress, however, from 73.77 per cent straight whiskey in May up to 87.95 per cent in October, while blends declined from 24.41 per cent the first month to 10.85 per cent in the last one.

Confession Made In Martin's Death

Suspect Admits Killing, Prosecutor Says.

Beckley, W. Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—Assistant Prosecuting Attorney W. H. McGinnis, jr., announced this afternoon Vernon Lilly, 22, had confessed he killed Deputy Sheriff Seamon Martin.

McGinnis said Lilly admitted he shot at Martin five times and beat him with the butt of a pistol.

Martin's body was found yesterday by hunters near Ghent. He had been beaten and shot, and his throat was cut.

SIMON PETER CRONE AND ESTELLE TAYLOR.

Simon Peter Crone Here Sees Movie Star and Moving Stair.

After a round of activity, including escalators and Estelle Taylor, Simon sold his record for a gardenia and a look from the Washington Monument.

Simon's record was this: He had a corner on the market for the most-sustained abstinence and donothingness ever brought to the attention of the record keepers.

For example, this 75-year-old, before yesterday, had never seen a department store, a hospital, a building higher than four stories, a sailboat, a steamship, an airplane on the ground.

Gardenia for Simon.

But he didn't sell his record for a song. Not all the mortals in this world get gardenias put in their lapels by the screen star, Estelle Taylor.

Simon's initial surprise came on the electric stairway in a department store. He thought they were "all right," but added that the old-fashioned kind in Brunswick are better.

Atop the Washington Monument, Simon had little to say. He had heard that the people and cars below looked like ants. He "reckoned" they did.

Not all of Simon's records were broken. At the Mayflower, where he was a luncheon guest of the management, he shook his head vigorously at the waiter's suggestion of a cocktail. He refused a cigarette, too.

About revolving doors, the aged countryman was emphatic. "They are just a nuisance," he said, but later admitted that they would be all right after he "got used to them."

Other Records.

Some more of Simon's records (some smashed by the trip here) are: Never been to the mountains, never talked until he was 21, never rode in a street car, never had a sweetheart, never attended a wedding, prize fight, movie, baseball game or football game.

Simon Peter has been the leading handbill distributor of Brunswick for years. He is proud of the fact that he never threw away a circular. "Young fellows throw most of them away," he said.

Simon went back to Frederick County. He smiled his appreciation of the day in the city—but from all outward indications he wanted to get back where doors are hinged and stairways are stationary.

Chambersburg Mourns Death Of Culbertson

City Officials Plan to Attend Funeral of Councilman.

Chambersburg, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for William A. Culbertson, 60, First Ward councilman and general manager of the Chambersburg Ice & Cold Storage Co., who died today at his home as the result of a stroke he suffered November 7.

The borough council, of which he was a member, will attend the funeral in a body, as will all departmental heads and the entire police department. Plans were announced today for tolling the bell at ciyt hall at the hour of burial.

Mr. Culbertson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Pauline Ruthrauff Culbertson, and a brother, Charles A., of Doylestown.

Rounding out his third consecutive four-year term as a member of the council, Mr. Culbertson leaves a number of monuments to his industry and foresight. He initiated the budget system in the borough government, originated the move for an appraisal along modern lines of the properties of the water and light departments and was the chief proponent of a modernized bookkeeping system at city hall.

In early life he was employed as an erecting engineer by the Frick Co., Waynesboro. He became associated with the ice and cold storage business here in 1901.

Samuel G. Carr.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Samuel G. Carr, 52, died at his home near New Hope from heart disease.

Mr. Carr is survived by his wife, a son, Aubrey; two daughters, Louise and Margaret Carr, of Washington; three sisters, Miss Annie Carr, of this city; Mrs. Paul McCallister, of Mount Sidney, and Mrs. J. E. Wood, of Waynesboro; and one brother, Thomas Carr, of Nelson County.

Alfred N. Russell.

Cambridge, Md., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—Funeral rites for Alfred N. Russell, nonagenarian, who died at the home of his daughter in Federalsburg, will be held tomorrow afternoon in Wesley M. E. Church.

He was a gospel singer, and two years ago appeared at Shiloh Camp meeting on the platform with Billy Sunday.

Mr. Russell was a Civil War veteran, having enlisted in Pennsylvania, of which he was a native.

Surviving him are one daughter, Mrs. J. Frank Todd, of Federalsburg; one son, Edward F. Russell, of Philadelphia; one sister, Mrs. Emma McIntyre, of Oxford, Pa., and three brothers, Edward and John, of Reading, Pa., and George Russell, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. A. E. Westrator.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—Mrs. Virginia Westrator, wife of A. Eugene Westrator, who died in Garfield Hospital, Washington, Tuesday, was brought back here today for burial.

Mrs. Westrator is survived by her husband; one son, Charles, of Washington; and five brothers, William and Brook Rind, this city; Ogle Rind, Pikeside; Colbert and Con Rind.

British Officer Dies.

Sunday Film Move Fought By Churches

Hagerstown's Ministers Organize to Oppose Legalization.

Sermons to Hit Proposal From 29 Pulpits; Pledges Signed.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 19 (Spl.). The movement against any bill that would legalize Sunday movies in Hagerstown gained momentum today as representatives of 29 churches in this city and Washington County at a mass meeting decided to confer with the State Senator-elect and six members-elect of the House of Delegates, and also planned to consider other methods of protesting against any such move.

The meeting was called by the Rev. Dr. Paul E. Holdcraft, president of the Washington County Ministerial Association, and was addressed by the Rev. W. W. Davis, secretary of the Maryland Lord's Day Alliance, and other prominent churchmen.

Declaring that theater managers in other Maryland cities where Sunday movies are legal had told him operating expenses had increased 15 per cent since Sunday shows had been permitted, Dr. Davis said that they also reported that a seven-day week had not materially increased receipts over those of six days.

Outside Move Seen.

Charging that the movement had originated outside Hagerstown, the Rev. Dr. F. Berry Plummer, United Brethren minister here, said that local theater men were not unanimously in favor of Sunday movies.

From all of the 29 pulpits of churches represented at the meeting, sermons opposing legalizing of Sunday movies will be preached next Sunday.

Petitions also will be circulated in the churches. Already four churches, Grace United Brethren Church, Washington Square Methodist Episcopal Church, St. Paul's Methodist Church and the Emanual Brethren Church have obtained 1,000 signers to petitions opposing Sunday movies.

The assistance of the Lord's Day Alliance also was promised by Dr. Davis in fighting the movement here.

Committee Appointed.

A committee was named from a number of organizations affiliated with the churches to prepare a campaign opposing Sunday movies. This committee consists of Elmer N. Funkhouser, Mrs. Paul Smith, the Rev. J. E. Kemp Horn and the Rev. Dr. W. S. Hess, representing the Washington County Branch of the Lord's Day Alliance, and Charles Marrison, George Twyford, Dr. P. L. Russell, W. S. Fishel and C. E. Steelee, representing the Washington County Council of Religious Education. This committee will confer with the county delegation to the General Assembly.

Denominations represented at the mass meeting were the Methodist Episcopal, United Brethren and Brethren, Disciples of Christ, Evangelical, Church of God, Baptist, Lutheran and Reformed.

Along the Tri-State Trail

with

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor

ABOUT everyone is thinking of Christmas this week—making those last-minute preparations for the annual visit of the "jolly old fellow."

And all along the Tri-State trail one hears of plans that are to bring happiness to the children and, in many cases, the grown-ups.

At Annapolis, Md., Gov. Albert C. Ritchie will follow his custom of years and tender a Christmas treat to the children of Annapolis and Anne Arundel County December 26. Since his first inaugural, Gov. Ritchie has been host to the children at motion-picture performances.

Patients in the Waynesboro (Pa.) Hospital will not be without the usual holiday remembrances, as thoughtful citizens of that thriving Pennsylvania city have made arrangements to have Christmas trees, brightly lighted, on each floor of the hospital, along with the nurses' dining room.

And the Kate Noland Garnet Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at Crozet, Va., is not going to forget the "boys who wore the gray."

Baskets of Christmas delicacies are to be sent to Confederate veterans and the widows of Confederate veterans in the Crozet community.

At Leonardtown, Md., a motion-picture theater announces that it will give free admission to all children of St. Marys County December 26.

Citizens of Hagerstown, Md., have determined that no child within their midst shall experience a toyless Christmas. Trucks are being sent over the city to gather in toys which will be supplied to 2,500 poor children at Christmastide.

But it looks like a turkey dinner and all its furnishings will go begging at Pocomoke City, Md., this year. The dinner has been planned for the Civilian Conservation Corps camp boys there, but most of the CCC lads are planning to leave Saturday night to spend the holidays at home. Only about 20 boys are planning to remain and "do justice to the turkey."

Out of the mountain fastness of Virginia comes an appeal for toys for mountain boys and girls who fear that Santa Claus may not be able to reach them this year. Here's the appeal from the Mountain Mission School, Grundy, Va.

"Orphans and other poor boys and girls in this mountain section plead for a Christmas tree and a real Santa Claus. They say only one toy of any kind will be enough for them. It was announced today that a Christmas tree would be given at the Mountain Mission School and Orphanage for the orphans and other poor children who have no home other than this institution, also for the poor children who reside in the community surrounding the mission school. Toys of any kind or description, old or new, will be highly appreciated, also nuts, fruits and candies would add much to their Christmas vision. Many of these children never had a toy of any kind. The Christmas tree will be put in order, but unless those who can will supply the necessary articles, it will be blank. Address Mrs. S. R. Hurley, dean of girls, Grundy, Va."

Bell Taken to Virginia Asylum; If Sane, He Will Stand New Trial

Further Court Action to Hinge on Report From Hospital.

By Bart Sheridan.
(Special Correspondent of The Post.)

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 19.—Edward C. Bell, accused wife poisoner and central figure in this city's dramatic court case, was delivered to the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Marion today after spending the night in the Fredericksburg City Jail.

His removal was ordered last night by Judge Frederick W. Coleman, after he declared the case, which had consumed seven days of testimony and argument, a mistrial. The jury reported itself as hopelessly deadlocked last night with seven members voting for conviction and five for acquittal by insanity.

The first jury ballot favored conviction by a vote of 10 to 2, jurors disclosed today. Six additional ballots were taken as more jurymen were won over to the insanity viewpoint.

Sees His Family.

Miss Irma Bell, daughter of the gray-haired churchman and civic leader; E. C. Bell, jr., his 22-year-old son, and W. A. Bell, his brother and bondsman, bade him good-by at the jail. He was accompanied on the 275-mile automobile trip only by J. Conway Chichester, city sergeant.

Neither defense attorneys nor Albert V. Bryan, acting Commonwealth's attorney, would comment on the case.

"There is nothing that I can say at this time," Bryan told newspapermen. "Any further action on my part must await the hospital report."

Bell will be examined at the institution by Dr. George A. Wright, superintendent, and reported as sane or insane after several weeks of observation. If the report, which will be delivered to Judge Coleman, shows Bell to be insane, he will be kept at the hospital. If he is proven sane, he will be returned here for a second trial.

Indictment Not Quashed.

Contrary to first reports, Judge Coleman's order does not quash the indictment, the judge said today. The indictment stands and the defendant, unless adjudged insane, must return for a retrial.

Mrs. Madge Bell, the invalid wife whom Bell is alleged to have poisoned, was reported suffering from the shock and nervous strain of the trial today, but her condition was not believed serious.

Frederick Rehabilitation Group to Meet Soon

Winchester, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—A meeting of the rural rehabilitation committee, recently appointed to study rural problems as they affect Frederick County, is expected to be called at an early date.

C. I. Brumback, chairman of the board of supervisors, is the chairman of the committee. Serving with him are R. A. Wall, agricultural instructor at Stephens City; W. R. Legge, agricultural instructor at Handley High School, this city; I. Fred Stine, county agent; Miss Elizabeth Farrar, county home demonstration agent; Lee Whitacre, Whitacre; Earl Edwards, of Frederick County, and Logan Fay, of Stephenson.

Memorial Is Proposed To Honor 5 Doctors

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 19 (Spl.). As a memorial to Dr. Edwin B. Claybrook, Dr. William L. Burns, Dr. Homer Berkley Walker, Dr. Grover C. Blake and Dr. A. Leo Franklin, who died in the last few years, friends have proposed that needed new operation room equipment at Allegany Hospital be furnished through public subscription, with a bronze table bearing the names of the five men.

All were connected with the hospital and Dr. Blake was president of the staff at the time of his death.

Rat Islands Proposed as Prison Site

Col. Seone Would Put U. S. and State Felons on Aleutians.

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP).—Col. Consuelo A. Seoane, of the Signal Corps of the Third Corps area, today suggested sending criminals to the Rat Islands, as an aid to the Government in its war on crime.

Criminals serving terms of five years or longer would be sent to the four uninhabitable islands of the Aleutian group, under the plan Col. Seoane outlined in a luncheon address to the Engineers Club.

The plan would apply to both Federal and State prisoners. Fear of indefinite isolation from the United States would work as a deterrent from crime, he said.

Col. Seoane would have the prisoners support and govern themselves on the isles and gain the right to return at the end of 16 years.

A Wealth of Entertainment Is Planned by the Theaters to Greet the New Year

New Plays and Fine Pictures To Be Offered

Belasco Reopens Dec. 31; Barron Is Luncheon Host; About the Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

There should be plenty of theatrical entertainment to satisfy the most extravagant demands of the celebrants of New Year's Eve, a week from Tuesday night.

Now that the gentlemen holding the managerial reins have pretty thoroughly elucidated the unprecedented plans they entertain to observe Christmas by opening four new bills on that day, they are beginning to turn their thoughts toward what is to be done to welcome 1935 in proper fashion. Already a majority of them have more or less made up their minds.

Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of the National Theater, for example, will relight his E street temple of the muses on New Year's Eve with the first presentation of "Laburnum Grove," the J. B. Priestley comedy that was one of the hits of the last London season. Edmund Gwenn will appear in the leading role he created on the other side.

That New Belasco Guild.

On the same night, one is given to believe, the Belasco Theater Guild will inaugurate a season of repertoire which it is hoped will develop into that real repertory theater for the National Capital, concerning the likelihood of which we have heard so much down through the ages. I am assured by those most vitally concerned in this venture that definite announcement is about to be made of the personnel of the company and the title of the opening play in which they will be seen.

Among the overlords of the local cinema diverse activities seem imminent. The Loew houses—Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia—will run extended schedules on Monday night, December 31, with a final "Happy New Year" performance getting under way on, or a few seconds after, the stroke of 12, midnight.

The prospective bills at these houses will be, in the order already named, "The President Vanishes," on the screen, with Arthur Byron and Janet Beecher in the leading roles, and Nick Lucas Jans, and Whalen and the Radio Rogues headlining the bill of living entertainment on the stage; "Forsaking All Others," the gay screen comedy based on the play of the same name in which Tallulah Bankhead starred, with Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery and Charles Butterworth in the principal roles, for the Palace, and Laurel and Hardy in "Babes in Toyland," at the Columbia.

Warners Weigh Plans.

The Warner interests, operating the Earle and Metropolitan theaters in the downtown, first-run sector, have elaborate New Year's Eve plans in the making, but are not as yet wholly decided as between extended schedules and definitely distinct midnight shows. Their decision in the matter will be made known before it is too late.

Up Fifteenth street way, Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, is prepared to shoot the works. That is to say, Master Meakin plans to run his regular bill as close to the birth of the New Year as it will reach, then snatch it away and, for one gala midnight performance, present a picture never before seen in Washington. This would be "Romance in Manhattan," an item in which Francis Lederer and Ginger Rogers cavort before the cameras and mikes for the glorification of dear, old RKO-Radio. After this one unspooling of "Romance in Manhattan," the cans will be put back on the shelf and New Year's offering again will be Katharine Hepburn in "The Little Minister," which is expected to run and run and run—and probably will, if advance reports of its worth are at all to be relied upon.

And there you have the New Year's Eve outlook as completely as it can be outlined from this distance.

Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's Inc., preliminary to leaving with Mrs. Barron for their home in Georgia for the holidays, today at 1 o'clock is playing host to a company of friends and business associates at luncheon in the Loew executive offices in the Fox Theater Building. Mr. and Mrs. Barron, Carter and "Chic" to those who will be today's guests, leave Washington tomorrow for the South, just one jump ahead of frigid temperatures and a healthy blizzard, if long-distance weather forecasts mean anything.

Miss Cornell on Broadway.

While it does not come as red-hot, spot news at this precise moment, nevertheless, as announced some six months ago, Katharine Cornell, generally recognized as America's first actress, will open her New York season in the Martin Beck Theater tonight with her first Shakespearean production, "Romeo and Juliet," staged by Guthrie McClintic, with costumes and settings by Jo Mielziner.

Basil Rathbone again acts Romeo to Miss Cornell's Juliet. Edith Evans will appear as the nurse, Brian Aherne as Mercutio and Charles Waldron as Friar Lawrence. The Shakespeare tragedy will be played for four and a half weeks only.

Rudolph Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will be presented on Monday, January 21, with Basil Rathbone as Robert Browning, Miss Cornell as Elizabeth Barrett, Charles Waldron as the elder Barrett and Brenda Forbes as Wilson.

Why Not Mr. Aherne?

Since Brian Aherne is a member of her company playing "Romeo and Juliet," it seems a bit odd to some of us this far away that he is not restored to his original role of Browning in "The Barretts," a part he played with distinction throughout the sensational original run of this play in this country.

Late in February or early in March the actress-manager, in association with Guthrie McClintic, will produce John Van Druten's new play, "Flowers of the Forest." During the New York engagement she also will be seen in George Bernard Shaw's "Candida." Henrik Ibsen's "Rosmersholm" has been put over until another year.

Mr. Van Druten is en route to New York from England to be on hand to supervise the staging of his latest opus.

Mr. Ray Henderson, as a footnote to his reminders of the important facts of Miss Cornell's season, calls attention to the fact that "B'Way, Inc.," by Morton Eustis, recently published by Dodd, Mead & Co., presents in clear and concise form the economic side of the American theater. Everyone interested in the stage, says Mr. Henderson, should read this book, more fully to understand the problems facing the theater in this country and the evils threatening its disintegration. Begging your pardon, Mr. Hall, but you can see for yourself there's no end of books!

Yuletide Drama.

For the tenth consecutive season, Dr. Henry Van Dyke's Yuletide festival drama, "The Other Wise Man," will be given in Luther Place Memorial Church, on Thomas circle, December 26, 27 and 28, by the Chapel Players, under the direction of Bess Davis Schreiner.

In 1925, Miss Schreiner made the dramatization of "The Other Wise Man" that both Harper Brothers, the publishers, and Dr. Van Dyke authorized for presentation by the Chapel Players. This acting version has attained such Nation-wide renown that each year many groups throughout the United States seek permission to produce the Washington version in their respective communities.

This year, for the first time, the leading role of Artaban, the Median of Ecbatana, will be played by John Sikken, who has rendered a fine account of himself in many recent productions by the Washington Community Players, the Roof Players, the Shakespeare Society and other drama groups, not forgetting his splendid performance in Eddie Melcher's "44 Below."

More than 75 additional players will be seen in the impressive ensemble scenes that occur frequently during the action of this drama of Bethlehem at the time of the birth of Christ and Jerusalem at the time of the Crucifixion.

Mrs. Adelaide Hibbard, beloved character woman of the National Theater Players this past decade, having taken up her permanent residence in the Capital as a member of the faculty of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts, yesterday was honor guest at the regular weekly luncheon of the Lions' Club, presided over by Arthur Clarendon Smith. Yesterday's was the latest of a succession of social events in Mrs. Hibbard's honor since her arrival in Washington last Saturday. The first was a dinner party tendered her and Manager Stephen E. Cochran of the National Theater, who also is founder and president of the Brooke Academy, by Mr. and Mrs. Abner Drury.

Dots and Dashes.

That innovation of the singing of Christmas carols by the public will be put in operation at Loew's Fox Theater tonight at 11:30 . . . No charge of admission . . . If you are already in the theater, stay in; if not, come in and sing your head off to Johnny Salb's pipe organ accompaniment and with the lyrics flashed on the screen . . . Made possible through the cooperation of Loew's Washington theaters, Arthur Godfrey and Station WJSV, through which the carols will be broadcast . . . Kathleen Howard, with W. C. Fields in "It's a Gift," opening at Loew's Palace tomorrow for four days, sang with the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York for 12 years . . . Before journeying to Hollywood, she was fashion editor for Harper's Bazaar . . . With a cast of 35 boys, girls and adults, directed by Dr. Louis W. Currier, under the auspices of the Mount Pleasant Players, Dickens' "Christmas Carol," in dramatic form, will be presented in Fishburn Hall of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church tonight at 8 . . . A great week, beginning Sunday, for the Seco Theater out in Silver Spring, Md. . . . Some of the best pictures of the year, with special holiday matinees Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and the regular 1 o'clock matinee on Saturday . . . When Cecil B. De Mille moved into his new office, formerly occupied by B. P. Schulberg on the Paramount lot—this will slay you—the first thing he did was order Ben's swell bathtub removed! . . . It probably wasn't solid gold with diamond and ruby fixtures . . . Or, maybe, like a Pullman washroom, it had only two kinds of cold water . . . Reports that Greta Garbo had slipped aboard a Sweden-bound boat to spend the holidays at home almost drove the M.-G.-M. executive nuts recently . . . Now don't pull the old one about that's not being a drive, but only a short putt! . . . Mervyn LeRoy, who will soon be acclaimed Hollywood's ace director by one of those national ballot businesses, has signed Marion Talley, the former Metropolitan Opera canary from Kansas City, to a screen contract, she having changed her mind about being a life-long farmerette—or something . . . W. C. Fields finally got the promotion he has been looking for when he went to work on "It's a Gift" . . . Moved out of his old dressing room between Charlie Ruggles and Jack Oakie into a new one between Marlene Dietrich and Mae West . . . Says the view is much better . . . Two swell Christmas shows for the youngsters opening next Tuesday, Christmas day . . . "Peck's Bad Boy," at the Metropolitan, and "Babes in Toyland," at the Columbia . . . Try to get in! . . . Too bad Victor Herbert couldn't have lived as long as his music.

Early Bird Note.

By the way, what shall I give you for Christmas?

That's fine. Thanks. Now all you have to do is try and get it!

Stars of the Yuletide Screen

Film Fare Will Prevail During Yuletide Week

With the National Dark, Burlesque Alone Vies With Pictures.

Gloria Swanson and John Boles, possessors of two of the finest singing voices the cinema, is able to present from among its regular stars not recruited from grand opera, are the costellar figures in "Music in the Air," the screen version of the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein operetta, opening for a week's holiday engagement at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow. Although this is a distinctly American work, it has been directed for the cameras by Erich Pommer, one of Europe's foremost megaphone wielders. The supporting cast includes Douglass Montgomery, June Lang, Al Shean, Sara Haden, Hobart Bosworth, "Fuzzy" Knight and numerous others of note.

"Songwriters on Parade," presented by a group of the foremost tunesters from "Tin Pan Alley," will headline the vaudeville bill, which also will include Lucille Page, Buster West, Bobby May, juggler, and the Jean Devereaux Co.

Fox Movietone News and orchestral music, under the direction of Prof. Phil Lampkin, will complete the Christmas entertainment.

Sylvia Sidney assumes the role of an Indian girl in "Behold My Wife," the Paramount picture which constitutes the major feature of the screen bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for Christmas week, beginning tomorrow. The story of "Behold My Wife" concerns a redskin girl who is just as proud of her heritage of race as Park avenue society is of wealth and breeding. Gene Raymond, who played opposite her in "Ladies of the Big House," again is her leading man. Others in the supporting cast include Laura Hope Crews, H. B. Warner, Juliette Compton, Monroe Owsley and Eric Blore.

The stage portion of the holiday bill will be headlined by Johnny Marvin, singer and instrumentalist well known to Washington audiences. Others who will contribute to the living entertainment include Nina Olivette, musical comedy star; Fred Reynolds and Alice White in "Music—and How!" and the Liazeed Demnati troupe of whirlwind performers.

Newsreel and orchestral contributions, conducted by C. Frederick Clark, with Bert Granoff providing the vocal interludes, will complete the program.

• • • •

Beginning tomorrow and continuing through Monday only, Loew's Palace Theater will present W. C. Fields in "It's a Gift" as its major screen attraction. In this subject, the star once again is supported by that precocious youngster, Master Baby LeRoy, the famous show-stealer. The week-end bill will be completed by abbreviated camera subjects and newsreel.

Beginning on Christmas Day, the chief feature at the Palace will be the M-G-M screen version of the stage play, "Forsaking All Others," costarring Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery and Charles Butterworth.

• • • •

Wheeler and Woolsey will be the pictured stars at the RKO-Keith Theater, beginning tomorrow and continuing through Monday, in "Kentucky Kernels," in which they are supported by Mary Carlisle. Others in the cast include Noah Beery and "Spanky" McFarland. The music was written by Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmer. The story has a background of spirited Kentucky feuding.

The eagerly awaited attraction at RKO-Keith's beginning on Christmas Day will be RKO-Radio's picturization of Sir James M. Barrie's "The Little Minister," starring Katharine Hepburn.

• • • •

In line with the practice that seems to be prevalent among the downtown, first-run picture houses this Yuletide season, Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow, will present "The Gay Bride," featuring Carole Lombard and Chester Morris, with Sam Hardy and Leo Carillo, but will continue that picture through Monday only. "The Gay Bride of the Rackets," as the film was known during its New York run, was adapted from Charles Francis Coe's story of "Repeal."

Beginning Tuesday, Christmas Day, the Columbia will have Hal Roach's film version of Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland" as its chief screen offering, with Laurel and Hardy the principals of a long and distinguished cast.

• • • •

Returning for another revival of its downtown popularity, "One Night of Love," starring Grace Moore, supported by Tullio Carminati and a splendid cast, will begin a four-day run at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater beginning tomorrow.

On Christmas Day, next Tuesday, the Metropolitan will present "Peck's Bad Boy," with Jackie Cooper and Thomas Meighan heading a cast that also includes Dorothy Peterson, Jackie Searle and O. P. Heggie.

• • • •

At the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee, Hinda Wausau, who holds the all-time attendance record for the Ninth street burlesque house, will be the Christmas guest star. This dynamic display artist, who has just completed a nine-month engagement as a featured specialist at Billy Rose's Casino de Paree in New York, will be surrounded by a clever company of comedians, singers and dancers, not heretofore seen in Washington this season.

A Shower of Gardenias Moves Carl Brisson to Song; Senor Osornio, Junk Dealer, Crashes Movies; Intimate Items of Hollywood Folk.

By Speed Kendall.

Hollywood, Dec. 19.—As a matinee idol in England, Carl Brisson, the Dane, had countless feminine admirers. Among them was a mystery woman who lavished gifts upon him.

KATHARINE HEPBURN.

Each package was accompanied by a gardenia pinned on the top. For each of his performances at the London Hippodrome she sent him a gardenia to wear in his boutonniere. This went on for almost a year.

Brisson went to great extremes and expense to learn her identity. She proved to be one of England's wealthiest and most prominent women. For this reason he withholds her name.

Then Brisson came to Hollywood. Gardenias trailed him all of the way. On the boat there was a fresh bloom at his table for every meal. When he landed in New York he was greeted with gardenias. When he stepped off the train in Los Angeles a box full awaited him. During his 12 months' stay here he has received a weekly letter from this devout fan, each containing a pressed gardenia.

And now, indirectly, this woman is to play a part in his new picture, "All the King's Horses," now in production.

From the circumstances, Brisson got an idea for a song, and rushed to Song Writer Sam Coslow. Together they turned out "I Bring a Little Gardenia," which will be used as the lead song of the picture.

Brisson will get screen credit as a song writer, too. We heard the number yesterday and it sounds as if it might prove one of the season's smashes.

Screen Gains New Thespian.

During the summer while Director Ned Griffith was browzing around Lagun Beach he happened upon an odd character, one Juan Ortega Osornio, the place's leading junk collector. In this man he saw a story the camera could tell and he photographed it. Griffith put the picture together and sold it as a short subject.

Yesterday a dilapidated and antique model of a car of well-known vintage stopped in front of the studio. Out stepped Juan Ortega Orsornio. After much entreaty, he got an audience with Griffith.

He informed the director that he had decided to give up his junk-collecting business and turn actor. Griffith, though amused, is going to try to see if he can't find a little part for him in "No More Ladies."

One Way To Find Out.

Down in the suburb of Venice lives Bobby Heagy, 11 years of age. He is a Joe E. Brown fan, and has always wondered what Brown's middle name might be.

Recently Bobby won a canary at one of the beach concessions. He named it after Joe. Yesterday he penned a letter to the pet's godfather, wanting to know what the "E" stood for.

Odd and Interesting People and Events.

At one and the same time yesterday Al Jolson was getting a shave and a manicure, listening to the stock quotations from his secretary, and rehearsing a song for his new picture, all in his dressing room at Warner Brothers . . . Margaret Lindsay gets back today from Palm Springs.

Madge Evans had her bags all packed and instructions prepared for the care of her pets awaiting permission from her studio to leave for New York, where she intended to make a four-week stay. Looks as though Tom Gallery will be a lonesome boy for a month, anyway . . . Since Director Mervyn Leroy announced the purchase of a race horse he has been flooded with applications from jockeys who are anxious to ride for him . . . For those who wondered at the identity of the pretty girl Bert Wheeler took to the Cafe Trocadero two nights in a row, she is Sally Haines.

John Beal received a Christmas package yesterday from Katharine Hepburn with orders not to open it until December 25, and he thinks it's ties or socks. Inside information is that the parcel contains a sketching set, Hepburn's way of thanking him for the sketches he made of her while they were filming "The Little Minister."

Victor Varconi brought to America one of the first news-reel shots of the assassination of King Alexander, which was entrusted to him by a Paramount official when Varconi sailed from England . . . On Lowell Sherman's orders they're serving tea every afternoon on the "Becky Sharp" set.

Insurance Stocks Average Lower

New York, Dec. 19.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market registered a further decline during the past week. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster, amounted to $479,974,000 on December 14 against $486,081,000 on December 7, a decrease for the week of $6,107,000, or 1.26 per cent.

The current average yield of the 20 issues of 3.91 per cent compares with a yield of 3.83 per cent a week ago. The current market value is equal to 1.18 times the current liquidating value, against 1.19 times on December 7. Combined operating earnings from underwriting and net investment income are now 9.58 per cent on market, as compared with 9.46 per cent at the close of the previous week, and based upon current figures the 20 issues are now quoted at an average of 10.4 times their combined operating earnings, against 10.6 times on December 7.

Cronin Deal Explained in Optimists' Club Luncheon Talk.

By Shirley L. Povich.

PRESIDENT CLARK C. GRIFFITH, of the Washington Base-ball Club, yesterday answered his critics by publicly absolving Manager Bucky Harris of all responsibility for whatever failures the Nats may encounter in 1935.

Speaking as a luncheon guest of the Optimist Club, Griffith cited his inability, thus far, to add strength to his seventh-place ball team despite the $250,000 received by the club in the Joe Cronin deal. He realized, he said, that the team he is presenting to Harris, is woefully weak in pitching and that his manager could not be held accountable for any lack of success next season.

"I'm not passing the buck to Bucky," declared Griffith. "I know what he is up against unless the winter brings some deals that will help out the pitching staff. The Washington team must be built up for Bucky, so I am 'taking the rap' for anything that might happen next year."

Hints Deal Brewing.

In expressing his disappointment that no trades for pitchers were forthcoming during the recent major league trading session, Griffith hinted that at least one deal is still brewing.

"The other clubs are aware of all that money the Washington Club received in the Cronin deal, and it makes trading exceedingly difficult for us," he said: "When the hysteria calms, I hope to add at least one good pitcher." It is believed that Griffith is alluding to the trade which would bring Irving Hadley to the Nats from St. Louis—a trade balked last week when the Browns held out for a better cash settlement.

Before more than 150 members and guests of the Optimist Club, Griffith paid glowing tribute to Harris, the original boy manager of the Nats, who returns to the Washington Club after six years abroad in the league.

Lands Bucky Harris.

"I believe I have made the wisest possible choice in a manager," declared Griffith. "I except no man in baseball when I call Bucky the greatest manager on the field. I mean by that, that once the game starts, Bucky Harris will produce more and better results than any man I know."

Griffith revealed that his earliest experiences with Harris were a series of trials and tribulations. That was in the spring of 1920, when Harris joined the Nats as a rookie infielder at Tampa. The youth who was destined to become manager of his team four years later, comported himself excellently in all details except catching pop flies.

"I stood out there for hours, batting pops to Harris until at the end of the day he could hardly drag himself to the shower. But he learned. I took the rap, though," said Griffith. "Harris finally 'got the hang' of catching pop flies, and I got lumbago."

Tells of Cronin Sale.

Griffith described as "momentous" his decision to part with Joe Cronin for the $250,000 offered by the Red Sox. For six weeks, he said, Owner Tom Yawkey, of the Boston Club, beseeched him to sell Cronin for baseball's record purchase price. His mind was made up, Griffith said, when Cronin took as his bride the adopted niece of the owner of the Washington Club.

"When Joe married into the faminly, that kind of scrambled the situation," said Griffith. "So I thought I'd unscramble it by taking Mr. Yawkey's $250,000. It would have been hard on Joe otherwise. It's no fun losing ball games, as it is, but nobody wants to be second-guessed at the dinner table."

Yankees Sell Byrd to Reds

Released on Waivers After Futile Trading Efforts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (AP).—Sam Byrd, generally rated the best golfer in baseball, passed from the New York Yankees to the Cincinnati Reds via the interleague waiver route today.

Joe McCarthy, Yankee manager, tried repeatedly to dispose of Byrd during the recent major league meetings, but there were no takers. He then obtained waivers on Byrd from the other seven American League clubs, and the Reds, cellar club of the National League this year, grabbed him.

Byrd was used chiefly as a relief man for Babe Ruth and Earle Combs. He is a good fielder, but his hitting never was up to the Yankee standard.

At golf he has few, if any, equals among the baseball fraternity.

75,000 Tickets Sold For Rose Bowl Battle

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—Tickets for the Tournament of Roses football game between Stanford and Alabama New Year's Day passed the 75,000 mark today. Capacity is slightly less than 85,000.

Customers kept long lines in front of the windows through the day, buying approximately 15,000.

Civic Group Greets Return of Bucky Harris

L. S. U. Looking Far Afield For Coach

Long Intent on Prominent Man; Shaughnessy's Name Tops List.

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 19 (AP). Huey Long looked in all directions today for someone to fill the shoes of Capt. Lawrence "Biff" Jones, who resigned last night as head football coach at Louisiana State University following a dispute with the Louisiana dictator.

Names of outstanding coaches in the East, North, South and Southwest purportedly were under consideration by university authorities, but none has yet been definitely approached.

That the "Kingfish" is going after a coach with a national reputation became apparent with reports that Clark Shaughnessy, who directs the football destinies at Chicago University, "Chick" Meehan, head coach at Manhattan College, N. Y.; Ray Morrison, of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., and Bernie Moore, Jones' assistant, were among a half dozen being considered for the post.

Praised by Long.

Some believed that Shaughnessy had the "inside track" if he desired to return to Louisiana, where he coached at Tulane and Loyola before succeeding Alonzo Stagg at Chicago. This belief was founded on a suggestion by Senator Long today that Shaughnessy "is a mighty fine man, he's nationally

Equipoise Works On Coast Track

Whitney Star Appears in Perfect Condition.

Los Angeles, Dec. 19 (AP).—Equipoise, champion thoroughbred here in quest of first place in the Santa Anita $100,000 Handicap February 23, was given his first gallop over the Los Angeles Turf Club track here today and appeared to be in perfect condition after his long train ride from Kentucky.

The big chestnut horse arrived last Monday. Ladysman and Head Play, two other outstanding nominees for the big race, worked this morning. Head Play was clocked in 40 seconds for 3 furlongs. He is expected to start in the Christmas Day Stakes of $5,000, feature of the opening day.

Warrenton Pin Team Lists Holiday Events

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—A picked team from the Fauquier Bowling Alleys, Warrenton, will meet teams from Luray, Fredericksburg, Front Royal and Leesburg during the holidays. The first match will be rolled with Front Royal tomorrow.

Among the high scorers on the local alleys are Robert Charland, L. L. Hutchinson, Austin Barnes, O. C. Davis, Delmar Fewell, John Carpener, Sam Fletcher, Iryin Garrett, W. G. Johnson, Joseph Whitmore and R. L. Pearson.

Strike-Out King.

Johnny Broaca, of the Yankees, was at bat 66 times in 1934 and struck out 33 times, making two hits.

La Rowe Raps State Control Of Bouts

UNIVERSITY, Va., Dec. 19 (AP). Johnny La Rowe, veteran coach of University of Virginia boxing teams and sometimes referred to as the father of collegiate boxing in the South, wants no State regulation of collegiate ring contests.

Assailing a proposal by the State boxing and wrestling commission to regulate intercollegiate boxing, Mr. La Rowe said "college boxing has been properly developed on a high plane for the best interests of the boy and the institution, and to associate it with the selfishly exploited professional sport is likely to result in harmful practices."

Replying to a suggestion of Ralph Daughton, of Norfolk, chairman of the boxing commission, that collegiate boxers are allowed to "take too much," the Virginia coach, whose teams have won four consecutive Southern Conference championships, pointed out that during his 13 years of coaching no member of his teams nor any opponent has been reported as suffering serious injury.

Cites Football Injuries.

If State officials want to assume control on account of the possibility of injuries, he added, they ought first to give attention to football, "which far eclipses boxing from the standpoint of injuries."

He asserted that intercollegiate fighting should continue to be supervised by college authorities and not "fall into the hands of a politically controlled commission," adding that "if and when boxing in State colleges and universities is in need of more rigid control, faculty groups will not hesitate to act."

American U. Host To Maryland State

Thrown for a loss in their opening game of the season against Hampden-Sidney last week, American University Eagles will make another attempt to break into the win column tonight against Maryland Statae Normal. They meet in the Eagles' gym at 8 o'clock.

The Eagles will be strengthened by the addition of Mel Wheatley, veteran forward, who returned to the squad this week and is expected to get a regular berth. He will be shifted to guard, however, with Cub Sixbey going from guard to center where he will replace Scott Crampton.

Skippy Edwards, Bob Taylor and Cassell complete the starting line-up. Maryland State Normal took a 53-10 drubbing from Catholic U. last week and is not expected to cause the Eagles serious trouble tonight.

Bob Novey, forward, is the visitors' most consistent point-getter. He probably will be pitted against Wheatley's defensive prowess.

15 at Friends School Awarded Grid Letters

James A. Smith, back-field veteran, will captain the team next year. The Friends eleven went through a seven-game schedule with three wins, one tie and three losses.

Charles Mackay, jr., has been elected captain of the basket ball team and Wilson M. Compton, manager. Charles Wann and William Alexander will act as captain and manager, respectively, of the lightweight team.

Tommy Dowler (right), named head football coach at William and Mary, after a season of coordinate coaching with John Kellison (left), who has been named assistant coach.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.).—William and Mary College authorities have abandoned their coordinate football coaching system and elevated Tommy Dowler to the post of head coach in a shift of the athletic staff.

Coincident with the announcement of Dowler's appointment was the designation of John Kellison, cocoach in 1934 and former head coach, as assistant coach, and the announcement that William (Billy) Gooch has signed a three-year contract as athletic director.

The Athletic Council at the same time announced that Melville (Stumpy) Bryant, of Newport News, whose clever punting was a feature of the 1934 season, has been elected captain of the 1935 team.

During the past season, Dowler and Kellison had coached the squad under a unique arrangement that dispensed with the title of head coach. As coordinate coaches, Dowler, a pupil of Coach Andy Kerr at Colgate, coached the back field with Kellison in charge of the line.

Recognized as outstanding among football scouts, Kellison betook himself to foreign fields on Saturday throughout the season to appraise future foes of the Indians, leaving

'Bama Bettors Giving 18 Points

Stanford Happy, Is Willing to Be Underdog.

Stanford University, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—Reports reached Coach C. E. Thornhill of Stanford today that University of Alabama followers were willing to wager even money their team would be 18 points better than the Indians in the Rose Bowl game New Year's Day.

"If true, it is the best news I've had in weeks," Thornhill said. "The boys should react nicely to such barbs. It has been a long time since Stanford was the underdog."

The information reached the Stanford mentor through a student who received a letter from a friend attending Alabama. It related the Southern boys were giving 18 points on their team.

Furr to Face MeCadon as Underdog

Jersey Welter Rules Choice Over District Champion Tonight.

CONFIDENT that he will continue his habit of upsetting Capital favorites when he faces Phil Furr at the Auditorium tonight, Jay MeCadon arrived in Washington last night cocked and primed to do the ten rounds of battle scheduled for the welterweight natural.

MeCadon was the first to snap the winning streak of Bob Wilson locally and in his two appearances here against Belting Bob he proved himself one of the most colorful ringmen yet imported to Washington.

The bout will be held in an improved setting, with bleachers installed behind the fifteenth row in the orchestra to insure the $1.10 customers a better view of the proceedings.

Because of this great showing against Wilson, who barely was shaded by Furr, MeCadon has been ruling an 8-to-5 favorite in the betting, but indications were that the odds would dwindle to 6-to-5 or even money by ring time.

MeCadon did not work out in Washington, but completed his training for the bout in New Jersey under the watchful supervision of Max Waxman, nationally known fight figure. Since his last appearance here, when he soundly trounced Wilson, the New Jersey welterweight has scored an easy victory over rugged Harry Gordon in a Chicago meeting.

Furr apparently has reached the peak of his fighting condition for the important contest against MeCadon. He has been promised a shot at some nationally recognized fighter in his division if he can dispose of MeCadon in impressive fashion—a chance for which he has been clamoring since first he burst into main events from the preliminary ranks.

Four six-rounders of unusual promise will support the main event. In a club fight semifinal, Bob Lowry will be paired off with Mike Scipio, of Baltimore. The local lad decisioned Scipio in a meeting at the Twin City Arena two years ago, but both have improved greatly since that time.

Roddy Davis will make his second start as a welterweight against one Frankie Litt, a stablemate of MeCadon's in another of the pre-

Surplus Weight Terry's Problem

Eager to Shed Poundage; Praises His Team.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 19 (AP).—Bill Terry, back from his peace meeting with New York newspapermen, said today that one of his pressing problems now is to take off a few pounds of weight.

"I've got to get busy and take some of the fat off," the New York Giant manager said.

Terry plans to return to New York, February 1 to attend a dinner for baseball writers.

"I've the best ball club I've had since I became manager of the Giants," he said. "I plan no more changes unless I see where I can help matters. The whole team looks like it will have the stuff needed to go places."

New Terrapin Five Meets Indiana

Maryland Opens Season Tonight With Clever Hoosier Quintet.

Indiana, Boasting 6-Foot 7-Inch Center, Rules Heavy Favorit.e

By Lewis F. Atchison.

AN inexperienced Maryland quintet, the greenest bucket brigade to represent the Old Line school in basket ball in a decade, faces Indiana's flashy courtmen tonight at College Park in its opening skirmish of the new season. The tap-off will be at 8 o'clock in Ritchie Coliseum.

Bernie Buscher, shifted from guard to forward, and Vic Willis, the young mountain at center, are the only members of the starting line-up boasting varsity experience. Buscher was a regular last year and Willis played in a majority of games after becoming eligible in February.

Lost by graduation were Vincent, Bucky Buscher, Chase and Snyder, a quartet of speedy sharpshooters who helped forge a successful record for the team. In their stead will be a group of ambitious youngsters who are willing but short on experience.

Andorka Makes Debut.

Al Waters, sophomore and an all-high selection at Eastern two years ago, will pair with Buscher at forward, while Bill Andorka and either Charley Keller or Coleman Headley will start at guards. The game will be Andorka's first in varsity competition.

Coach Burt Shipley has been dogged by misfortune in assembling his court machine. Roy Yowell, a reserve last winter and promising timber, abandoned the sport in deference to classroom work, and Fred Scheele, a clever forward and one of the smoothest players ever developed at St. John's Prep, sprained an ankle badly enough to be retired for three weeks.

But, despite all of these obstacles, Shipley optimistically hopes to pull the team through with a fairly decent record at the end of the grind.

Hoosier Won Last Year.

Indiana, coached by Ev Dean, always puts a strong combination on the floor. The Hoosiers humbled Maryland last season and are prohibitive favorites to repeat tonight. Tomorrow they play George Washington at Roosevelt High School, and with three straight wins already on the ledger, Dean hopes to take the team home with a record of five in a row.

Sout and Kehrt probably will start at the forwards for Indiana, with Scott and Porter, guards, and Fred Frechnet, 6-foot 9-inch center.

Links Aces Play Today on Coast

California Season to Open With $4,000 Event.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—Three hundred golfers will begin qualifying play tomorrow in Pasadena's seventh annual $4,000 open golf tournament, starting the winter season in California.

Included in the large field, half of which will tee off tomorrow, were expected to be Walter Hagen, Horton Smith, Willard Hutchinson, Dick Metz, Ralph Guldahl, Wiffy Cox, Jimmy Hines, Harold McSpaden, and a host of other top performers.

Two pro tennis players also will try their hand at the game. They are Ellsworth Vines, jr., and Lester Stoefen.

The low 60 will qualify tomorrow and Friday for the second round of play Saturday.

V. P. I. and Wake Forest On Clemson's Schedule

Clemson College, S. C., Dec. 19 (AP).—V. P. I. and Wake Forest replace Georgia Tech and Kentucky as foes for Clemson College's 1935 football team on the schedule announced by Coach Jess Neely.

The schedule:

September 21, Presbyterian, at Clemson; 28, V. P. I., site undecided.

October 5, Wake Forest, site undecided; 12, Duke, at Durham; 24, South Carolina, at Columbia.

November 2, Mercer, at Augusta, Ga.; 9, Alabama, at Tuscaloosa; 16, open; 28, Furman, at Greenville.

Worthington Wins Fourth Straight Race, Taking Feature in Mud at Charles Town

1-2 Favorite Is Ridden by Fritz Weir

Donna Dulcin, Beaten by Length, Makes a Game Effort.

By Walter Haight

(Post Staff Writer).

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, Dec. 19.—With his favorite brand of mud under him, Worthington, one of the most consistent platers in training, scored his fourth straight victory here in the mountains today. After a rousing win over at Bowie, Worthington was shipped here and has showed his heels to the best distance horses on the grounds in each succeeding start.

Worthington's smashing triumph came in the day's feature race and added another purse to the collection of Miss Rhoda Christmas, one of the Marlboro Christmases who have been dominating the meeting of the Charles Town Jockey Club.

Jockey Fritz Weir brought Worthington to the wire a length in advance of Donna Dulcin. Six lengths away came the tiring Postponement to take the third money. Three others—Morocen, Voco and Broadway Lights—accepted the issue over the mile and a sixteenth course.

Conditions at Worst.

Racing conditions were at their worst. It was, indeed, a fine day for the improvement of the breed of horses and the destruction of bank rolls, as Chuck Conner, turf authority, said when he climbed the stairs to the press box. The crowd was the smallest of the meeting, but the betting held up well, proving that the regulars were present with their rolls and had high hopes of getting out of the "red."

The track looked like a chocolate cake sprinkled with white icing. Both snow and rain fell this morning and the course was a mixture of mud and ice as the field went to the post for the first race. The customers dug deep in the past performances to get a line on the "mudders." However, they were unable to find any ice form on the horses.

For the more important pay-off purposes, the contest was a two-horse race between Worthington and Donna Dulcin, and they ran as if they were drawing a team for virtually the entire route. Both Weir and Quattlebaum gave everything they possessed in a riding way, and the best horse at the weights won.

Hook Up at Start.

Worthington and Donna Dulcin bounded out of the gate together and the latter drew out to a length lead going to the first turn. Along the back stretch, Worthington moved up and the pair battled head and head from that point until midway of the stretch where Worthington began to slide away from his filly rival. Postponement made a bid to get into the chief contention at the far turn, but faded out of the picture thereafter.

As a betting proposition, Worthington was little more than interest on betting money. He paid $3 to win and $3.40 to place. Just another little peculiarity of mountain racing.

Worthington proved the only odds-on winner of the afternoon, but well-played horses won most of the races. Perhaps the day's chief "wakeup" was that of Scotty Don, which found the soft going to his liking and bounced to the finish line to pay a $23.40 mutuel.

Dear Al: Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 19.

It was indeed a bad day for the Benningites. The once proud firm of mutuel wreckers was held to a single winner—Worthington, which paid off in cigarette coupons. I didn't need the assistance of any hokus-pokus from Clocker Mike to pick Worthington, either. This horse is the class of the race track and his owner, Rhoda Christmas, wouldn't care if the meeting lasted until next Fourth of July. Of course, I have a fair alibi, which is better than no alibi. When we went over the speed books last night the moon was giving us the big eye and the stars were doing their best to outshine each other. This morning old man bad weather moved in over the mountains and he tried to see how much damage he could do. It rained, it snowed, it blew and then it fogged. True, the weather moderated in the afternoon, but the track remained a boggy mess throughout the program. I'm beginning to believe Clocker Mike is in love—I mean again. I shall keep you posted. BILL.

First race—Whirry is bred for the mud and will find a track that suits him tomorrow. Recent record is not impressive, but this one won here during the last meeting. We might start the day off right with a small wager. Simple Singer would have to be respected if moved out of the "also eligible" group. Technocrat is better than generally rated.

Second race—Clear Knight demonstrated speed here in his first outing and is bound to improve off that effort. This one is also down the list and must have two scratches before getting in action. Soupcon and Black Dreams will be at home in the going and are dangerous.

Third race—Bright Girl is a speedy filly and has both races and trials to recommend here as a possible winner in this field. Tiny Miss has raced consistently and figures to lead Stellar to the wire. The last named has disappointed often.

Fourth race—Sambo G. has been awaiting a crack at this sort of company in the mud and it looks as if he will find conditions suitable tomorrow. Star Queen, Jilted and Flower Time are a close fit for the remainder of the money positions.

Fifth race—A field of seven, which includes six previous winners, will clash here. The off track will make a difference and I'm stringing along with Don Tasker. There is a lot of early speed here and if the pace is fast I look for some tired horses in the stretch run. Miss Catalan and Royal Lassie to take care of the place and show.

Sixth race—Lanadler made a nice move in a recent effort and that perhaps was the tightener for tomorrow's race. Gets in light and may be the big shock of the afternoon. Jane Porter will appreciate the slow going as will Bright Pattern.

Seventh race—Hot Cake came out for the first time here and gave the crowd a thrill before tossing off the race in the closing strides. That conditioner makes me believe this one will be hard to catch, if away in the first flight. Bay Wrack defeated cheap ones but the off track adds to his chances tomorrow. George DeMar and Fife will like the mud.

Chart of Charles Town Races

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOB UP, $12.40, $4.00, $3.00; RADIAL, $11.40, $4.20; SCHLEY B., $3.40.

BOB UP, away well and, close up throughout, responded to pressure in the stretch run and wore down RADIAL in the final drive. The latter forced the pace from the start, disposed of NOAJOYCE, and held on well. SCHLEY B. was bumped after the break, worked his way up on the inside, and finished well. WISE COUNT was rated along steadily, came to outside in the stretch, and then faltered. GOLD PRIZE was outrun in the early stages.

SECOND RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:12. Off at 2:15. Winner, A. Getz's ch. c. (3), by Sotch Broom—Dunworkin. Trained by C. Beal. Value to winner, $225; second, $50; third, $25. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:50 3-5, 1:17, 1:32 3-5

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCOTTY DON, $23.40, $11.00, $5.60; MISS PATCHES, $28.30, $21.40; MR BOSS, $3 20.

SCOTTY DON moved into command rounding the first turn, was rated along, shook off WHITE CLOUD when ready, and had speed in reserve. MISS PATCHES improved her position steadily and finished with good courage. MR. BOSS made a determined bid rounding the far turn, but faltered badly at the end.

THIRD RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:41½. Winner, Miss M. E. Mitchell's b. c (4), by Broomstick—Priggish. Trained by L. C. Sauer. Value to winer, $225; second, $50; third, $25. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:18 1-5, 1:31 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONVENTIONAL, $17.40, $6.00, $4.00; CATZERER, $5.00, $4.20; JUNE BOURBON, $12.80.

CONVENTIONAL showed speed from the start, raced AMASIN into defeat, and then outlasted CATERER in final drive. The latter slipped through on the inside rounding the first turn, was rated along steadily, came to outside in the stretch and finished fast. JUNE BOURBON was placed under pressure in the stretch and finished well. AMASIN faltered badly in the stretch. WESTACTON had no mishaps. LINE OF FIRE was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:05. Winner, Mrs. D J. Murphy's b. f. (2), by Mars—Good as Gold. Trained by H. E. Yorke. Value to winner $225; second, $50; third, $25. Time, 0:26 3-5, 0:52 3-5, 1:19 4-5, 1:46, 1:56.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOODY GOODY, $5.20, $3.40, $3.00; PEGGY CAN, $10.00, $7.40; GOOSE CREEK, $5.20.

GOODY GOODY followed the pace under steady restraint, moved up fast when called upon, and wore down PEGGY CAN in the final drive. The latter was rated along steadily, raced APATHY into defeat, and held on well to the end. GOOSE CREEK improved his position steadily and finished well at the end. APATHY had no mishaps. FAIR VERBENA, on the outside, could not improve her position. OMAR JONES showed a dull effort and was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:32. Winner, R. Christmas' br. g. (5), by Wrack—Fiducia. Trained by R. A. Johnson. Value to winner, $225; second, $50; third, $25. Time, 0:26, 0:51 1-5, 1:18 2-5, 1:46, 1:54 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WORTHINGTON, $3.00, $3.40, $3.00; DONA DULCIN, $4.80, $3.40; POSTPONEMENT, $2.80.

WORTHINGTON forced the pace from the start under steady restraint, saved ground all the way, shook off DONA DULCIN in the stretch, and was in hand in final sixteenth. DONA DULCIN, suited in the going, showed speed throughout, and was best of the others. POSTPONEMENT moved up with a rush on the back stretch, but hung in final furlong. MOROCEN had no mishaps.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:00. Winner, L. G. Blume's b. g. Tropical Park Feature to Enthusiasm

Colt Takes Palm Purse to Become First "Repeater."

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Dec. 19 (AP).—Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Enthusiasm, an easy winner here opening day, came right back today to become the first "repeater" of the meeting in the featured Palm Purse, a dash of 5½ furlongs, that drew seven sprightly juveniles to the post. Race goers had more than their share of thrills, for Enthusiasm's hard-earned victory marked the fourth straight race to be won by a tight margin. The son of Bubbling Over had only a half length to spare over W. F. Axton's long shot, Paradisical. The latter headed H. Dongan's Canterboy for the place.

Cheka and Paradisical were the only starters in the race not as yet named for the Florida Derby. Enthusiasm was a 2-to-1 favorite and ran the distance in 1:06 2-5.

Bobby Jones in Saddle.

Bobby Jones made good use of Enthusiasm's high early speed. The dark skinned Californian lad hustled the bearer of the fuchsia and purple silks into a long advantage in the first three furlongs, with Paradisical closest in attendance and Cheka next in line. The latter folded up at the head of the short stretch, but Paradisical pulled the unexpected and might have passed the winner with a bit farther to go. He was a 64 to 1 hazard. Canterboy spurted around the bend and was an easy third.

Doubleton, a field horse, set the favorite players back on their toes, when he lasted to record a head victory at odds of $44.50 for two in the opening dash.

Favorite Is Fourth.

To add to the woes of the talent, Befitting, the choice, broke last in the field of 12 maiden juveniles and after appearing to finish no worse than third, she was officially placed fourth. Second money went to Royal Duchess, which nosed out Broken Up in the blanket finish.

Doubleton stole a wide early lead and barely lasted when the field closed in on him in the final furlong. The well played Great Master broke on top, but broke down during the running.

John Adams and John Quincy Adams, father and son, who both became Presidents of the United States, had careers throughout their lives that were marked by many parallels. The son, John Quincy Adams, followed his father's steps time after time in his legal, diplomatic, legislative and executive career.

The elder Adams was born in Quincy, Mass., in 1735, was educated at Harvard, took up law, began his legal practice and later moved to Boston. The younger Adams was born in 1767, also in Quincy, Mass. He studied law at Harvard, as had his father, and was admitted to the bar. The early careers of both men included important diplomatic posts. The elder served in France, Holland and England; the younger in Holland, Portugal, Berlin, Russia and England.

Strangely enough the father was Minister to England just following the Revolutionary War, and the son was Minister to England just following the War of 1812.

Both the father and son served in Congress—the elder in the old Continental Congress, and the younger in the Senate of the new United States. John Adams' first high executive post was Vice President of the Nation; his son's came when he was appointed to President Monroe's Cabinet. Both, though by different means later became Presidents.

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (Spl.).—Huey Long is a windbag, but, despite this, we think he is justified in his attempt to run the football team of his State university. Huey procured the coach and the squad. He bought fuzzy new shakos for the band leader, he chartered special trains to transport the student cheering sections along the Southern trails, he diverted a fat sum of money to high powered publicity agents, and he furnished employment to numberless carpenters, trainers, rubbers, sporting goods salesmen, ticket choppers and sound truck chauffeurs.

Huey, in his brazen way, did exactly what smoother tongued alumni of rival universities did—and are doing. Huey erred only in his zest.

Do you know what Louisiana State was before Huey picked it up out of the malarial marshes, dried the gumbo off its collegiate heels and jammed it into the Nation's sports headlines? It was a slumberous place, dawdling in the sun on the steamy banks of the Mississippi. It was a typical jerk-water college with its musty halls, its backwoods scholars and its slothful professors all giving off a faint suspicion of hook worm and stale eating tobacco. Even as recently as ten years ago there was a distinct faculty and community shudder at the mere mention of Charles Darwin.

Huey changed all that. When we came through Baton Rouge this spring with the Giants, the campus—and the town, too—had improved incredibly. Finicky young gentlemen and ladies from New Orleans who had been forced to attend classes out of the State were now enrolled and walking proudly arm-in-arm with clear-eyed, barrel-chested athletes who wore sweaters bearing the eye-arresting felt insignia of the Olympics. Huey, you see, got himself a good track team while he was collecting All-Americans.

Biff Jones is an elegant fellow, and a fine coach. That is not the issue. Biff's latest objection was to the Senator's delivery of a pep talk between halves of the Oregon game. Maybe Biff erred. Despite the technical hocus pocus of ROTC assignments Biff was merely an employe. We admit Huey has stepped out of bounds in adopting a State university, but the university joyously accepted his bounties.

After all, a man who can thump tubs in the bayous and bring out all those votes; who can canvass the strange Ozark trails of a neighboring State and overnight elect a lady—a 10 to 1 shot—to the United States Senate; who can weld the polyglot city of New Orleans and place it in the chubby palm of his gesticulating right hand—such a man, it seems to us, can deliver a pretty fair pep talk if he wants to bear down on it.

Bahamas Golf Is Paced by Thompson

Cruickshank Tied for 2d Place as Joe Turnesa Falters With 82.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 19 (AP).—Forging to the front as the wave of subpar golf subsided, Jack Thompson, of Youngstown, Ohio, today took a two-stroke lead over the field at the half-way mark of the $5,000 British Colonial Open tournament with a 36-hole score of 132.

Joe Turnesa, the Hartford, Conn., professional who broke the course record yesterday and held an edge at the first 18 holes, slipped back ten strokes today to a 72 and went into a tie with Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., for second place at 134.

Cards generally jumped upward, and only six players were able to beat par 68 today, as compared to ten in the first round.

Thompson Starts Well.

Thompson was off to a great start as he trimmed three strokes from perfect figures on the first nine, but ran into difficulties coming in and finished with a par card. He equaled the old course record yesterday with a 64 and was in a tie with Ralph Stonehouse, of Indianapolis, for second place as play began today.

Shooting a 36-33—69, Al Watrous, of Birmingham, Mich., was next with 135.

A stroke behind in a draw for fourth bracketing were six players, including Leo Mallory, of Noroton, Conn., whose 33-32—65 was the best score of the day and brought him from far behind into a threatening position.

Others in the 136 group were Leo Fraser, of Saginaw, Mich., with a 69 today; Tony Buller, of Harlingen, Tex., with a 66; Archie Hambrick, of French Lick, Ind., with a 70; Stonehouse, with a 72, and L. O. Schalk, of Hamilton, Ohio, with a 69.

Minkley Leads Amateurs.

A poor 95 virtually put Gov. Bede Clifford out of the running with a 183.

The final 36 holes are to be played tomorrow. Top award of $500 awaits the winner and $4,000 will be divided among the next 40 finishers.

Former High Stars Face Tech and Eastern Fives on Alumni Programs Tonight

Werber, Ace Of Red Sox, To Play

School Games Today.

Eastern Alumni vs. Tech Alumni, at Eastern gym, 7:30 p. m.

Eastern vs. Gonzaga, at Eastern gym, 9:00 p. m. (practice game).

Western vs. Washington-Lee, at Western, 3:30 p. m.

Friends vs. Rockville High, at Friends, 3:30 p. m.

Tech vs. McDonough Prep, at Baltimore.

Herndon High vs. Falls Church, at Falls Church, 3:30 p. m.

Takoma-Silver Spring vs. Alumni, at Silver Spring, 8 p. m.

ONE of the big features of the local basket ball season is slated for tonight when alumni teams of Tech and Eastern High Schools clash in their annual tussle at the Eastern gymnasium. The game will be the main attraction of the annual Eastern Alumni Night program with the starting time listed for 7:30 o'clock. It will be followed by a practice game between Eastern and Gonzaga.

Both Tech and Eastern are to be represented by graduate teams composed of past and present college stars. Tech has already secured the services of Bill Werber, ace base stealer of the Boston Red Sox and former Tech and Duke University athlete, who held down one of the guard positions. Coach Artie Boyd, of Tech, former Maryland cager, will also lend his appearance to the setting in the cause of the Tech grads.

Coach Charlie Guyon, of Eastern, intends to use the following starting line-up: Tommy Noland and Harry Bassin (Georgetown freshmen), forwards; Bernie Lieb (Catholic University), center; Zola (Georgetown) and Bruce Kessler (American and Maryland), guards. Held in reserve will be Dallas Shirley and Bill Noonan, of the George Washington varsity.

The Tech grads will take their strength from the following list: Harry (Talky) Councilor (Duke), Everett Russell (G. W. freshmen), Waverly Wheeler (Maryland freshmen), Artie Boyd (Maryland), forwards; Joe Crosan (Duke), center; Bill Werber (Duke), Bozie Berger (Maryland), Knocky Thomas (Maryland freshmen), guards.

Tonight's game will be the third renewal of the rivalry. Eastern won last year by 1 or 2 points and also in 1932.

Counselor, Werber and Crosan were members of the Duke team which won the Southern Conference championship, three or four years ago.

Third Triumph Is Scored by Irene's Bob

5-Year-Old Is Easy Victor in Mandeville at Fair Grounds.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 19 (AP).—Irene's Bob, 5-year-old gelded son of The Turk-Bob's Mary, running in the silks of Mrs. E. B. Shipp, chalked up his third straight victory today when he scored easily in the Mandeville Handicap for all ages at the Fair Grounds. J. A. Blackwell's Getalong was second, two lengths behind, and M. Goldblatt's Brown Witch, third, another length back. The time for the six-furlong dash was 1:14 flat over a track sea deep in mud.

Irene's Bob was first to leave the barrier in the field of seven and promptly opened up a wide lead which he maintained throughout. Getalong ran a good race, but the muddy condition of the track was not to his liking. Brown Witch came from far back to take the show spoils.

The winner was the choice, paying $4.40 straight for a $2 ticket.

Miss H. Brown's Raffles Problem, paying $24.00 for $2, accounted for the secondary feature, an allowance affair for 2-year-olds, when he won by a length over the Berman Stable's Rickey Roo. E. K. Bryson's Gunwale was third. The winner's time for the six furlongs was 1:15 3-5.

Dowler New Pilot At William-Mary

Dowler in charge of the team. Kellison was Coach Greasy Neale's aid at Washington and Jefferson in 1921, when the Presidents bid for fame by holding California's Golden Bears to a scoreless tie in the Rose Bowl after a cross-country trip.

The shift in the coaching system will not affect the contracts of either Dowler or Kellison, both of whom are working under two-year agreements inaugurated last season. Gooch, however, had served on a year-to-year basis.

William and Mary's 1934 season was a disappointment in point of victories, although the Indians were no set-ups for opponents. The highlight of the season was the one-touchdown defeat by the powerful Washington and Lee Generals, who scored late in the game on an intercepted pass. The Richmond game, played on a boggy field, was also lost by a touchdown, the treacherous footing depriving William and Mary of its deceptive attack that placed a high premium on speed and intricate maneuvers.

Harpers Ferry's Eastern Panhandle Champions Repeat

By defeating Charles Town High, Harpers Ferry High School gridmen won the Eastern Panhandle championship for the second consecutive year. The team, unbeaten and untied during the 1934 season, has won 14 straight games. Harpers Ferry this year scored 186 points against their opponents' 19 in seven games. Front row (left to right)—Sperry, Eackles, Dudrow, Jones, Fritts, Stallings, Morgan. Second row—Green, O. Merchant, Clevenger, McDonald, Jackson, Staubs, Hill, J. Merchant. Back row—E. E. Ross, coach; Murphy, Hino, Glover, Graves, Jones, Galli, Hoffmaster, Rockenbaugh.

V. M. I. Boxers Prepare for Maryland

Four Letter Men Available for Jan. 12 Match; 5 Meets Listed.

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Virginia Military Institute boxers, who have been taking light workouts under Coach Al Martin during the fall have started more intensive practice for the season that will open with the University of Maryland on January 12. Including the Terrapin meet the Cadets will engage in five dual meets and the Southern Conference tournament.

Four letter men will form the nucleus of this year's ring team, with two sophomores and two of last year's reserves tentatively slated to fill the other four berths. Custis Burton, of Hopewell, captain and sturdy welterweight is getting competition from Drake Pritchett, of Danville, who captained last year's Freshman team.

Cavedo Seen as Ace.

Willis Cavedo, Southern Conference runner-up in the 115-pound class, is another letter man on hand, and the Richmond boy is expected to be one of V. M. I.'s aces this season. Joe Oatley, New York heavyweight, and Saint Arnold, 175-pounder from Waverly, Va., are the other monogram wearers.

Coach Martin has been training a comparatively small squad, but new candidates have been encouraged to try for the team. Two or three prospects for each weight division will probably be in training after the Christmas holidays.

Among the newcomers who look most promising is Rosser Eastham, of Charlottesville, undefeated freshman 125-pounder last season. Illness caused Eastham to hang up his gloves before the season closed last year, but Martin counts on him as a consistent winner this year. Sonny Lee, 135, of Lynchburg, and Randolph Whittle, 165, of Norfolk, are also good sophomore prospects.

Among the group of boxers who have had freshman experience or training on last year's squad are two upper class men, Frank Trant, 135, a senior from Virginia Beach, and Bob Boyd, 155, a junior from Covington.

The schedule—January 12, Maryland, at College Park; January 19, Virginia, at Lexington; January 26, Virginia Tech, at Lexington; February 9, Catholic University, at Lexington; February 16, Richmond, at Richmond; February 23, S. C. Tournament, at University.

County's Quintet To Face Alumni

Silver Spring, Bethesda Have Programs Tonight.

Two annual features of the Montgomery County court season are scheduled tonight and tomorrow when Silver Spring and Bethesda entertain their alumni quintets, both high schools seeking to avenge last year's defeats.

Tonight at Silver Spring the strongest alumni quintet to represent the school will meet the 1934 edition. Eddie Fitzgerald, Johnny Mygatt, and Ralph Harries, of Washington College fame; Randy Clark, all county last year; Teeny Leizear, all prep in 1932; Bill Leasure, Paul Kreh, George Bozievich, county high point man in 1931, and Johnny Bassett will take the floor.

Boxing between pugilistic hopefuls at the school and a girls' game with the alumni will precede the contests. Activities get under way at 8 p. m.

Bethesda also has an all-star line-up for tomorrow night, including such former stars as Bill Guckeyson, Maryland U. star; Bob Althause, varsity man at Columbus (Ohio) U.; Cross, of G. W.; Fuller, Ferguson, Lanton Brown, Nichols and Jobes, all members of county title winning clubs. Dancing will follow the game slated at 8 p. m.

1935 Football Schedule Is Listed by W. and J.

Washington, Pa., Dec. 19 (AP).—The Washington and Jefferson football schedule for 1935 was announced today as follows:

October 5, Pitt, at Washington; 12, Grove City, at Washington; 18, Marietta, at Marietta, Ohio (night game); 26, Bucknell, at Lewisburg.

November 2—Geneva, at Washington; 9, Case, at Washington; 16, Wooster, at Washington; 23 or 28, West Virginia, at Morgantown.

Among the Hunters . . .

By M. W. Meier.

DOFF those shooting caps, gentlemen, to Joe Turner, who thrives on the fistic battles of others. 'N keep 'em off for a moment while we "in-trrro-duce" three of his friends—J. E. Murdock, John Cooley and Ralph Murdock.

To the best of our knowledge this quartet is the only foursome in the District this season to report a bag limit on duck in a day's shooting. Not only that, but they keep enjoying satisfactory bags whenever business and regulations permit.

Exactly where they go is beyond us, but we know it is on the Maryland side of the Potomac and requires an arduous trip across a marsh. With so few other hunters finding wildfowl this season, some of Joe's friends are wondering if he hasn't started a private duck farm which he is now "drawing" upon.

One Sportsman's Views.

George W. Hutchison, National Geographic Society official, who likes duck-shooting about as well as anybody, and whose own gunning trips this winter have been about on an average with the rank and file of us, isn't at all pessimistic about the situation, as are many.

"Wild fowl undoubtedly suffered like everything else on the continent this past summer during the drought. But I do not believe the breeding flocks suffered as much as some people say. A duck is a wise, canny bird and his inherent instincts would send him winging for water, whether that was East or West or to the Poles. He didn't have to stay where water was not. I believe there are a lot of them left in the far north or else that they changed their flightway this winter. I don't know how the Mississippi Valley flight was this year but I do know personally, that the West Coast one was better than normal.

"If the powers that be feel sure that a closed shooting season for a year or two is the only solution, then I shall accept their decision because they should know what they are talking about. On the other hand, we shouldn't go off on a tangent. Too many of our game regulations are really prohibitions."

Lucky Boy Nimrod.

Robert McKeever, jr., and his hunting exploits this season make us think of the old joke about the urchin and his pinhook showing the dude angler how to catch trout.

Although but 13, young Bob's accomplishments in the field have been on a par with adult shooters with years of experience behind them. Last Saturday, for example, he knocked over three quail, then tied the bird dog up and bagged himself three fat rabbits.

With Bob went Edward Roach, who accounted for ten quail and three rabbits himself. They reported knocking over one bunny whose actions made them instantly remember what we had to say in this column recently about tularaemia. So, they played safe and forked it up into a tree, out of harm's way. The rabbit was reported as being "very" sick and covered with sores, possible result of a hawk or shotgun wound.

Women Shooters.

Mention of juvenile shooters makes us think of the fact that so far we haven't encountered a woman shooter in the fields this season. And there must be some and they must be getting their share of sport.

Several have written us, however, that they have made a few successful trips afield. One was Louise Welch, the A. K. C. judge of field dogs, who lives in Baltimore. Miss Welch owns a gorgeous Irish female setter, Cloud of Lastery, who is an impressive spectacle in the field because of her size and lordly dignity. The Cloud only lacks a couple of points to her championship now.

Another Diana of the fields is Amelia Farmer, of Potomac, Md., whose father, Watt Farmer, judged the Potomac trials this past fall. Miss Farmer reports excellent quail shooting in Virginia.

Hunters' Moon Waning.

With the Maryland quail season all too rapidly approaching its close, District shooters are turning their attention to Virginia, which offers until January 31 on upland game.

Wild fowl shooting will legally last until January 15 in both States, however.

Oakton Opposes Lee-Jackson Five

Alexandria Scene Tonight; Celtics on Edge.

Alexandria, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Lee-Jackson Hight School will meet Oakton High in the Duke street gym here, tomorrow night in its second attempt to break in to the win column.

The sextet of the two schools are to meet in graceful combat at 8 o'clock in the curtain raiser.

Theodore Beach, manager of the St. Mary Celtics, completed arrangements this afternoon to bring the Olmstead Gdill team here Saturday night for the Celtics' inaugural. The Grillmen are undefeated. in three games this season.

The Celtics, will play each Wednesday night during the month of January.

Waugh Named Captain Of Shepherd's Eleven

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.)—Yancey Waugh was elected to captain the Shepherd State Teachers College football team for next year at the annual football banquet and dance in the college gymnasium here last night. Waugh, one of this year's outstanding athletes, is a junior.

Speeches were made by the retiring captain, Roscoe ("Toad") Warner, and each member of the squad graduating this year. Seven members of this year's squad will graduate, but Coach John Newcome expects his freshman material to furnish the nucleus for next year's team.

Alexandria High Five Routs Trainers, 51-16

Alexandria High's powerful basket-ball team defeated National Training School yesterday, 51 to 16, on the Training School Court.

Burrell, Twins' center, and Nappy Nugent, fast guard, took the scoring honors with 15 and 14 points apiece, respectively. Wallace, Trainer forward, tallied 7 points for his team's high individual honor. The Trainers were never in striking distance of the Virginians after the first few minutes of play.

G. W. to Tackle Wittenberg Tonight

Team That Upset Major Fives Last Year Led by Pitzer, Guard.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S high-geared courtmen step out in fast company tonight in the H street gym where they will meet Wittenberg College, of Springfield, Ohio.

Fourth in the Buckeye Conference last season, after winning the championship in 1933 and finishing second the year before that, the Lutherans are reported to be back on the old standard, and ready for another title. Tonight's game will be their fourth on an annual Eastern invasion.

Princeton's high-scoring quintet, a leader in the Eastern League, fell before the Buckeyes, 37-33 last year wihle the Alabama, Georgia, Yale and Lehigh fives met a similar fate.

Pitzer Leads Invaders.

Elwood Pitzer, a 6-foot guard, who was an All-State selection last season, is the team's brightest star. In 20 games he scored 127 points, or approximately a sixth of the total of 630 made by the entire team. Pitzer is an expert dribbler, and as his record would suggest, a pretty good shot.

Joe Harris, letterman from the '34 varsity, will team with Pitzer at the defensive positions. Wade Wichael, a 6-foot, 3-inch center, who usually controls the top-off, will be pitted against Hal Kiesel, G. W.'s lanky jumper. Scottie Florence and Paul Sun, forwards, complete the visitors line-up.

Kiesel will be flanked by the same men who downed Geneva Tuesday, Howell and Goldfadden, forwards; Leemans and Bakum guards. They're after their fourth in a row.

Kendall Swamps Silver Spring, 26-14

Ramsay and Curtis Top Winner's Attack.

A potent last-quarter scoring spree gave Kendall Green its third straight win yesterday at Silver Spring, the Taksils bowing, 26 to 14.

The visitors assumed a 6-to-0 lead at the quarter, only to see the hosts take the lead at the half, 8 to 7, aided by Johnny Fitzgerald's two baskets from midcourt.

The third quarter found Kendall ahead again, 12 to 10, and they completely outplayed the Springers in the last period, outscoring them, 14 to 4, with a fast-breaking attack led by Ramsay and Curtis. Wolfe led the Taksils with 6 points.

Eastern's Five Impressive in First Start

St. John's Beaten, 53-35, as Dean Sets Pace With 23 Points.

By John Vosburgh.

CHIEF CHARLIE GUYON put the old Indian sign on the St. John's basket ball team yesterday and his Eastern High warriors breezed through to an easy 53-to-35 victory to give their season an auspicious send-off.

The Eastern boys took advantage of the occasion to demonstrate that their inter-high championship is in the hands of able defenders, to say the least. All but the two veteran members of the team, Capt. Lavelle Dean and Gay Edelen, are battling for a regular berth and consequently Coach Guyon has a team constantly on its toes. The Johnnies were hopelessly outclassed.

Dean set a new high for individual schoolboy scoring for the season by netting 9 baskets and 5 free-shots for 23 points, giving every indication of the sharp-shooting which earned him All-High honors last year.

Coach Guyon used 15 men. Among the interested spectators were John Billings and Milt Mullitz, regular center and guard of Tech High's powerful team, who seemed considerably impressed by the Eastern high-scoring attack.

Dean, Edelen and Reds Scheible opened their basket bombardment right after the start and Eastern had a 16-to-6 lead as the first quarter ended. Eastern increased the advantage to 25-13 in the next period and with the opening of the final quarter led 39-25.

Eastern lost a likely-looking reserve forward in Lawrence Lichliter, who suffered a recurrence of an old knee injury, his leg suddenly folding up on him. Coach Guyon had been planning to use the youngster in some of the inter-high games, considering him one of his most promising players. Lichliter will probably be out for several weeks.

The St. John's guarding was glaringly faulty, many of Eastern's baskets being nothing more than set-ups. Coach Guyon still has a number of rough spots to iron out but Eastern's basket ball future this season is not exactly a cause for worry.

Basket Ball Tourney Entries Close Today

Entries for the city-wide basket ball tournament to be conducted from December 26 through December 29, at the George Washington University gymnasium by the Boys Club of Metropolitan Police will close at 11 o'clock Monday morning. Teams in the 85-pound, 100-pound, 115-pound, 130-pound, 145-pound and men's unlimited classes may compete.

A team trophy and silver medals will be awarded the winning five in each class, ten medals to each aggregation. The tournament will be operated under the elimination plan, a defeat eliminating a team. Three pounds will be allowed each player at game time. Entries may be made with John P. Meshkoff or Morris Fox, No. 5 Precinct, Fifth and E streets southeast.

Cue Association Drops 1935 Title Tournament

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Seeking to popularize the sport among amateurs, the National Billiards Association has announced abandonment of the 1935 world championship tournament and instead an effort will be made to make the country billiards conscious.

Instead vying with each other for premier cue honors, 21 of the ranking professionals will give exhibitions and instructions—gratis—in 1,500 billiard halls throughout the country next year, C. A. Storer, president of the National Billiards Association, announced.

liminaries. K. O. Riley will again bring his knockout right hand into action against Mickey Flannigan, and California Joe Rivers will make passes at LeRoy Dougan in the remaining bouts.

POST PREDICTIONS.

Bouts are rated from A (very, very good) to G (very, very bad).

Main event—Phil Furr, Washington, vs. Jay McCadon, Newark, N. J., welterweights; 10 rounds. Rated B. McCadon punches well with both hands, but has nothing to match Furr's right, nor is he as smart a boxer. Therefore, Furr to win.

Semifinal—Bob Lowry, Washington, vs. Mike Scipio, Baltimore, welterweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Lowry is moving along too rapidly for Scipio and should win handily.

Preliminaries—Oscar (K. O.) Riley, Washington, vs. Mickey Flannigan, Pittsburgh, middleweights; 6 rounds. Rated D. Some time during the fight Riley should land his K. O.

Roddy Davis, Washington, vs. Frankie Litt, Newark, N. J., welterweights; 6 rounds. Rated D. Davis to outbox Litt.

Garden Warns Heavyweight Fighters

Johnston Says Contracts Are Legal; Guarantees Baer Title Bout.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (Spl.)—Charging that "jealous rival promoters under the cloak of charity" were attempting to get his job with Madison Square Garden, Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston today announced that he owned a complete monopoly of leading heavyweight fighters, including Champion Max Baer; that he would not resign because Germany took the Hamas-Schmeling bout; that he would institute legal proceedings against Hamas, and that he would guarantee the United States a big-time title bout outdoors in the summer of '35.

"I have $1,000,000 worth of heavyweights muzzled and on a legal leash," said Johnston. "Their contracts are good in any civil court of law, even though they have no technical standing with Gen. John Phelan's State Athletic Commission. I have Art Lasky tied up and Max Baer, and Max Schmeling and Steve Hamas and Primo Carnera.

Guarantees Baer Bout.

"There will be an outdoor championship fight with Max Baer defending his title next summer. I know some promoters, under the guise of charity, have been trying to blackjack him away, but he will fight for us. Our law firm has some retired supreme court justices on it. They know what they are doing.

"Hamas will run into trouble if he tries to break from us. Either that or he will have to go abroad and fight abroad the rest of his mortal life. I am having a conference with my lawyers about it tomorrow."

Johnston pointed out that fighters in the past—including Schmeling—have said "To h—l with the Garden!" but they were always glad to come back.

Duke Lists Ten Games For 1935 Grid Season

Durham, N. C., Dec. 19 (AP).—A ten-game football schedule was announced today by Athletic Director Wallace Wade for the Duke Devils of 1935.

South Carolina, to be played in Durham September 29, and Washington and Lee's conference champions, to be met in Richmond October 5, are newcomers on the card. V. M. I. will not be met next fall.

The schedule:

September 22, Wake Forest, at Greensboro (night); 29, South Carolina, at Durham.

October 5, Washington and Lee, at Richmond, Va.; 12, Clemson, at Durham; 19, Georgia Tech, at Atlanta; 25 (Friday), Auburn at Durham.

November 2, Tennessee, at Durham; 9, Davidson, at Davidson; 16, North Carolina, at Durham; 23, North Carolina State, at Raleigh.

Successful in Ring.

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 19 (Spl.). Bernard Cullins, of River Springs, who recently enlisted in the Navy and is now stationed at San Pedro, Calif., writes home that he has been boxing and has 22 knockouts to his credit in 57 fights.

Syracuse Grid Foe of Md. In 1935

Baltimore to Be Scene of Battle Thanksgiving; 10 Games Booked.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY, one of the East's outstanding elevens during the past season, has been added to the University of Maryland's 1935 gridiron schedule, athletic officials at the Old Line school announced last night. The game will be played Thanksgiving Day in Baltimore.

It will be the third game between the schools and is expected to be the beginning of a long series, played on a home-and-home basis. The 1936 game will be played earlier in November, however, as Maryland and Washington and Lee plan to inaugurate an annual Turkey Day series that season.

The addition of the Orangemen gives the Terrapins a hard 10-game schedule including four major opponents from all points on the compass. The Faber-coached squad tackles Florida, Indiana and Georgetown, in addition to its usual quota of Southern Conference opponents.

Maryland Won in 1920.

Maryland's first encounter with Syracuse, played in 1920 at Syracuse, resulted in a surprise 10-7 triumph for the Terps. "Untz" Brewer's field goal, drop-kicked from a difficult angle at a good distance from the uprights, was Maryland's margin of victory.

But in 1921 Syracuse obtained ample revenge for that upset in the guise of a 42-0 victory.

Coached by one of the school's most brilliant gridmen, Vic Hansen, the Orange team won six and lost two games during the past autumn. It defeated Cornell, Brown, Penn State, Michigan State, Clarkson and Ohio Wesleyan, and lost to Colgate, 13-2, and Columbia, 12-0.

The Terps will be resuming an old rivalry with North Carolina after a lapse of four years. They met annually from 1920 to 1930, inclusive, with the Tarheels holding a 7-4 edge. The last resulted in a 28-21 thriller, which Carolina won in the last minute of play when Branch ran almost the length of the field for the winning touchdown.

Navy Game Is Dropped.

Johns Hopkins and Navy are the only opponents met in 1934 that Maryland does not play next season. The Blue Jays clashed with Maryland annually on Thanksgiving Day in Baltimore for more than 20 years, but the gradual decline of Johns Hopkins teams, accentuated in the last five years by a no-scholarship policy, led to the abandonment of their traditional rivalry.

The Georgetown game has been definitely scheduled for Griffith Stadium, although it was announced as being at College Park by Maryland.

Notable Coaches Linked to L. S. U.

famous, and he's being talked about as successor to Capt. Jones."

Meanwhile, in Chicago, Coach Shaughnessy said he had not been informed of any offer to take over the coaching duties at L. S. U.

"I have not been approached with an offer," he said. "Senator Long is a good friend of mine, so possibly he just mentioned my name in a conversation and this gave rise to the rumor."

Meehan, who skyrocketed New York University to football fame a few years ago before switching to Manhattan College, occupied a prominent place in campus discussions concerning Jones' successor, but reports that he was being considered failed to bring any comment from university officials.

The same was true regarding rumors that Ray Morrison, of S. M. U., might be approached with a proposition.

Still other campus talk pointed to the possibility that the coaching reins may be turned over to Moore, who served as Capt. Jones' chief scout during the current campaign.

President James Monroe Smith of the university announced that Shaughnessy "was being considered," but added that he was "one of several likely coaches" and that no definite action had been taken.

McGugin Seen Factor.

In other quarters belief was expressed the final selection might rest on the recommendation of Dan McGugin, who resigned as head coach at Vanderbilt at the close of the 1934 season to assume the role of director of athletics.

McGugin is listed as close personal friend of Senator Long, leading to the belief that the "Kingfish" may call on him for advice before making a final decision.

Capt. Jones' resignation is effective January 1, and it was considered likely his successor will not be formally named until after that time.

Stocks Driven From Rut Into Heavier Loss

Liquidation of Utilities Blamed; Sales Rise to 978,240 Shares.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—The stock market was shaken out of an extremely narrow range today by a recurrent wave of liquidation in utility shares.

Spreading from Consolidated Gas and some power issues, selling was general for a while in early trading. But pressure lifted before midday and the market drifted quietly to the close, although its undertone remained heavy.

The move for a municipal power plant in New York City, together with indications President Roosevelt was increasing pressure for lower electric rates, overshadowed evidence of further slow business improvement.

Brunt of Selling.

Bearing most of the weight of selling in the utility division, Consolidated Gas lost 1⅝ points as it dropped through 21 to the lowest level in more than a decade.

The preferred stocks dipped 3¼ to 80. Public Service of New Jersey, North American, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, United Corporation preferred and Brooklyn Union Gas were off fractionally to 3 points.

Rail shares sagged with the rest of the list in face of individual carloading reports showing good gains over the corresponding 1933 week, particularly by the important Eastern roads. Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Great Northern and New York Central dipped fractionally to about a point.

Losses of 1 to nearly 4 points were recorded in Allied Chemical, American Snuff, American Woolen preferred, Bethlehem Steel preferred, J. I. Case, Columbian Carbon, Commercial Credit, General Railway Signal, International Business Machines, National Steel, J. C. Penny and United States Smelting.

Mining Shares Slip.

Mining shares slipped as a rally in the dollar squelched renewed inflation talk and contributed to selling in the group.

Volume in the stock exchange increased to 978,240 shares against 821,560 yesterday.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks declined a point to 71.7.

Business observers looked forward to the possibility of an interruption in the year-end gains in trade and industry over the holidays.

The weekly total of electric output, as announced by the Edison Electric Institute, was the highest in four years. Compared with 1933, the gain last week was 7.5 per cent against 7.7 the week before.

Pneumatic Casing Sales Decline During October

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Shipments of pneumatic casings in October totaled 3,009,714 units, reports the Rubber Manufacturers Association. This compares with shipments of 3,182,903 casings in September and 2,536,971 in October last year.

Production amounted to 3,286,902 against 2,935,958 in September and 3,428,658 in October, 1933. Inventory at the end of October was 8,656,799 casings against 8,418,906 on September 30 and 8,461,735 a year ago.

Railroad Earnings for October Increased by 37 Out of 65 Lines

Study of Month's Revenues Also Reveals That Four Roads More Than Offset Declines in Gross Returns Through Cuts in Maintenance Expenditures.

New York, Dec. 19.—Railroad earnings in October, 1934, according to Theodore Prince, of Redmond & Co., made a more favorable comparison with the like 1933 month than did the September results. In October, 37 out of some 65 major railroads were able to show an increase in gross over 1933, whereas in September similarly the number of roads was 27.

Furthermore, in October, 21 of these 37 roads were able to transmit a portion of the increased gross to net and show larger net railway operating income than in the like 1933 month, whereas in September only eight roads were able to duplicate this showing.

A study of the October earnings also reveals the interesting fact that about four roads were able to more than offset declines in gross revenues from the 1933 level through reductions in maintenance expenditures and thus show larger net railway operating income than in 1933.

Efforts to Offset Costs.

The effort of the railroads to offset higher New Deal costs and declining traffic is illustrated by the steady decline in monthly maintenance expenditures from a peak of $91,842,000 in May to $82,009,000 in September; in October, however, there was an increase in such expenditures of roughly $3,700,000. Contrary to this trend, in 1933 maintenance expenditures increased steadily from $66,632,000 in February to a peak of $88,310,000 in August and then started to decline. Furthermore, it may be noted that maintenance expenditures from August through October have been below the 1933 level.

October 1934 total operating revenues of $292,903,000 showed the smallest decline from the like 1933 level since decreases began to be shown in July; the decline from the like 1933 month was 0.5 per cent in October, 5.7 per cent in September, 4.8 per cent in August and 6.0 per cent in July. October net railway operating income similarly made a relatively favorable showing, the decline from the October 1933 level being 15.2 per cent as compared with 32.3 per cent in September, 35.4 per cent in August and 45.6 per cent in July.

However, as a result of the continued poor operating results, net railway operating income for the first ten months of the year was 1.9 per cent below the like 1933 level, the first time this year the cumulative showings have recorded a decrease.

Indicated Net Income.

It is indicated that the October, 1934, railroad earnings, when reported in detail, may show net income of about $5,500,000 after charges as compared with October, 1933, net income of roughly $13,600,000. This would be the first time since June of this year that the railroads as a whole have been able to cover their fixed charges.

Thus, the net loss of $37,065,000 for the first nine months of this year (against $36,984,000 in the like 1933 period) may be reduced to under $32,000,000 for the first 10 months of the year, which would compare with a net loss of $25,702,000 for the first 10 months of 1933. It thus appears likely at the present writing that the net loss after charges for the calendar year 1934 will not be nearly as high as earlier published estimates of some $73,000,000.

It is possible that the net loss this year may be in the vicinity of $40,000,000, depending on how large December "other income" will be, which would compare with a 1933 net loss of only $5,863,000.

Of course, individual carrier results will vary greatly, as is illustrated by the fact that out of about 35 of the more important rialroads it is estimated that more than half will fail to cover their fixed charges in varying degrees.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A quiet but steady tone was recorded on the stock exchange today. The recovery in foreign bonds and the firmer levels attained by gilt-edged securities owing to moderate buying were the chief features. Gold-mining shares and transatlantic issues were undecided. The market closed steady.

Paris—Hopes of a quick solution of the the Citroen auto works difficulties, as a result of the government's intervention, helped prices to regain losses on the bourse today. The closing was firm.

Berlin—With a cheerful tone prevailing, prices were firmer throughout on the boerse today. The closing was quiet and sustained.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Continue Decline During Past Week

New York, Dec. 19.—New York City bank stocks continued to decline during the past week. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster, totaled $1,309,686,000 on December 14 against $1,364,071,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $54,385,000, or 3.99 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.95 per cent. compares with a yield of 5.72 per cent. at the close of the previous week. The current market value is now 1.07 times the known book value, against 1.12 times on December 7, and based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 9.3 times their known earnings, against 9.7 times a week ago.

Bond Market Drops Slightly; Volume Lags

Secondary Corporate Loans Decline; Sales Fall to $12,392,000.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Secondary corporate loans lost further ground on the bond market today, although prime investments held steady and Governments were mostly higher.

Transfers aggregated $12,392,000 par value, compared with $14,576,000 on Tuesday.

Unsettling Influence.

Fresh developments calculated to adversely affect utilities had an unsettling influence on that group and many of the lower-priced issues yielded a point or so along with the carrier loans, which extended their losses of the previous session about that much.

Market Street Railway 7s declined 3 points, to 75½; New Orleans Public Service 5s yielded 1 point, to 54; New Haven 6s were 1¼ lower, at 48¼, and Alleghany 5s lost 2¾ points, at 22⅛.

Other losers included obligations of Boston & Maine, Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Great Western, Chicago & Northwestern, International Telephone, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate, North American Edison, Philadelphia Co., Rio Grande Western, Southern Railway, Utah Light & Traction and Western Union.

The creeping upward movement in first grade bonds carried several issues into new 1934 high ground, including Santa Fe general 4s, up ¼ at 107¼, Cleveland & Pittsburgh 4½s, up 1 at 107, Pennsylvania gold 5s, up ¼ at 105¾, and Virginia Electric & Power 5s, up ⅝ at 105¾. Higher prices were paid for obligations of Central Railroad of New Jersey, Crown Willamette Paper, B. F. Goodrich, Dodge Bros., New England Telephone & Telegraph, and Reading.

Kelly-Springfield Jumps.

Kelly-Springfield 6s made an extreme gain of 8¾ points to 52. The company was placed in receivership late yesterday, following prolonged disagreement between the management and some of the stockholders.

Carpet Wool Use Higher.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—October consumption in the United States of carpet wools was approximately 6,200,000 pounds, or slightly higher than during September.

Curb's Prices Turn Down; Sales Active

Utilities Lead Market's Drop; Trading Put at 239,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—The curb market lost a little ground today, and selling in utility shares was the major factor in the downward movement. Some scattered specialties displayed resistance; trading was active.

From the start utilities were offered rather freely and finally selling spread to other sections of the market. As was the case with the power and light stocks on the big board, the selling appeared to have been inspired by the Government's cool reception of proposals from utility quarters for cooperative effort toward an early judicial interpretation of the legality of the TVA, and threats of municipal generation of power in New York for the city's own needs.

After stiffening around midday, the lower price drift was resumed, and final quotations were generally around the low levels for the day.

Among less active stocks, Pan-American Airways and Singer Manufacturing lost 2 and 3 points, respectively. Alumninum Co. of America was off nearly 2, while recessions of fractions to a point or so were recorded by American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share common and preferred issues, National Power & Light preferred, Hiram Walker, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Sherwin-Williams and United Shoe Machinery. Celanese first preferred was an outstanding firm spot, rising 3¼. Lake Shore and Great Atlantic & Pacific improved, while American Cyanamid B, Creole and International Petroleum were steady.

Transfers which approximated 239,000 shares were about the same as yesterday.

The sale of a curb exchange seat was announced at $21,500, an increase of $1,500 over the previous transfer.

Stocks—Another wave of liquidation in utilities shook stocks out of the narrow range into wider losses. Such declines averaged 1 point. Sales volume increased to 978,240 shares.

Bonds—The market declined a fraction as secondary corporate loans lost ground. The average drop was one-tenth of a point. Sales decreased to $12,392,000.

Curb—Ground was lost by the curb market and selling in utilities proved the major factor in the downward movement. Trading was active. Sales stood at 239,000 shares.

Wheat—Grain prices suffered abrupt breaks for want of aggressive buying. Wheat closed 1⅛ to 1⅝ lower. December wheat sold at 97¼; May, at 98¼.

Cotton—Prices were quiet and movements comparatively narrow. Liquidation appeared, but the general market closed unchanged to 8 points higher. December and January both closed at 12.50.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.60; refined sold at 4.40.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Santos No. 4 sold at 11¼; Rio No. 7 at 9½.

Silver—Bar silver was higher in New York. It advanced ⅛, to 53⅞ cents per ounce. In London it increased to 24 1/16 pence.

Gold—Bar gold sold in London at 140 shillings 9½ pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was slightly higher on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.94¾ to the English pound; 6.60½ cents to the French franc, and 40.23 cents to the German mark.

Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 19 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Trade in wool was quieter than last week. Interest continued, however, as numerous bids were being made at levels quite a bit under asking prices, but these bids were being rejected. Some wool was moving, especially on the finer quality average to short staple territory wool. Strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood was more active than last week despite the generally slower trade. Prices on this grade and class were in the range 65@68 cents scoured basis.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—The sedate bond market leaped ahead of stocks in 1934.

The monthly tabulation of the total quoted value of all securities on the New York Stock Exchange shows that bonds added some $5,500,000,000 to their market value between December 1, 1933, and December 1, 1934, while stocks added little more than $1,300,000,000.

This was in decided contrast to what happened in 1933, when stocks swelled up nearly $10,000,000,000 over the previous year.

A similar comparison for bonds last year is lacking, for the aggregate figure was distorted by removal of the huge United Kingdom 5 per cent war loan. Domestic bonds, however, gained only $1,260,000,000.

Wall street economists regard it as a distinctly good sign that bonds have leaped ahead of stocks. Recovery from past depressions, they say, has usually started with an improvement in the bond market, and a revival of new financing.

The current recovery has not reached the point where long-term credit has started to flow out into new enterprises in volume in the form of new corporate bond financing. Nevertheless, bond prices have reached levels which makes long-term credit look pretty cheap.

The revival of financing, investment bankers say, only awaits the reawakening of business enterprise, and the discovery that the securities act, as amended, is not such an obstacle as bankers and business men have feared.

Business men will not sell bonds, it is explained, until they see opportunities to employ new capital profitably. In the meantime, a few big corporations are arranging to refund outstanding bonds with new issues at the more favorable terms now available.

The total value of all bonds listed on the exchange as of December 1, last, was $39,665,455,602, against $34,179,882,418 a year earlier. For stocks, the total quoted value was $33888,023,435, against $32,542,456,452.

One factor in the rise in listed bonds, of course, has been the physical scarcity developing in many categories, since the new issue business has been almost at a standstill for three years.

Steel Output Rate Rises to 35½ Per Cent

Gain of 2½ Points Pushes Operations to Highest Since June.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—With mill schedules being pushed in preparation for a three-day Christmas shutdown, steel production and scrap prices have moved upward for the ninth consecutive week, Iron Age reported today. It estimated the current operating rate is 35½ per cent of capacity, a gain of 2½ points over a week ago and the highest rate since the end of June.

A further rise in scrap made the Iron Age index for old metal $11.58 a ton, the highest since the middle of May.

Mills plan to resume operations after Christmas and some will run through the New Year period, according to the review.

"Although part of the current expansion in output is attributable to replenishment of raw steel stocks," it added, "this is not the case in all producing districts. In one important center mills have been forced to run on cold steel to meet the urgent needs of the automobile trade.

"The long-delayed new model program of the motor car makers has now gotten under way in earnest. Demand from farm implement and tractor plants, as well as from a wide variety of miscellaneous sources, is also broadening.

"Contracting for the first quarter has been disappointing. Uncertainty as to the new policy of the NRA regarding price control under the codes is causing many buyers to withhold long-term commitments which would otherwise be made as a matter of convenience.

"Orders for early shipment, however, are piling up and while they undoubtedly reflect a gain in actual construction they may also indicate renewed apprehensions regarding the labor situation.

"Sweeping demands for automotive labor, made in hearings conducted by a special Government commission, are interpreted as the initial fanfare in a new unionization drive which may culminate in strikes in the mortor-car industry early in 1935."

The Iron Age composite price for pig iron and finished steel were unchanged at $17.90 a ton and 2.24 cents a pound.

Directors of the Iowa Southern Utilities Co. declared a dividend of $1.75 a share on the 7 per cent preferred stock, $1.62½ on the 6½ per cent preferred, and $1.50 on the 6 per cent preferred, all payable January 19 to stock of record December 31. This is the first payment in three years and a statement by the board said it was not to be considered a regular, inasmuch as the company was not earning full dividend requirements.

Neptune Meter Co. declared a dividend of $3 on the preferred stock on account of accumulations, payable December 24 to stock of record December 20.

Seeman Brothers Co. declared an extra dividend of $1 and the regular quarterly dividend of 62½ cents on the capital stock. The regular disbursement and 50 cents of the extra are payable February 1 to stock of record January 15, and the remaining 50 cents of the extra is payable May 1 to stock of record April 15.

The profit per share of outstanding preferred stock this year was $18.49 against $6.05 last year, and on outstanding common stock the profit was 85 cents a share against nothing last year. The report was for the second full year of operation since combintaion of the Dobbs and Knox companies.

Directors of the Excess Insurance Co. of America today declared a dividend of 25 cents per share on the common stock, payable January 15 to stockholders of record December 31.

Directors of American Maize-Products Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the preferred stock and a dividend of 25 cents a share on the common.

Both dividends are payable December 31 to stockholders of record December 24, 1934.

Standard Gas & Electric Co. and subsidiaries, excluding Deep Rock Oil Corporation and Beaver Valley Traction Co., report for the 12 months ended September 30 consolidated net income of $2,152,938, compared with $3,345,037 in the preceding 12 months.

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP).—Directors of the Link-Belt Company today declared a 15 cent dividend on common stock payable March 1 to stockholders of record February 15. The usual quarterly dividend of $1.62½ a share on preferred stock also was ordered on April 1 to stockholders of record March 15.

The Commonwealth Edison Company has announced gross revenues for the month of November of $6,393,889 as against $6,367,549 for the same month of a year ago. The net income was $928,415, compared with net income of $512,306 for November, 1933.

Bankers Here Mourn Death Of Lockwood

Roberts, People's Counsel, to Urge Lower Rates for Electricity.

By Karl von Lewinski.

Washington banking circles were deeply shocked when informed of the death early yesterday of Chester W. Lockwood, investment broker and banker.

LOCKWOOD.

Mr. Lockwood had been ill for about two months at his home, 2422 Tracy place northwest. His condition has steadily grown worse following an operation for stomach disorders about a month ago.

A Harvard graduate, Mr. Lockwood has had a long and successful career in the investment banking business here. Born in 1894 at Lakewood, N. J., he moved to Washington when a boy and attended Friends School and St. Albans School. After studying at Harvard University, Mr. Lockwood left to join the Navy and served as ensign during the participation of the United States in the World War. After his release from the Navy, he returned to Washington to become a member of Harriman & Co.

Manager Here in 1929.

In 1929 he left Harriman to become resident manager of the firm of Hemphill, Noyes & Co. The same year he married Miss Marjorie Adams, of New York, who survives him.

Active in club affairs here and in New York, Mr. Lockwood for a long time headed the Ticker Club, composed of local brokers. He was also a member of the Harvard Club of Washington and the Chevy Chase and Burning Tree Country Clubs.

Private funeral services will be held at the Lockwood home here. Burial will be in Oakdale Cemetery, Troy, N. Y.

Lower Rates to Be Urged.

A substantial reduction in electric rates in force in the District will be urged by People's Counsel William A. Roberts at the January hearing of the Public Utilities Commission for the Potomac Electric Power Co.

A memorandum sent to the commission by Roberts yesterday stated that he would at the same time request a reduction in the valuation on which charges are computed.

He asserts that excessive and unused property which is included in the power company's present valuation should be removed prior to the computation of profit.

Claims Earnings Above Base.

He stated also that earnings for the power company during the past 12 consecutive months have not fallen below the allowed rate of 6½ per cent, despite its loss in net income of approximately 10 per cent.

The low cost of electricity in Washington as compared to the national average cost was explained in part by Roberts. Average local taxes paid by electric power companies in the United States are in excess of 12 per cent and run as high as 21 per cent of gross receipts.

Average local taxes paid by the Potomac Electric Power Co. for franchise and real estate aggregate only about 4 per cent of the gross. Last year the company earned a fraction more than 7 per cent on its investment.

Peoples Drug Shares.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has granted the application of the Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., for registration on the New York Stock Exchange of 122,737 shares of unissued common stock.

The stock is to be issued as a 100 per cent stock dividend payable December 31, 1934, to stockholders of record at the close of business December 21, 1934.

The registration is to become effective upon official notice of the exchange of issuance of the securities.

Interest Rates Reduced.

Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and the Provident Mutual Insurance Co. of Philadelphia have announced a cut in their interest rates to 3 per cent from 3½ per cent, effective January 1 and March 1, respectively.

Under the new rates, premiums, reserves and surrender values will be computed on a 3 per cent basis, against 3½ per cent currently.

The action constitutes an increase of about 6½ per cent on premiums for policies issued after January, 1, 1935. Old policies and those issued prior to the last of the year are not affected.

In announcing the change, Frederick H. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., stated it was "due to the increase in the rate of interest return and the scarcity of suitable investments."

Mergenthaler Linotype reinforced its recent high on the Washington Stock Exchange by selling yesterday at 33¼.

Capital Traction bonds crossed the board at 89½ for two transactions aggregating $1,500.

Pleasant Valley Wine Co. Appoints Sales Manager

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 19.—The Pleasant Valley Wine Co., Rheims, N. Y., producers of Great Western champagne and wines, announce the appointment of Harold L. Richeson as their general sales manager. Mr. Richeson, until his appointment, was general sales manager of Canada Dry.

Visible Supply of Grain.

New York, Dec. 19.—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes, in bushels: Wheat decreased, 701,000; corn decreased, 2,945,000; oats increased, 279,000; rye increased, 157,000; barley increased, 96,000.

According to Robert H. Bean, executive secretary of the American Acceptance Council, the volume of bankers' acceptances on November 30 was only slightly lower than at the end of October.

The report shows that the November 30 volume of acceptances amounted to $561,380,541, a change of only $221,211 from the figures of the previous month.

The comparisons, according to the nature of credit, follow (000 omitted):

A petition for a special holiday on Monday, December 24, is being circulated on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange by a group of members. It is expected that the exchange governors will consider the petition before Friday, according to the Associated Press.

Consumers in the United States spent $444,955,000 for general merchandising in department stores and all other kinds of stores during November, the largest sum expended in that month since 1931, when sales totaled $459,819,000, according to figures released yesterday by the International Statistical Bureau, Inc.

According to the New York Cocoa Exchange, business on the exchange will establish a high record for this year. Up to December 15 the total sales were placed at 53,395 contracts or 716,243 tons, compared with 49,140 contracts or 658,476 tons during the entire year of 1933.

Appropriations of more than $1,000,000 required for construction work on Tri-Borough Bridge during November, December and January has been held up by Public Works Administration and is threatening to tie up further work on the bridge, according to Herald Tribune.

Year's Sugar Use In 14 Countries Is Up 227,327 Tons

Stocks on Hand Total 7,229 Units Above 1933 Period.

New York, Dec. 19.—Consumption of sugar in the 14 principal European countries during the first 10 months of 1934, January through October, totaled 6,164,689 long tons, raw sugar value, as compared with 5,937,362 tons consumed during the corresponding period last year, an increase of 227,327 tons, or 3.8 per cent, according to European advices received by Lamborn & Co.

Sugar stocks on hand for these countries on November 1, 1934, amounted to 2,860,207 tons, as against 2,852,978 tons on the same date last year, an increase of 7,229 tons.

Production of sugar for the 14 principal European countries for the season starting September 1, 1934, is forecast at 6,263,000 long tons, raw sugar, as against 5,457,000 tons in the previous season, an increase of 806,000 tons, or approximately 15 per cent.

The 14 countries included in the survey are Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Holland, Hungary, Irish Free State, Italy, Poland, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

Failures Off Only Slightly.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Business failures in the United States during the week ended December 13 numbered 231 compared with 232 in the preceding week and 260 in the same week last year, according to reports to Dun & Bradstreet.

Wheat Values Close Lower; Buying Drops

Cotton Market Is Steady, Unchanged to Eight Points Higher.

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP).—Grain prices suffered abrupt breaks late today for want of aggressive buying support.

A holiday spirit prevailed, and price-lifting stimulants fell flat. Snowfalls over Eastern sections of domestic winter wheat territory were constructed as bearish, and a new Government report—scheduled for issuance tomorrow afternoon, giving first official acreage and condition figures on 1935 domestic winter wheat— had some effect toward inducing hesitancy as to fresh buying ventures.

With considerable stop-loss selling finally in evidence, wheat closed weak at the day's bottom level, 1⅛ to 1⅜ under yesterday's finish, May 98¼ to ⅜; corn, ⅝ to ⅞ down; May, 87 to 87⅛; oats, ⅛ to ½ off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

Despite a show of steadiness at the opening, wheat and corn both soon underwent setbacks. Almost regardless of official reports confirming huge domestic crop losses, not enough new buying to uphold values was in evidence.

Cotton Market

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Cotton was quiet today and the price movement irregular within a comparatively narrow range. There was further near-month liquidation and switching into later months, but general business was restricted and comparatively light offerings were absorbed by the trade. March contracts, after selling off to 12.53, advanced to 12.58 in the late trading and closed at that figure with the general market steady, net unchanged to 8 points higher.

The circulation of a few December notices brought in some near-month liquidation in early trading and combined with a little Southern selling caused prices to ease in forenoon trading with December selling down to 12.37 and May at 12.55.

The early declines were attributed chiefly to technical readjustments and the evening-up of near months, while the easier tone of the stock market may have been a contributing factor. Overnight reports from Washington were regarded as indicating little prospect for an immediate agreement on the German cotton barter plan, but attracted little comment as an immediate market factor.

Exports today, 1,857, making 2,253,929 so far this season. Port receipts, 7,778. United States port stocks, 3,118,317.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easier today under liquidation in March and May with refining interests buying on the setback. Final prices were 4 to 7 points net lower. Sales, 38 contracts. Lard firmness offset the late setback in grains. The market will close at noon on Monday, December 24, and Monday, December 31. Mixed Course Followed By Farm Produce

Prices Are Unsettled or Slightly Lower in Middle of Month.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics.)

Farm products were mostly unsettled or slightly lower around the middle of December, following the sharply rising trend the first part of the month. Cotton advanced slightly, but grain fell back 1 to 5 cents from recent high points.

Feed prices continued to rise, having reached cost levels out of line with prices of most animal products. Live stock markets were irregular. Tone of the butter market was unsettled and rather weak, but cheese prices held firm with some gains. Main trend of the egg market was still downward. Prices of dressed poultry of good grade were generally maintained near recent levels.

The feature of the produce market was the sharp price advance of many lines of Southern vegetables following the destructive freeze in Florida and Louisiana. Prices of most Northern vegetables showed little change, but there were moderate gains for cabbage and sweet potatoes.

Cotton Slightly Higher.

After shifting within a narrow range, spot cotton prices advanced a little near the middle of the month. Cotton cloth prices were also firm. Wholesale cloth markets were comparatively active and retail sales are well sustained.

The general level of prices for other commodities declined but industrial activity, particularly in cotton cloth and automobile production, has recently made substantial gains. On the other hand, the demand for the export trade continued light.

Although the difference in the price of American cotton and important foreign growths continues comparatively wide, the recent strengthening in the price of important foreign growths is a development favorable to American cotton.

Service for Classified Advertisers

The Washington Post Classified Department offers Post readers a practical and helpful service in placing Classified Ads with their trained staff of telephone solicitors and ad-writers. Every member is truly an advertising counsel on the problem of classified results—and how to attain them effectively and economically.

Whether you desire to rent an apartment—seek a suitable roomer—dispose of a good used car—or sell a household article—exchange real estate or business property—you can profit by their help in composing a result-producing classified ad.

This trained and courteous corps of ad-writers, under the supervision of Miss Markham, are at your service from 8 A. M. daily till 7:45 P. M., except Saturday. Then until 5:45 P. M.

We invite you to take advantage of this service. Call "the result number," NAtional 4200, and ask for an ad-writer.

APPLE MARY By Martha Orr

THIS FLOOR IS THE HARDEST THING I'VE EVER TRIED TO SLEEP ON, BUT LOOK AT DENNIE, SLEEPING AWAY, JUST AS IF HE WERE IN HIS OWN LITTLE BED AT HOME, BUT HE HASN'T A HOME, ANYMORE!
IT'S LUCKY FOR ME, THAT OLD TOM IS NIGHT WATCHMAN AT THIS WAREHOUSE, AND LET US STAY IN THIS EMPTY ROOM. WHERE ELSE COULD WE HAVE GONE, AFTER MRS. HARDIE LOCKED US OUT OF OUR ROOM, LAST NIGHT?
SOME WAY, I'VE GOT TO GET BREAKFAST FOR DENNIE! HE DIDN'T HAVE ANY SUPPER LAST NIGHT! SAY, WHAT'S THIS COMING?
BREAKFAST! WELL, WHAT DO YOU KNOW? OLD TOM WOULD DO SOMETHING LIKE THAT, AN' THEN HURRY AWAY SO HE WOULDN'T BE THANKED FOR IT. BLESS HIS KIND HEART!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Countess, Halt! By Harry J. Tuthill

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 12-20
OH DAVENPORT, MY OWN, YOU ARE SO UTTERLY COLD. NOT ONCE SINCE I, A COUNTESS, WALKED INTO THIS ROOM HAVE YOU CALLED ME "DEAR."
AH.... WELL, OF COURSE THE SITUATION IS....
ONLY TWO....THREE WEEKS AGO YOU SWEAR THAT YOU WILL NEVER TIRE OF YOUR LITTLE NITA! AND NOW THIS....THIS!
WELL, AS I SAY, YOU JUST HAPPENED TO DROP IN ON A VERY BUSY DAY, MISS....
MISS? HA HA! OH DAVENPORT HOW YOU HAVE CHANGED. ALWAYS BEFORE YOU TAKE ME IN YOUR BIG STRONG ARMS AND SAY... BOO-HOO!
THERE THERE, SISTER, DON'T CRY. DON'T..
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
SISTER? AND YOU TELL ME NOT TO CRY WHEN YOU ARE BREAKING MY HEART. OH YOU BRUTE!
HEY!
COUNTESS! PLEASE!
LISTEN, I ASSURE YOU THIS IS ALL A BIG MISTAKE.
COUNTESS FLAMINGO, PLEASE CALM YOURSELF.
SO! YOU CAST ME ASIDE, EH? ME, A COUNTESS. HA HA! WAIT, YOU LOW WRETCH!

JOE PALOOKA The Brute By Ham Fisher

ESCUSE ME— I WOULD LIKE VERY MUCH TO ASK YOU THE WAY TO THE SAVOY.
OHH— IT'S 'IM, SIR!
GO TO ⋆!!⋆⋆⋆! HAND FIND AHT FER YERSEL——
SO IT'S YOU, EH? I COULDN'T SEE YER FYCE!
COME 'ERE!! BLAST YER, COME 'ERE!! TRAIPSIN HAROUND WHILST I'M LOOKIN' FER YER, EH?
P-PLEASE DON'T 'IT ME— I AWST 'IM T'ELP ME FIND MY WAY.
THAT'S A FACK. I DON'T THINK YOUSE ARE FAIR.
YER DON'T, EH? WELL MIND YER ⋆!!⋆⋆⋆ BIZNESS WHILE I TEACH THIS WENCH A LESSON!

DIXIE DUGAN Caught! By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

SEE, DIXIE— IT'S STILL THERE—— SAFE AN' SOUND
HA-HA! THEY SUSPECT NOTHING! —NOW TAKE THE DOLL AND HURRY BACK TO THE HOTEL.— I'LL TRAIL THEM AND LEARN WHERE SHE LIVES—
I ONLY 'OPE HE'LL BE SAFE, SIR—
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
HAVE NO FEAR! —THE GIRL'S FACE IS KINDNESS ITSELF! —— HURRY AWAY, NOW — I'LL GET THIS TAXI-CAB AND FOLLOW THEM—— 12-20
—BUT JUST AS FLUSHMAW IS ABOUT TO ENTER THE CAB A HEAVY-FOOTED, BIG-JAWED STRANGER ROUNDS THE CORNER—
HA! LOOK WHO'S HERE! — HORACE FLUSHMAW HIMSELF! WHAT'S YOUR HURRY? — WHAT FANCY-WORK ARE YA UP TO NOW?
I S'POSE YOU WERE JUST RUSHING OFF TO CHOIR PRACTISE? WELL, WELL! — GUESS YOU'D BETTER COME ALONG WITH ME FIRST TO THE STATION-HOUSE — THERE'S A LITTLE MATTER OF FLEECING A WIDOW T'TALK ABOUT—— AND AS FLUSHMAW STANDS HELPLESSLY, THE CAR WITH DIXIE IS LOST TO HIS VIEW
H. STRIEBEL

THE GUMPS Welcome, Gumps

DARLING— I WAS JUST THINKING— WOULDN'T IT BE GREAT FUN TO INVITE ANDY AND MIN OVER FOR AN OLD FASHIONED CHRISTMAS DINNER—12-20
I CAN JUST PICTURE THE MEAL NOW— CAVIAR CANAPE— LOBSTER SOUP— WALDORF SALAD— A BIG ROAST GOOSE, STUFFED WITH CHESTNUTS— SQUASH— PLUM PUDDING AND HOT MINCE PIE— M-M-M— WHAT A MARVELOUS CHANCE THAT WOULD GIVE YOU TO SHOW OFF YOUR COOKING—
NOW— WHAT DOES HE WANT TO DO— MAKE A SLAVE OUT OF YOU? A FINE CHRISTMAS THAT WOULD BE FOR US— STAYING IN TO COOK DINNER FOR YOUR HUSBAND'S POOR RELATIONS— THAT MAN MUST HAVE THOUGHT IT WOULD BE CHEAPER TO MARRY YOU THAN TO HIRE A COOK— WAIT TILL I GIVE HIM A PIECE OF MY MIND!

Walt Mason, Himself

Road to Ruin.

Once Jinx ranked with merchant princes and he had a handsome store, where he dished up prunes and quinces at five cents a pound or more. He had clerks to do his bidding, chasing sideways, up and down, and his wagons went a-skidding to all quarters of the town. At the bank he had a credit finer than you ever saw, he could have—the cashier said it—any sum he wished to draw. Any man in such condition should eschew all gaudy tricks; but he formed a fool ambition to be known in politics. So he yearned to be elected as a justice of the peace and his business was neglected with its rice and cheese and grease. He was out pursuing voters through the long and busy day and his trade in Yarmouth bloaters languished till it died away. He was roasting old Dad Perkins, the opposing candidate, while his trade in pickled gherkins slackened to a feeble gait. It is long since he went gunning for that poor old Perkins chap; but since then he's always running for some little public snap. Long ago his store went busted and his credit looped the loops and the town is sore disgusted with his arguments and whoops. Nowadays his conduct savors of the blooming mendicant, he is always asking favors, for the votes of wife and aunt. He is all the time explaining why he ought to win the race, he is evermore in training for some cheap official place. Gone is all his independence, gone his dignity and pride; he is always in attendance, pleading, begging at your side.

Ancient Maps Figure in Fight Over Boundary

Relics Produced by U. S. to Support Claims on Potomac Territory.

An accumulation of old maps, all of them originals and most of them possessing large value as relics, was produced yesterday by the Government to support its claim that the 1791 high-water mark of the Potomac River on the Virginia shore is the legal boundary with the District of Columbia.

They were entered as testimony as formal hearings in the border dispute, which dates back to King Charles' grant to Lord Calvert in 1632, were opened by the Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Commission.

Among those summoned to the witness stand to explain the maps were Col. Lawrence Martin, chief of the Library of Congress map division; Francis B. Kelly, junior cartographic enigneer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey; Loretta A. Schwartz, clerk in charge of map files in the Army Engineers Corps, and Everett O'Brien and Charles Cook.

O'Brien and Cook were employed by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission a few years ago to make a map survey establishing the shore line as it existed in 1931.

Pressing Virginia's claim that the boundary should be fixed at low-water mark was Abram P. Staples, attorney general, and Carl Budwesky, city attorney for Alexandria. The Federal Government was represented by Henry H. Glassie and G. A. Iverson, special assistants to Attorney General Cummings.

The hearing will be resumed at 10 a. m. today in hearing room No. 1 of the Board of Tax Appeals, Internal Revenue Building.

Expansion Studied In Charlottesville

City May Add University, Fry's Spring Areas.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.). A possibility that certain areas in the Frys Spring and University districts not now included in the city will be annexed in the near future arose last night when the city council instructed City Manager Seth Burnley to study the desirability of annexation in these districts.

No definite lines have been considered for the areas which would be taken in. It was said, however, that the Frys Spring section, which recently formulated plans for establishing a sanitary district, would be included in the plan. Parts of University would be under consideration in the northern portion. The areas would increase the city's jurisdiction over approximately 1,000 persons.

Court Continues Girl Attack Case

Court Closed at Hearing for Grim, Rosenberger.

Winchester, Va., Dec. 19 (Spl.)—Raymond Grim and Holmes Rosenberger, held here in connection with charges growing out of an alleged attack upon two small girls, were given a hearing here today, but final disposition of the case was deferred until December 27.

The public was barred from the hearing, which was in juvenile and domestic relations court. Rosenberger was released on bond of $500 for his appearance on December 27. Grim, unable to furnish bond, was remanded to jail.

The alleged offense was said by officers to have taken place on November 25.

Underwood & Underwood.

Much of the accuracy in mass production of precision articles like automobiles and typewriters is due to the tireless efforts of Dr. Lewis V. Judson, Bureau of Standards. It was his skill that made it possible for a Swiss firm in 1927 to construct a machine capable of measuring within two millionths of an inch. Photo shows Dr. Judson with one of the bureau's prime linear standards and the ultra accurate machine in which other standards are compared with the master standards of the bureau.

BAKER.

WITH hope gone for a holiday Christmas Eve and New Year Eve, Government employes have been assured that they will be charged only four hours of leave for absence all day on those two dates.

When President Roosevelt issued the order for the half-day off next Monday and New Year Eve, some of the departmental officials ruled that absence would cost a full day's leave. However, after a canvass of the departments and independent offices by the National Federation of Federal Employes, it is learned the workers may be away from 1 p. m. December 22 until 9 a. m. December 26, and from 1 p. m. December 29 to 9 a. m. January 2—a total of more than seven days vacation with loss of one day's leave, according to Miss Gertrude McNally, N. F. F. E. secretary-treasurer.

300 Without Leave.

So fas as leave is concerned, the 300 employes at Mail Equipment Shop are forgotten employes. Through legislative confusion over a period of 15 years this branch of the service is still without leave in any form, according to James Alfred Brown, president of Lodge No. 105, American Federation of Government Employes.

A petition requesting that the shop work all day New Year's Eve and be given a full day next Monday has been signed by 243 of the 300 employes, Mr. Brown said last night. He pointed out that while the President has ordered a half holiday December 24 and 31, the shop's hours will be from 8 a. m. to 1 p. m. without any time off for lunch, which makes five hours' work or one hour more than the legal half workday. The petition will be presented to the officials today or tomorrow, it is said.

Having passed his boyhood on the plains of western Oklahoma, Jake Lyons (C), Library of Congress, is now utilizing his youthful hobby by giving occasional lessons in riding at the Riding and Hunt Club.

Successful First Year.

Today is the first anniversary of the organization of Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, American Federation of Government Employes. Starting with approximately 200 charter members the lodge now boasts a roster of nearly 1,000, the largest in the National organization.

Guiding this young group through a successful program has been LaRue E. Tanner (F), retiring president. Mr. Tanner headed the largest delegation to the New York convention which proposed many resolutions and amendments to the AFGE constitution of vital importance to all Government employes. He has also fought for better parking facilities in the District and particularly in the Government office area. The lodge has adopted a resolution of appreciation for Mr. Tanner's services.

Charles T. Hoffman, president; Ira Y. Bain (P.), first vice president; Eleanor V. Capers, second vice president; Henry C. Iler, third vice president; Bertha Neff, fourth vice president; G. F. Glossbrenner, fifth vice president; Irene Gannt, sixth vice president; Maude M. Anderson, secretary; Carl A. Baumann, treasurer; Thomas T. Houston, jr., sergeant at arms.

Delegates to the District Department: Mr. Tanner, Inez Justus, Elizabeth E. Jeffrey, R. A. Babb, A. Duncan, J. Harry Burne, Agnes Roche. Alternates: Sally Thorne, George Cohan, Marguerite Hughey (F), Lillian V. Keathley, Allen M. Laster, Helen Eisenhardt and Irene Nelson. Delegates to the Central Labor Union: Grace Benton, Lloyd O'Denhal, Elsie Wills, John Thomas, Mae M. Kinney and A. R. Hester.
